The space doesn’t allow me to mention everyone that has helped me. Nevertheless, I have to mention some. I would especially like to show my gratitude to Fritz Springmeier for his valuable collaboration and authorization to use several of his investigations mentioned in this book.

My sincere gratitude goes to Emilee Bargona, Laura Cowan and my friend Mike Edger for their help in bringing the English text of this book into existence.

I am also grateful to Dr. Anders Bruun Laursen for his contribution to this book.

My gratitude goes to Eberhard Krehl and my father Cebastiaan de Ruiter, both of whom stood strong beside me and provided me with information and comments about life in the concentration camps during and after the Second World War. Both survived several concentration camps!

My gratitude also goes to Rainer Rupp, former staff member of NATO in Brussels. He worked at NATO headquarters in Brussels for over ten years, where among other things; he had access to classified information.

I am especially thankful to the Dutch lawyer and advisor to President Slobodan Milošević, N.M.P. Steijnen for his contribution to this book. He arranged for me to gain access to the important transcripts of the Yugoslav Tribunal and unpublished Dutch press releases.

In particular I want to thank a handful of government officials who provided me with important documents. They must remain anonymous for obvious reasons.

Above all I thank God, and I praise His wonderful leadership in my life that I have been blessed to receive since early childhood.

May God reward everyone that has contributed to the success of this book, and with direction, encouragement, information and advice.
Introductory

It will not have escaped your attention that our society isn’t doing too well.

Everywhere you look things seem to be taking a turn for the worse. Violence in the Middle East, increasing ecological threats, mass cultural and intellectual dumbing-down and obscene government corruption are just some of the problems why people feel ill at ease, restless and unsafe.

The world has never known as many conflicts, refugees and displaced persons before. From refined plots new revolutions, wars, financial crises and political disasters develop. Governments run to save bankers with our tax money, pension funds are massively broke and health systems are in shambles.

Fear and depression form part of everyday life, and everywhere people feel discouraged and down because of social, spiritual, physical and emotional problems.

It seems like humanity is kept in a continuous state of agitation, instability and fear.

Our society has grown more harsh and ruthless every day. Children are becoming more aggressive and have no respect for adults. Famines (every day more than 50.000 children die), increasing criminal activities, terrorism, unemployment, climatic changes, corrupt world leaders and continuous wars, all contribute to at least one notion that many people agree on: Mankind needs another world.

Many ask themselves: Where is this world going? Where does this road lead us? How did we get into this chaos? What else awaits us?

Regrettably the near future threatens us with even darker clouds on its horizon. What exactly is going on?

There is no consequence without a cause. What is the reason for our fears? Of course there are a lot of self-centered and heartless people, but they are not the main offenders. The origins of the fear are deeper and clearly lie somewhere else.
In this book the author demonstrates how “International Monopolists”, operating under the guise of global politics, have been trying for decades to destroy the existing “World Order” in order to create a dictatorial “New World Order”; a global design for a One World Government, One World Dictator and its constituents.

Over the last 25 years there has been a significant increase of awareness amongst the population about the creating of a dictatorial New World Order. This is largely due to a result of the September 2001 attack on the twin towers in New York which led to the formation of hundreds of "freedom of information" groups.

Unfortunately one of the great tragedies of this dramatic rise of information about the New World Order is that there are prominent groups and individuals who are championing the need for the masses to wake up to the New World Order agenda, yet the beliefs of such groups and individuals clearly show they are also themselves deceived and doing more harm than good with their poisonous mixture of truth and error.

The New World Order agenda has been an operation that has been running for hundreds of years but due to misinformation and individuals having their own secret eureka understandings and interpretations it would seem that the secret plan of feeding surrogates of influence with “half truths“ and “misinformation“ has been a deliberate ploy to keep people in a state of deception despite people feeling they are more informed than the general public.

Truth Mixed with Error is the Deadliest Form of Deception

Unfortunately there are no correct variations of truth about the true nature of the New World Order agenda. There is only one truth which has been purposely covered up and re-branded to ensure that those who dare to seek and question are unsuspectingly led into a dangerous cocktail of truth mixed with error.

In a world of chaos and misinformation how can we truly know that what we hear about the New World Order is real? In a world where we are consciously trying to ensure we don't get hoodwinked or deceived by “half truths“ how can we really know for sure that there is an agenda which involves corporations and people of influence in a way that simply seems too astonishing to believe? How can we be sure that there is a secret dictatorial New World Order agenda?

The most powerful weapon any human can posse comes in the form of knowledge. In this case, it is the correct and true knowledge of the New World Order.

Understanding the right history and development of the New World Order is the most secure protection against the "half truths" and false dogmas now being propelled by those believing they are warning and revealing the truth on the one world government agenda.

You maybe be wondering what makes this book different from other books on the topic. Much of the detailed information in this book came from personal discussions between the author and insiders who have stepped out of the system of the New World Order. These sources will remain anonymous in order to protect them from possible actions of revenge and cruelties by those who favor the merciless oppression of humanity.

In addition, a number of prominent politicians, scientists and historians have contributed enormously to the publication of this book by offering professional and intellectually sound advice.

Several extraordinary investigators and archivists also have worked for years with the author to follow trails through piles of documents and connect facts.

Among others, this book was written for serious people who are concerned about the growing rise of disinformation and misinformation on the internet and the media. It is one of the most important books to separate light from darkness as far as the New World Order is concerned.

This book will firm up your understanding of the evolution of the one world government concept and its deceptive snare which spares none whether one is an unbeliever or believes that they believe the truth. It is based on primary source documentation and real tough to argue against quotes and revelations.

The first edition of this book was written over a decade ago, long before others started championing the need for the masses to wake up to the New World Order agenda. This first edition did not claim to be into futurism. However, a retrospective view of the events of the last twenty-five years shows that practically all topics mentioned in the book have come to fruition, often in an awesome manner.
It completely turns everything on its head. Once you read it, all of a sudden you will see the world around you in infrared. You soon see things which are simply not possible to view with the range of standard vision.

This present publication also serves to give us an idea of what's in store for the near future, so we can better prepare for what's coming our way.

The contents of this book are highly controversial and uncompromising. It describes a monster that we, in all our ignorance, have created together. Reading it may be shocking at first, but the shock will pass once you have finished reading it.
Chapter 3

Power, Machine and Man

Our current global system is based on the decimal system. This was never a deliberate choice on our part; it was simply imposed on us, through subterfuge and deceit, resulting in the destruction of cultures. Europe has become the epicenter of the coming global monetary system as a result of its concentration of gold. This means that the other aspects of the global system are also anchored in Europe.

In 1668, John Wilkins presented a Universal Measure to the Royal Society in London, which he himself had founded. Later, this would develop into the International System of Units. The Royal Society consisted of members of the English elite: Scientists, philosophers, bankers and politicians, with science being the most important. Men such as Isaac Newton had a logical, mechanical world view, based on mathematical principles and reason. The consequences of their impact continue to be experienced even today. The goal was to create a global standard for all aspects of reality, reducible to the decimal system. There are seven basic units:

1. Meter (m) - Length
2. Kilogram (kg) - Weight
3. Second (s) - Time
4. Ampere (A) - Electrical current
5. Kelvin (K) - Temperature
6. Mole (mol) - Amount of substance
7. Candela (cd) - Luminous Intensity (Light)

These seven units affect every aspect of our lives. Our ruling class have added an eighth aspect: The monetary system. By controlling number eight, they are able to influence and control the other seven aspects as well.
Setting these standards and creating the monetary system cleared the way for the global slavery that the Industrial Revolution actually caused. The essence of the Industrial Revolution reveals the link between the basic units of time and money. Ever since, the motto, “Time is money,” has been widely accepted.

For the common man, the consequences were enormous. People were put to work in companies, and paid an hourly wage. They found themselves part of a system in which they were reduced to mere robots. Their survival skills vanished within a few generations and they became utterly dependent on the system. Existing social structures came under tremendous pressure. Child labor was a normal phenomenon. As far as our leaders were concerned, it was, of course, a completely different situation. We were told this was just progress.

During the Industrial Revolution, production materials and capital goods had to be purchased. The possibility to invest was, of course, limited to our leaders and their confidants. Bankers, scientists and factory owners all worked together. This included mergers, acquisitions, and joint ventures. Should anyone from the people try to enter the competition, they could try the Stock Exchange, which was also controlled by the elite. Everything is under control.

England became a global empire and the Industrial Revolution spread like wildfire. And, of course, so did the monetary system. Our invisible elite built global networks at the start of the 20th century. They determined where to money would go. Whenever railway lines were constructed, people and goods could be transported very quickly. That’s why the United States economy grew so fast.

They had long since taken control of the planet, although nobody realized it yet. All decisions regarding investments were made on the basis of geostrategic considerations, the considerations on the basis of which their ancestors had determined national boundaries.

Current geopolitics was founded at the end of the 19th century. Geopolitics means: Borders and strategy, natural resources, the position of local tribes and peoples and infrastructure (both natural, such as rivers, and manmade, such as roads and railroads). The planet is treated like a chess game, for which only a few know the rules. Whenever a country decides not to play along, there are plenty of solutions that can be found to encourage participation. Economic blockades, war, coups, political assassinations are all forms of motivation. Secret services (MI5, MI6, Mossad, CIA and others) are all operated out of London to control local leaders.
The existence of banks made industrialization possible.

Industrialization made it further possible to churn out weapons on an unprecedented scale, which in turn made it possible to wage large-scale war. The old structure was destroyed and new structures took its place. People are trained to only know the part of the machinery which they operate making it impossible to fathom the ultimate goal of this revolution. The education system and media are used to make sure that things stay the way they are. It is essential that the public remain ignorant, becoming powerless subjects and dependent in every way. And there are ways to deal with those that prove to be clever enough to threaten to rise above their desired status.

In 1931, Bertrand Russell published the following in The Scientific Outlook:

“On those rare occasions when a boy or girl who has passed the age at which it is usual to determine social status shows such marked ability as to seem the intellectual equal of the rulers, a difficult situation will arise requiring serious consideration. If the youth is content to abandon his previous associates and to throw in his lot wholeheartedly with the rulers, he may, after suitable tests, be promoted, but if he shows any regrettable solidarity with his previous associates, the rulers will reluctantly conclude that there is nothing to be done with him except to send him to the lethal chamber before his ill-disciplined intelligence has had time to spread revolt.”

And the rest of the population?

“As for the manual workers, they will be discouraged from serious thought: They will be made as comfortable as possible...; As soon as working hours are over, amusements will be provided, of a sort calculated to cause wholesome mirth, and to prevent any thoughts of discontent which otherwise might cloud their happiness.”

This is reflected in our society: Carefully cultivated stupidity; an apathetic ignorant society; a Brave New World indeed.

Aldous Huxley wrote in his book Brave New World (1932):

“All the boys and girls will learn from an early age to be what is called ‘co-operative’, i.e. to do exactly what everybody else is doing. Initiative will be discouraged in these children, and insubordination, without being punished, will be scientifically trained out of them.”
People who grow up like this become teachers themselves, and things have come full circle.

Tests make it possible to set goals at a national level and people with this kind of education form the majority of the electorate of what is called democracy. In addition, they are the main commercial target. Due to the power of numbers and the choices made by the majority (elections, bestselling books, television ratings, and national statistics), the collective conscience can be adjusted to the desired level.

Independent and creative thinking is stopped while it is still in its early development, for example by creating rivalry through educational scores and through multiple choice questions. Any sense of self-worth and self-knowledge is hard to develop, as is self-confidence, the basis of all initiatives.

Dee Hock, founder of the VISA Credit Card Association (1968), the first major credit card institute – an alternative to cash money – said:

“We are at that very point in time when a 400-year-old age is dying and another is struggling to be born - a shifting of culture, science, society, and institutions enormously greater than the world has ever experienced.” 17

In this quote, Dee Hock refers to the period of building a global, centrally controlled monetary system and the end of the period of industrialization, two things that completely determine our lives.

The Club of Rome was founded in the Academia dei Lincei in Rome by Aurelio Peccei and Alexander King. The topic of recent Club of Rome meetings has been ”The Great Transition”:

“We are convinced that we are in the early stages of the formation of a new type of world society which will be different from today´s as was that of the world ushered in by the Industrial Revolution that preceded it.”

The run-up to the Great Transition, the Paradigm shift or Shift, started many years ago. It has been discussed in financial, political and New Age movements, as well as in management books and courses on, for example, ”Change management”.

This century-long process is now almost at an end. We are on the brink of the Great Transition that various leading political and media figures have been talking about for some time.
“We need a new paradigm of development in which the environment will be a priority. World civilization as we know it will soon end. We have very little time and we must act. If we can address the environmental problem, it will have to be done within a new system, a new paradigm. We have to change our mindset, the way humankind views the world.” - Mikhail Gorbachev

“The effective execution of Agenda 21 will require a profound reorientation of all human society, unlike anything the world has ever experienced a major shift in the priorities of both governments and individuals and an unprecedented redeployment of human and financial resources.” - UN Agenda 21

This is a process that can either take place harmoniously or in leaps and bounds, with a lot of social chaos. Ultimately that depends on us all. People who are only focused on their everyday existence may well be in for a very nasty surprise.

The end of the individual right to self-determinations

What exactly is the Great Transition? Is it the beginning of a new society and a new way of living? Or is it a technocratic dictatorship? In light of the history of the existing system, chances are it will be the latter.

The fact that we have a globally connected computer network became clear on January 17, 2009, when Augmented Reality was introduced for mobile phones across the world, to make it possible to add virtual images to realistic images.

Augmented Reality has to meet three requirements:
- The system combines reality and virtual elements;
- It is real-time interactive;
- It operates in three dimensions; it has Back-Tracking Support (real time tracking is required).

What about our privacy?

A similar concept has already been launched: Augmented Identity Management, in which software and facial recognition are combined. If you are in a certain location and you are looking for someone, your mobile phone can help you track them down.

It may be clear to everyone that current developments will have a huge impact in social (and criminal) terms. People will do crazy things, accidents will happen and government control will continue to grow.

The ultimate goal is to get everyone to communicate online, a complete integration of man and technology. Facebook and Twitter are merely the first stages. But already texting, emailing and twittering have become hugely important. Traditional means of correspondence have become increasingly rare and, as a result, our empathy continues to be reduced.

What will follow is a complete integration of man and technology. The point at which this process will have become irreversible is called the Great Transition. After the Transition, the individual right to self-determinations comes to an end.

We need to ask ourselves the following questions:

1. Who ultimately controls this centrally managed system?
2. Who benefits from its complete integration?
3. What kind of future awaits us?

Cash money will be abolished soon to make way for our total dependence on the global computer system. You can “only” access that system by using a chip in a plastic card (or in your body).

This chip is the ID that will give you access to all you need, such as food, transport, education, and healthcare. The time of individual self-determinations has come to an end.

The law is equal for everyone. Rich and poor become relative concepts. Everyone is totally dependent on the digital financial system. Any anomalous behavior will be recorded. Should the system consider an aspect of the behavior unacceptable: Access Denied!

The police won’t come looking for you; you will have to go to them to find out why you have been logged out of the system.

You have no choice: Your (electronic) car won’t start; you are banned from public transport; at the supermarket the doors won’t even open. So there you are, hungry and broke. It’s only now that you begin to realize that things have been this way for decades. But television has always told you things were going very well (progress!).

You could try and look for help from your relatives and friends - Anne Frank-style - if it weren’t for the fact that their actions are monitored by the same system that just shut you out. Any help they will provide you beyond taking you to the police helpdesk will have serious consequences for them.

What political movement or interest group will come to your defense? There’s nobody you can trust. The System has shifted the burden of proof: Why don’t you explain yourself? Nobody will stick their neck out for you; nobody is responsible.

The big question: If the System is controlled centrally, who pushes its buttons? Nobody knows!
Chapter 5

A Leap of Faith

Humans and their mutual communication occupy a central position in the “Great Transition“ process.

The digital number system allowed us to objectify things and make them transparent to everyone. This in turn allowed people to orient themselves and strive for balance. This universal communication tool is soon coming to an end.

How are we dealing with the monetary system right now?

Stanley Kubrick's movie 2001 – A Space Odyssey, contains a scene (Scene 4) of a primate community in a desert. One of inhabitants realizes that a bone that has been left over after a meal can also be used as a tool.

How this tool is used can be seen in the next scene (Scene 5), where the bone is used to kill a fellow primate during an argument.

The evolution from Scene 5 to Scene 6 (from club to spaceship) suggests that primates have started using their brains and have made progress (a Transition).

The primates wielding the club are there to represent us. The club represents the monetary system, which at the moment is used for much the same purpose: A tool to oppress and kill.

To achieve the goal - a smooth and balanced transition - we are encouraged to face our differences (culture, race, and socio-economic status) and focus on similarities rather than the differences.

We live in an era where information is freely available over the Internet. Seek and ye shall find. Money can be instantly available at any time via computers and mobile telephones. One example is the popular micro-credit system in the Third World, the prominent movement on the periphery of the global monetary system. The way the monetary system currently functions: One half of the world´s population has everything, while the other half has virtually nothing.
In most Western countries, power emerges when people fail to face their responsibilities. This causes a vacuum in the public domain, which is filled by the cleverest and most brazen, or simply by electronic control.

Because money, rather than the ability to shoulder responsibilities, is always the primary motivation, mergers and automation lead to ever-increasing size. This focus on size results in a polarization of the haves and have-nots, cultivating a society of greed. Adding to this mix are the spin doctors, media management and grandstanding at meetings, conventions, workshops, and seminars. During mega-stockholder meetings, ego’s are literally inflated until they are about the burst:

“My yacht and glass business tower are bigger than yours!”

We have a society of talkers and doers. What do talkers do? First of all, they talk about doers and what they should do and how they should do it. Then things go wrong and they talk about that. Then more things go wrong and they talk about that. Everything becomes vague and expensive. Here, too, a culture of greed emerges. Lack of knowledge is obfuscated by expensive consultants, coaches and managers creating jobs, perks and deceit.

A wasteful culture of talking and lies has emerged in the last years. Those who do the actual work must be humble and shut up (and pay their rent, taxes, and premiums!).

Of course, mergers rule, with money floating around in large quantities, while critical employees who fail to tow the official line are fired with ever-greater ease. It is also a time when past administrations can be cleaned up to update the past. The happy message of a brighter future is then sold to the people by television commercials and tons of shiny paper explaining how this progress is desirable and good. How high the costs really are and who will pay for it all are never mention with any clarity.

Even today, architects may build castles in the air, but they need actual craftsmen to realize them. Our economy is a child with a huge (talking) head. Another Tower of Babel: In the Bible, the confusion and subsequent downfall were brought about by the Hand of God; in today’s society, all it takes is a power failure.

The Netherlands as an example
In the last thirty years, a megalomaniac and materialist hierarchy has emerged that has allowed a privileged class of individuals to get rich by confiscating institutions (public housing, healthcare, public transport). The most expensive lawyers are hired to justify their actions, for they themselves cannot.

And the rest of population bows to the inevitable. A large bag of cash equals legitimacy. It is not questioned where the money came from; hoping some of it will come our way. All this happens at the expense of the community and reinforces the processes described in this book. Look at public healthcare and housing: A few decades ago, these were not expected to make a profit.

Now they are all mega-institutions with boards of directors, and the people have lost their influence. Local management does not oppose this culture of greed and has gradually been corrupted, as have the independent professionals. What matters most now is the bottom line, to everyone but the general public, how have to pay more and more for less and less. Even where one lives is determined by the mega-institutions: Because it is so easy and convenient to look for housing via the Internet, unaware of the information that is being gathered. However, that information is also used to determine ones position on waiting lists. What criteria are being used is kept hidden.

This makes it possible to select specific individuals and assign them to specific neighborhoods. For example, neighborhoods that will be demolished in 10 years' time because land prices have risen! For such areas people who are considered anti-social are given a higher priority so they can pave the way for the future demolition.

And nobody speaks out against it.

Cities like Amsterdam have introduced the term 'urban nomad', and there are even businesses who offer these squatters a place to live. They are then sent from problem neighborhood to problem neighborhood, thereby increasing the number of people without any rights. Needless to say, the idea of public housing on expensive land is anathema. It doesn’t take much to tear it all down and build villas for the well-to-do. A Darwinian kind of Free Market divides mankind into winners and losers. One can guess what will eventually happen to the losers. This power is based on the illusion of money, which has no intrinsic value. This process has placed people in positions that focus exclusively on material gain, at the expense of carrying responsibility. Because they wouldn't know how to take on responsibility, accidents happen and scandals occur.
Driven by fear and lack of trust, people hoard their money. It has become a reservoir, and as stagnant water it begins to stink.

Investing has become extremely dangerous. The phenomenon called Flash Crash is well-known: On May 6, 2010, without any apparent cause, the Dow Jones Index tumbled 998.5 points and in the space of five minutes: 1000 billion dollars simply evaporated.

After a 5 month investigation (!), the SEC and CFTC stated that:

“High-speed trade with high-speed computers had proved a critical driver behind the stock exchange collapse. An automated program issued the order to buy $ 4.1 billion dollars, and because it kept repeating the order, it accelerated the process.”

People were warned about this, but no appropriate measures were taken. 18

This totally passes any understanding:

Financial wizards performing their tricks and playing games with the pensions of the people.

Seduced by Internet and television, people become interested in investing in faraway countries. They are promised high yields, and whether or not the promise is realistic or not becomes clear only after the money has gone.

How stupid can we get? Why don't we think twice about handing over millions to the stock exchange?

A quote from a member of the stock market governing body in the Financieel Dagblad of February 25, 2010:

“When I stop talking to our investors, banks and accountants, they go into a panic and everything collapses. If I tell them even a little bit of the actual truth, the same happens. So all I can do is telling them lies and nonsense.” 19

These are the people who are heading many companies and institutions in public healthcare and housing, and the commercial banks: Our self-appointed leaders. These gentlemen bribe notaries, lawyers, judges, and municipalities; literally anyone and anything that can help them in their quest to meet their targets.

Their companies behave in exactly the same way, which explains all the environmental scandals and the destruction of the Third World. People, who rebel leave, or are forced to leave.
The fool who actually has the courage to tell the truth, the whistle blower, is stripped and ridiculed in front of the nation, making sure that everyone else remains quiet.

Is this the true expression of the freedom of speech? Whatever you do, make sure you can afford an expensive lawyer, because they have become indispensable in our legal state.

In 2010 a documentary film about the financial crisis of 2007–2010 called Inside Job by Charles Ferguson was released. This movie reveals how the financial system does business. Those who know little about these matters would do well to watch this documentary. It shows the lack of responsibility with which men in the financial sector conduct themselves.

In short, nearly everything in the Netherlands has been sold, and the people have little or no influence. Do they choose civil rights? No, they choose the BMW and flat screen television: Alice in Wonderland.

Just about everything has been offered to the Golden Calf, and in a country as flat as the Netherlands, there is no mountain for Moses to come down from to set things right.
Chapter 6

Do we still have a free will?

Our privacy is becoming less and less important to us: Reality TV, webcams and Augmented Reality. Even the government is less and less inclined to stay out of our private lives. We don’t have anything to hide, do we? Who cares; just don’t give us a headache!

Like fools, we entrust all our private information to the system and totally depend on it for our monetary and other needs. We don’t notice it, because we are busy making just enough money to get by, stuck in traffic, football matches, watching television and our cell phones. Our remote control makes us feel like gods.

We simply can’t be bothered to use our brains and maintain our skills.

There’s an electronic device for everything. We go from “active“ to “passive“; from “independent“ to “fully dependent“; from “awareness“ to “ignorance“; from “social cohesion“ to so-called “independence“ and “social fragmentation“. The System takes care of everything and is responsible for everything. From this instant, we depend on the System and no longer on each other.

As mentioned before, the coming Transition will mean the end of the individual right to self-determinations. We are no longer deemed fit to make our own decisions and take responsibility. We have come close to the point where we have started to believe this ourselves as fact and accept this Transition.

We look increasingly like a group of tourists that meekly follows their guide into unknown territory. A skilful guide who leads his ‘friends’ by the hand for souvenirs and attractions. He gets a commission and sees to it that pockets are emptied. At the end of the tour, we are bankrupt but happy.

What else could we expect from people who, for the last fifty years, have been raised by the political system, the mainstream media and educational system rather than by their parents?
Ever since the introduction of the generation gap in the 1960s (together with drugs, pop music, mass media and its youth culture) people no longer turn to their social environment when they face a moral dilemma.

We used to focus on each other. Our role models were our parents, and people in our social environment. Now our behavior is dictated by the media. Hollywood, MTV, YouTube and Entertainment give us role models and lifestyles that we normally would never be exposed to. The consequences: Generation gap and alienation!

Our children get emotionally isolated at a very tender age. They feel that nobody understands them. To attract attention, they start doing the craziest things. What things? They can see that on television, as long as they get to see themselves on YouTube or in the newspapers.

When they are at home, young people are busy with their video games, computers and mobile phones. But when you play with gadgets rather than other people from a tender age, it influences your sense of compassion, conscience and responsibility.

Parents aren’t allowed to share their experience and insights, they are not cool, they are old and a social obstacle. They’re too slow to understand computers and technological gadgets.

In the past, before the arrival of the mobile phone, parents knew when their kids used the telephone. There was a television in people’s homes and parents were able to monitor their kids’ behavior. Nowadays, smartphones and internet portals, such as Facebook, YouTube and Twitter, have switched the fragmentation process into a higher gear. Parents have no idea what kind of networks their children are involved in and where they end up. They feel powerless and become indifferent.

In these hectic times of artificial conflict, hypes and useless violence, there is only one way out: Politically correct behavior and opinions. Be good, so you as a parent, teacher or citizen can’t be blamed.

Initially, the generation gap involved youngsters between the ages of 18 and 21. Nowadays, this has been lowered to 10 to 14.

Kids and their parents have totally grown apart. Children, defenseless and innocent as they are, are handed over to be indoctrinated by the media and state-controlled education.
And what do the parents think? Well, the ‘good old times’ have past; they lose their self-confidence and turn to the same state of mind.

A few more generations and the idea of people raising their own kids will have become a thing of the past.

We have become a race of programmed creatures willing to believe and do whatever the political system, mass media and schools tell us to do. By these three institutes, not only will individuals be controlled and influenced, but changes in all existing relations in politics, society, morality and family life can be easily executed. There is no escape!

It is not by accident that education is taking out of the hands of parents as soon as possible. The information of individual opinion and personal growth is redirected from the home to schools and universities.20

Reality

“A truth's initial commotion is directly proportional to how deeply the lie was believed. When a well-packaged web of lies has been sold gradually to the masses over generations, the truth will seem utterly preposterous and its speaker, a raving lunatic.” - Dresden James

We all lie from time to time. We start lying at an early age. And we are shocked when our children lie to us. These lies are not complicated and easy to see through. We deal with them instantly and don’t give them too much thought. “It will pass,” we tell ourselves.

Complicated lies are much difficult to comprehend, especially when they become part of our news or history. To get to the bottom of these lies, you need to have a great deal of insight and spend a lot of time. Time is something we don’t have. Our daily lives are filled with our jobs, expenses, traffic jams, football, television and Cell phone.

Our ”Invisible Superiors” are perfectly aware of this and use it to their advantage. It allows them to push through an agenda without anyone noticing. Politicians and journalists are unlikely to tell us more than they want, or be allowed to let us know.

In a situation like the one described above, it is easy to sell a lie. If you take the time to take a good look and analyze what you see, you may be in for a big surprise.

Here is one such example:
These aerial photographs were taken during the 1962 Cuban missile crises. They were taken from a U2 spy plane in the earth’s stratosphere (the layer that is closest to space).

Richard Helms occupied a high position at the OSS, the CIA’s predecessor. Before becoming Director of the CIA, he always operated in the highest echelons of the secret service. In 1973, he left the CIA to become the US ambassador in Iran, a position he occupied until 1977. In 2003, Helms published his memoirs.21

On page 213 of his memoirs, Helms has the following to say about these aerial photographs:

“The pilot would be some 70 000 feet - roughly 14 miles - above his target on October 14. At that altitude, the remarkable high definition film permitted resolution to some 30 inches....”

Barry Goldwater was a US Senator from 1953 until 1979, and also the Republican presidential candidate in 1964. In 1979, he published his memoirs, With no Apologies. He has this to say about the above aerial photographs:

“The pictures were vastly superior to any of our former aerial photographs - definitions so clear it was possible to read the headlines of a newspaper photographed from an altitude of 8 miles.” 22

Now take a look and compare the following satellite pictures.
These images were shown during a presentation by Secretary of Defense, Powell at the UN Security Council on February 5, 2003. Notice that the dates on which the two sets of pictures were taken are no less than 41 years apart!

With regard to these photographs, of course we are being treated like fools. Why is the quality of these photographs so poor? Has the United States government forgotten that, 40 years ago, people had the technology to take extremely sharp pictures from the stratosphere? Conclusion: The pictures shown by Powell are a farce; a fabrication to start a war. If what was at stake in both of these cases wasn’t a worldwide crisis, it would be funny!

However, in 2003, the photographs were enough to persuade our politicians that we needed to unleash the war on Iraq and accept any and all military and collateral casualties. How many soldiers died as a result of that fateful decision? And how many more are going to die? Nobody asks these kinds of questions.

Here is another striking example:

The accidental bombing of the Chinese embassy in Belgrade on May 7, 1999 is another example. A mistake had been made in determining the occupants of the building that had been bombed.

On behalf of General Walter, NATO spokesmen Jertz had explained the reason for this mistake:

“The secret service had used outdated maps!”

In other words, 40 years after the highly advanced aerial photographs had been made; NATO still used outdated maps to determine where it will bomb.

One more example:
On the next page you will find a picture of the subterranean Al Qaeda complex in Tora Bora in Afghanistan provided by the United States government.

The Pentagon probably thought that nobody would make the effort to validate this. Some reporters, however, actually did go and check this out, finding nothing!

No official attempt has been made to refute these findings. One would expect something more, considering the importance of persuading doubters of the need to wage war against al-Qaeda and other terrorists.

The example discussed above makes it clear how easy it is play everyone for a fool. And these are photographs that everyone can access and see with their own eyes. When we are talking about more abstract matters like politics and banking, things become much easier still.

In the current multimedia society, any story can be sold to the public. Who is going to prove that a story isn’t true?
Lying is normal to our leaders and their subordinates. Moral considerations never play a role. To them, lying is like eating, drinking and riding a bicycle. They do it every day, automatically and without thinking.

Our leaders know that, if the truth ever were to get out, their reign would come to an abrupt end.

In the current age of instant communication, the people in authority employ special consultants known as spin doctors: People who are specifically trained to sell the lies they impose on us. War in Syria or war in Ukraine? Consider it sold.

Year in, year out, our leaders manage to get away with their lies, because we have been given an interpretation of reality by history and the media that serves their purpose. It is a version of reality that subtly wrapped in shades of grey (truth and lies have become entangled).

As a rule, simple lies are only used when there are no other options, for instance in front of an official hearing, when they use answers like:

- I have no recollection;
- That’s not how I intended it;
- I did not have the right information.

When there is no other option but to admit, they simply apologize and say something like: We mustn’t dwell on the past. We need to look ahead, at the future... after which it is business as usual.

Concepts and myths are the preferred tools of deception. They can last for generations. You can make them as complicated as you like. By shifting certain accents, you can influence the orientation of your target audience. Later, you can start peddling them via education, the media and local politicians (who often know as little as we do).

The most important characteristic of concepts and myths is that they help create a world view. They can be used to create frameworks that limit our thinking and thus determine our lives without us being aware of it. A clear example of the way the highest ranks thinks is a remark by an anonymous advisor of President Bush, who said the following to Ron Suskind of the New York Times:

“The advisor said that guys like me were ‘in what we call the reality-based community’, which he defined as people who ‘believe that solutions emerge from your judicious study of discernible reality’. That’s not the way the world really works anymore. We’re an empire now, and when we act, we create our own reality. And while you’re studying that reality - judiciously, as you will - we’ll act again, creating other new realities, which you can study too, and that’s how things will sort out. We’re history’s actors, and you, all of you, will be left to just study what we do.”

There you have it all, in one simple paragraph. In other words, we are always chasing the facts; facts that are not of our making, but that do determine our lives. They act; we study and follow.

What could we do to change this? To begin with, we need to learn to be critical about the way we think. From our first day in school, we have learned to passively accept the information presented to us. We accept what we are told by ours teacher (who themselves have learned to accept what is presented to them in much the same way), who automatically clothe the information in authority.

Are you brave enough to ask a question? You’d better not, that will only slow things down. Children who ask too many questions are considered a nuisance. Anyone who is conditioned in this way to accept the way the world is presented to them, passively and without criticism, cannot help but lose the capacity for independent thought. Asking a question indicates that your knowledge in a certain area is limited, which presents teachers with an opportunity to reinforce the world view they are presenting. Ultimately, we stop asking questions and play our role in the game, like the good girls and boys we are.

And then, after you get home from school, it’s television time, where the same process continues. Television influences the way young people behave. It affects the way they dress, act, talk and think. Parents have no chance against its sheer force. If you decide to switch it off, the same information will reach them from their peers in the playground.

Let us be honest about this: Isn’t this the way we have all been molded? Whenever an opposing opinion is voiced, it gives us a headache; we simply do not have the time, especially not if the opinion challenges our worldview.

Information is presented to us in an unequivocal way, in ready-made chunks. Any opposing views need to be examined, and that’s something we just aren’t good at. It’s not what we have been taught in school or by the media. When we try to analyze it, it becomes so complicated that it’s hard for us to focus, so we just let it be. When someone tries to tell us we are perhaps being manipulated, we become angry and don’t want to admit it:

“You think you know it all, don’t you?”

They are dismissed as troublesome cranks and we go back to our normal lives.

The biggest mistake we make is that we let things happen; we don’t feel responsible.

Here is an example:

In the past, we lived in communities and tribes. Our economy was based primarily on bartering and we looked after each other.

- Then a universal bartering tool was introduced.
- Weights and measurements followed.
- Gold and silver coins were introduced.
- Next, paper money was introduced; the gold was stored in banks that issued paper money.
- Then, digital money was introduced, in addition to paper money (with gold being used as a standard).

On August 17, 1971, the then American president abandoned the gold standard, clearing the way for a deluge of paper money. The potential amount of digital money became virtually unlimited.

Nowadays, 90% of all the money in the world is stored on computers. We have become completely dependent on the people who control those computers and financial flows. Who determines which individual or people will receive digital money?

Don’t forget that you and your computer have to be connected and logged in to a server. Once the power goes out, digital money will no longer be accessible. End of story.

This is not a spontaneous process. Who controls it? And why is it controlled? We could have seen this coming. But we did nothing. We allowed it to happen.

The Silent Holocaust
Do you care about your children’s health and your own?

In 2006 over two thousand leukemia clusters in English and French schools that had mobile microwave transmitters in the playground were found. 27

From scientific research carried out on schoolchildren we learn following:

“Microwaves, cell phones, WiFi, blue tooth, microwave transmitter inside cars, smart meters, and so on, can cause genetic damage and leukemia. They also affect the ovarian follicles and can affect the ovarian eggs. If the ovarian eggs of young schoolgirls are damages (we’re not going to know this for another 15 years) these are irreparable. They can never ever be repaired.” 28

Barry Trower, retired British military intelligence scientist, a first degree physicist and specialist in microwaves, does not mince words about Wi-Fi or the way school personnel are handling this:

“Wi Fi should be wiped out of schools at a stroke today to protect all the children. Schools are using " intentional ignorance " . They will only look at and believe the research they want to. They will not acknowledge most of the real research and most of the risks. There is such a pressure and hype to get this technology.”

A child, who uses an ordinary cell phone for only two minutes, will have his natural brain waves disrupted for two hours afterwards. Disrupting the natural brain waves is called entrainment. Any personality change, depending which part of the brain is changed, any personality change can occur, and that’s just with two minutes. So if you have children in your car or you are using WiFi or blue tooth near your brain, you are effectively entraining your brain.

If you are using your blue tooth for several minutes, your brain will be entrained for many hours. The brain of people who use a mobile phone and blue tooth on and off through the day, will not actually function properly and can experience all sorts of neurological funny feelings.

Some countries actually ban children from using cell phones. Afraid for future claims, some governments reserved millions of dollars to free schools from WiFi. There for ignorance is no longer an excuse for irresponsibility. The truth is out there. If people don’t awaken to it now the consequences are going to be truly catastrophic.
So, what are we going to do? Will we look back in fifty years and marvel at how Wi-Fi and cell phones were responsible for the biggest health crisis in human history?

We are risking the future generations of all the children in the world from genetic damage! We could have seen this coming..... Of course looking the other way is much easier...

Most of the population is living in ignorance. They do not have any idea as to what is happening in today's world. Like sheep they simply do what they are told and accept what they see and hear.

We stopped thinking a long time ago; we let other people do the thinking. Nor do we do anything anymore, we let others do that for us: lawyers, politicians, intermediaries, consultants and of course “coaches” and “managers”.
Chapter 8

Who controls the System and who pushes its buttons?

Many people ask who the global elite are. Who actually are the leading figures behind the planned New World Order and to which families are they related? This chapter is intended to provide you with some basic knowledge you need to know about those who control the System and who push its buttons.

For researchers in the field of world conspiracy, it’s a precarious job to sort this out. The powerful families have done namely everything they could to cover up their tracks.

Berry Smith wrote in his book Final Notice:

“There are thirteen families heading up the World Government plan. These families are portrayed as the thirteen layers of blocks found on the strange seal on the reverse side of the U.S. one dollar bill.”

The Rockefellers are one of the ruling families. David Rockefeller stated in his biography Memoirs:

“Some even believe we are part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and myself as ‘internationalists’ conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure - one world. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it.”

Other families are: Rothschild, Warburg, DuPont, Russell, Onassis, Collins, Morgan, Kennedy, Hapsburg, Van Duyn, Li and Astor.

The following families are closely interwoven with these leading families: Vanderbilt, Bauer, Whitney, Duke, Oppenheim, Grey, Sinclair, Schiff, Solvay, Oppenheimer, Sassoon, Wheeler, Todd, Clinton, Taft, Goldschmidt, Wallenberg, Guggenheim, Bush and many others.
For a long time both the power and money in the world has belonged to these families.

Of course not everyone going by one of these names is related to such a powerful family. Many are unaware of what’s really going on in the world. Within the framework of this book, it is important to have a closer look at some of these ruling families.

The Rothschild family

History proves that the Rothschilds and associates constitute the very definition of what we call the “global elite“.

Mayer Amschel Rothschild once said:

“Permit me to issue and control the money of a nation and I care not who writes its laws.”

The Rothschilds have been closely involved with the global elite since the inception of this group. The oldest known Rothschild went by the name of Uri Feibesch who lived in the early sixteenth century. His great great great grandson was Moses Bauer, who lived in the early eighteenth century. A well-known ancestor of this banking family was Mayer Amschel Bauer, an asset manager in Frankfurt am Main. Among other things he represented the money and assets of sovereign Wilhelm von Hessen. He became very rich, because he attended to the conveyance of the capital that belonged to this sovereign during the French Revolution.

Mayer Amschel Bauer chose, without exception, women from very influential families that belonged to the global elite, for his sons. In the same way, his daughters married prominent bankers who also belonged to the global elite. All these families acted in the same way as the royal families: they married amongst themselves. Bauer’s sons were known as the “five Frankfurter”: they became bankers of five European countries.

The private intelligence service, which was established by the first Rothschilds, saw to it that they could lay the foundations for their immense wealth. James Rothschild, founder of the French branch of this family, made the Parisian house the most powerful bank in Europe, because he was of service to the French rulers from Ludwig XVIII to Napoleon III.
The Rothschilds became coalition bankers. The secret of their success was that they were able to execute fictitious money transactions in times when money transport involved great risks.

Following their conquest of Europe, the Rothschilds had cast their covetous eyes on the United States of America.

Rothschilds owned companies, the Dutch West India Company (WIC) and The Royal African took an auspicious part of transporting slaves from Africa across the Atlantic, in the most inhumane and horrible conditions. About 600,000 slaves were imported into North America.

The financial house of Barings bankrolled the African slave trades. Officially there has been a century-long competition of the Barings and the Rothschilds. But official information is often used to lead the crowd astray. The Rothschilds always controlled Barings, looking on the outside in.

When we look back on all wars from the last three centuries, we’ll notice that they all ended in a certain balance of power. Every time a war broke out, a new foundation of power for the Rothschild house was laid. This way the Rothschilds could simply manipulate the wars by controlling the flows of money. If we scrutinize every country’s national debt throughout the course of history, we will see exactly where and when a certain country was manipulated by the Rothschilds.

The American poet Ezra Pound translated it as follows:

“Until you know who lent what to whom, you don’t know a thing about politics, you don’t know anything about history, and you don’t know a thing about international fights.”

Gudula Rothschild, Widow of Mayer Amschel Rothschild once said:

“There will be no wars if my sons do not want it!”

Emperor Franz-Josef II gave the Rothschilds the rank of baron. The royal families and principalities couldn’t do anything without the Rothschilds. In 1885 the Rothschilds were raised to the peerage by the Austrian emperor and the Queen of England. Already at that time the fate of the nations was in the hands of the Rothschilds.
Since 1900, and most likely earlier than that, the Rothschilds have determined where and when in Europe or elsewhere in the world, an exceptional economic development occurs. The exclusive control over the flows of money in the world by the Rothschilds is one of the best kept secrets of the modern world history.

Heinrich Heine, a great philosopher and poet, once said:

“Money is the god of our time, and Rothschild is his prophet.”

The Siegener Zeitung of March 1, 1994, proposed to portray Rothschild and his sons on the first European bank notes. They were assumed to be a true European family and to represent values, on which also a united Europe should be built.

Presently the Rothschilds control, among other things; Shell, BP, Deutsche Bank, Barclays, ABN Amro, Fortis, Unilever, IBM, World Bank Group and International Monetary Fund, ING, Federal Reserve, Bank of England, Arrow Fund Curacao, J.P Morgan and many other banks and influential organizations.

The Rockefeller family

It’s a proven fact that the Rothschilds divided their wealth, pro forma, as much as possible among many other persons and establishments. They did this on one hand to hide the real extent of their wealth and on the other to conceal their political manipulations of the outside world. For this purpose they used companies, businessmen, bank managers and other personalities to act as intermediaries.

The participation of the Rothschild dynasty in various competitive companies misleads even experts. A perfect example of this is when Henry Coston elaborately described the all out struggle between American Standard Oil (of the Rockefeller family) and British Royal Dutch-Shell for market leadership in 1920s France. The struggle for control lasted into the late Fifties. However, he essentially overlooked one important detail; that both oil giants belonged to the Rothschilds! Coston failed to understand that this sham of a fight served only one purpose: to bring in enormous profits while covering up the real power behind it.

The rise of the Rockefeller family was made possible from two angles by the Rothschilds. One was by the large subsidies placed on transports of Rockefeller oil. The documents of the American trade register prove that the Rothschilds, since 1896, have owned ninety-six percent of the American railways. This made it possible to transport oil on rail. When John D. Rockefeller wanted to expand, he received the financial support he needed to do so from the Rothschilds through their National City Bank of Cleveland. In exchange, the Rockefellers had to transport their oil via the Rothschilds railways. An illegal agreement saw to it that the Rockefellers received a bonus for the amount of oil they transported by train. Because of this agreement nobody could compete with the Rothschilds in transporting Rockefeller oil. This was all arranged by Jacob Schiff, of the company Kuhn & Loeb, the brain behind the foundation of the Rockefeller imperium.

Under the authority of the Rothschilds, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. continue to manage the Rockefeller capital, which is valued at over 400 billion dollars. In 1950 the New York Times reported L.L. Strauss, a partner with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., as the financial adviser to the Rockefeller estate. Because of this, every investment had to be approved and signed by a partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. According to the periodical Fortune in 1985, the wealth of the Rockefellers was spread amongst more than 200 companies. These companies include six of the largest industrial companies in America, six of the largest banks, five of the largest insurance companies and three of the largest companies from different branches (electricity, water, infrastructure, fruits, oil, gold, and others). Not including the remaining 180 other companies, the total assets of these twenty giants amount to 460 billion dollars.

The Rockefeller Foundation was established in 1913 to maintain the control of the family’s oil empire. Today this foundation is the most important shareholder of Exxon with 4.3 million shares. Additionally, the foundation has two million shares in Standard Oil of California and 300.000 shares in Mobil Oil. Other smaller foundations belonging to the Rockefellers have three million shares in Exxon, and 400.000 shares in Standard Oil of Ohio. The total asset of this group of Rockefeller companies, amount to more than fifty billion dollars. 39

For a researcher who concentrates on the Rockefeller family, it won’t be difficult to prove that this immensely rich family has played an important role in the American politics of the twentieth century. The drift and decisions of American politics lead directly back to the Rockefeller family.

The best-known member of the Rockefeller family was the influential industrialist, banker John Davidson Rockefeller. He asserted himself as the richest man of his time. Before going into oil transport, he was a wholesaler of narcotic drugs. With an unbridled energy, he set up the Standard Oil Trust, which now possesses ninety percent of the oil refineries in the United States.

John Davidson Rockefeller also bought the Pocantico Hills territory in New York, which is the domicile of over a 100 families with the name Rockefeller.

David Rockefeller, an absolute genius in the field of finances, has been managing Chase Manhattan Bank, the most important bank in the world, since 1945. The power of this bank is great enough to bring about or destroy governments, to start or end wars, and ruin companies or let them flourish worldwide, ultimately exerting great influence on the entire human race.

The Rockefeller Foundation is known as a charitable organization that operates out of New York City. Officially it was established to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world. In reality the Rockefeller Foundation is a decisive actor on the international stage. The many activities of the Rockefeller Foundation are not isolated items, each independent of the others. They all fall into a worldwide organization in the interests of the New World Order.

Among the many international agencies is David Rockefeller’s private intelligence service, better known as “Interpol“. According to the U.S. Department of Justice 1988 manual, Interpol conducts inter-governmental activities, but is not based on an international treaty, convention, or similar legal documents. It was founded upon a constitution drawn up and written by a group of police officers who did not submit it for diplomatic signatures, nor have they ever submitted it for ratification by governments.”

Interpol is an illegal entity operating within the borders of the United States, without the sanction and approval of the people in flagrant violation of the Constitution of the United States and the constitutions of the fifty states. Interpol is a private agency with a communications network stretching around the globe. In spite of the fact that “Interpol“ is a private organization, it was granted “observer status” by the United Nations in 1975, a stature that enables it to sit at meetings and vote on resolutions, even though it is not a member country and has no governmental status. Since “Interpol“ is not a state, the United Nations are violating their own charter.

Also the American FBI and CIA have always been an instrument of the global elite because the Rockefellers were directly involved in the founding of both organizations. This family also has the power of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR).

John Pierpont Morgan

Since the American Revolution the Rothschilds have shrunk from the limelight and operate through and behind a wide variety of fronts.

Among others they financed the activities of Edward Harriman (Railroads) and Cornelius Vanderbilt, one of the most successful businessmen in American history, built steamship lines and railroads. He helped build the nation transportation system. Together with Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller they were the principal men who build the United States. All were funded by the Rothschilds.

The Rothschilds also operate anonymously behind the facade of the House of Morgan.

John Piermont Morgan is known as one of the most powerful bankers of his era. Yet, he was nothing more than Rothschild’s main agent in the United States, with the House of Rothschild supporting him behind the scenes.

Among others, J.P. Morgan was Rothschild's agents in the United States for slave trade. They kept this in wraps, while in Europe Nathan Mayer Rothschild was pretending to be messiahs for the slaves.

The House of Morgan can trace all their roots to the merchant banking firm “George Peabody and Company“ that was founded in 1835.

George Peabody (1795 – 1869) was an American entrepreneur.

He began business in Georgetown, D.C. in 1814 dealing in wholesale dry goods, and in operating the Georgetown Slave Market. 44

In 1827 Peabody travelled to the United Kingdom to meet with Nathan Mayer Rothschild, who explained to him that a considerable anti-Rothschild movement had developed in the United States which focused on the banking activities of the Rothschild family. 45 The Rothschilds were looking for an American representative who was not known as a Rothschild agent. After talks, Peabody agreed to become their secretive agent. 46
George Peabody took J.P. Morgan's father, Junius Spencer Morgan (1813-1890) into partnership in 1854. When in 1864 Peabody retired from active business, Junius Morgan assumed total control over the firm. Morgan agreed to continue the sub rosa relationship with the Rothschilds.

Soon the firm’s activities expanded by shipping large quantities of railroad iron to the United States. It was Peabody iron which was the foundation for much of American railroad tracks from 1860 to 1890.

Morgan’s financial octopus wrapped its tentacles quickly around the globe. By 1890 the House of Morgan was financing Russian railroads, floating Brazilian provincial government bonds and funding Argentine public works projects.

Junius Morgan died in 1890 in a carriage accident on the French Riviera. His son John Pierpont Morgan became the head of the House of Morgan.

A recession in 1893 enhanced Morgan’s power. That year Morgan saved the US government from a bank panic, forming a syndicate to prop up government reserves with a shipment of $62 million worth of Rothschild gold.

J.P. Morgan did not only buy Andrew Carnegie’s steel company (US Steel), officially he also owned most railroads in the United States, General Electric, American Telephone & Telegraph and other industrial giants.

J.P. Morgan became part of the power structure in many countries. Among others, he was appointed in 1903 as treasurer (fiscal agent) for the newly independent Republic of Panama.

The Rothschilds and the Panama Canal

The Rothschilds had long favored the idea of a canal somewhere in Central America. They knew that a canal bridging the Atlantic and Pacific oceans was of their interest. A canal across Panama would save incalculable miles and man-hours. It would also make them even richer and powerful, just as the Suez had done for them.
After a French attempt for a Panamanian canal collapsed in 1889, US Congress chartered the Maritime Canal Company, headed by J.P. Morgan to build a canal in either Nicaragua or Panama.

Colombia refused to sell Panama to the United States. Therefore the Nicaragua route was chosen. This country was offering the land for free. In 1893, a stock panic in America caused the Maritime Canal Company to loose all funding, and excavation stopped.\(^{52}\)

Rothschild eyes once again looked at Panama. In 1900, the shares of the bankrupt French Panama Canal Company, which owned the right to build the Panama Canal, were purchased by an American financial syndicate, headed by the Rothschilds and J.P. Morgan. They invested about $3.5 million and gained control of the company.

The U.S. government was forced by Morgan to pay $40 million, as part of the Panama settlement, to the owners of the French Panama Canal Company.

In 1903, Roosevelt engineered a phony revolution in Columbia, creating the new state of Panama and handing the Canal Zone to the United States. Panama declared its independence from Colombia, and America recognized their declaration, else Colombia would have re-conquered the area, endangering American interests. J.P. Morgan, was appointed in 1903 as treasurer (fiscal agent) for the newly independent Republic of Panama.

J.P. Morgan had only $19 million in securities in his estate when he died in 1913. Like the before mentioned cooperation's, the securities handled by Morgan were actually owned by his employer, the Rothschilds.
The DuPont family

DuPont is number six in the ranking of the leading global elite. Like all leading rulers, the DuPonts also paid special attention to whom their children married. Many of the first marriages in this family were between brother and sister! The biographies of the DuPont family as a world power began with the marriage between Samuel DuPont and Anne Alexandrine, a Hugenot from Burgundy, in 1737 in Paris.

Pierre Samuel DuPont, the son of Samuel and Anne, was the first DuPont to acquire a great amount of power and influence. Moreover he was the first in the family one could prove a direct connection with the global elite. At the request of King Stanislaus-Augustus he went to Poland in 1774 to develop a system for national education over there.

President Thomas Jefferson was a very close friend of Pierre Samuel DuPont. At Jefferson’s request Dupont immigrated to North America with his family in 1799 to start on a plan for national education in the country. As we will see, this system made it possible for the global elite to mold the way children think.

After DuPont returned to France in 1802 and was instrumental in promoting the treaty of 1803, by which Louisiana was sold to the U.S., Jefferson gave him the first American order to manufacture gunpowder. To this day the American army buys its munitions for all its wars from the DuPonts. Today the DuPonts are monopolizing this and other fields. Everything that has to do with chemistry is produced by DuPont, with Americans using a DuPont product almost daily.

The ruling families are also behind the worldwide drug trade. With the help of the CIA and the British secret service MI6, they are at the head of the worldwide drug mafia and control the entire trade and sale of drugs! During a television interview, Lewis DuPont let it slip that the worldwide drug trade was in the hands of powerful families. 53 Lewis DuPont was the driving spirit behind the book Dope (Executive Intelligence Review, 1975). This book reveals the leading figures in the worldwide drug trade. The following families and persons are associated with drug trade: the Astors, the DuPonts, the Kennedy’s, the Rockefellers, the Rothschilds, the Russells and the Chinese family Li. Because of his collaboration on this book, Lewis DuPont ran into substantial trouble with his family. Owing to a government informant, he narrowly escaped kidnapping, torture and brainwashing on his father’s yacht. He couldn’t press charges against his family for this, because the elite have control over the legal system to the farthest corners of the world.

The Onassis family

In 1928 the ruling leaders, who possessed all large oil companies, gathered in Achnacarry castle and made an agreement called the Achnacarry Agreement. In this agreement the worldwide extraction of oil and oil trade was brought together in one large international monopoly. That’s why one only sees the same tankers providing a large number of filling stations in a certain area with gasoline. By 1928 the elite had total control of most all oil production, and Aristotle Onassis was the shipping magnate who built the largest oil tankers in the world.

During the Second World War every Greek ship was sunk, except the ships belonging to Aristotle Onassis. His ships could freely sail down every war zone without being attacked. Everyone will understand that for this to happen, agreement on the highest level was necessary. The ruling elite are above all conflicts created by them, at our expense. One only has to notice that certain persons are above the law, above wars and above other conflicts. Aristotle Onassis was a king within the elite hierarchy. Onassis was, among others, a very close friend to the Peron family, who turned Argentina into a dictatorship with the help of the elite. His power extended so far that practically every researcher will come to the conclusion that he must have been one of the most powerful persons in the world. But these researchers do not know that the complete power of the international monopolists is divided amongst the leaders. Aristotle Onassis had a lot of power indeed, but he only owed this power to the hidden hierarchy which rules our world.

The ruling elite spread their power over the drug and pornography world, the political and economical world and, finally, over mind control. Influential families not within the elite circle collaborate in their conspiracies. When they don’t, their wealth and power become threatened. Howard Hughes was a millionaire who was not under the power of the international monopolists and was at risk because of that. In 1956 Howard Hughes invested a lot of money in vice presidency of Richard Nixon with the hopes of being able to control him. This cost him dearly. The elite infiltrated Hughes’ organization. In March 1957 Onassis henchmen caught Howard Hughes at the Beverly Hills Hotel, replacing him with a look-alike. The real Howard Hughes, whilst seriously injured, was taken to the Emerald Isle hotel in the Bahamas. After a month he was moved to a cell on Scorpios, Onassis’ private island. Another look-alike took Hughes’ place and the one used in the Beverly Hills Hotel job was shot at the Rothschilds Inn. At that time the giant empire of Howard Hughes was merged with the Onassis empire. After Aristotle Onassis’ death, the Rockefellers took over the businesses of the billionaire. Onassis’ granddaughter married into the Russell family, number ten in the order of leading global elite. This family played the leading role in the opium trade at the beginning of the eighteenth century. In 1823, Samuel Russell led the largest opium cartel in the world, and became the greatest opium boss throughout Asia. The company Sturgis & Co. in China was a part of the Russell opium syndicate. In the United States, the company built the largest opium smuggling web, which exported opium from China to Turkey.

Furthermore the Russell family played a key role in promoting Mormonism, founding the secret order Skull & Bones and the Watchtower Bible & Tract Society (Jehovah’s Witnesses).

Becoming a member of the order Skull & Bones is only possible at their invitation when one is descend from a ruling family.

The Warburg family

The Warburg family is the most important ally of the Rothschilds, and the history of this family is at least equally interesting. The book The Warburgs shows that the bloodline of this family dates back to the year 1001. 56 Whilst fleeing from the Muslims, they established themselves in Spain. There they were pursued by Fernando of Aragon and Isabella of Castile and moved to Lombardy. According to the annals of the city of Warburg, in 1559, Simon von Cassel was entitled to establish himself in this city in Westphalia, and he changed his surname to Warburg. The city register proves that he was a banker and a trader. The real banking tradition was beginning to take shape when three generations later Jacob Samuel Warburg immigrated to Altona in 1668. His grandson Markus Gumprich Warburg moved to Hamburg in 1774, where his two sons founded the well-known bank Warburg & Co. in 1798. With the passage of time, this bank did business throughout the entire world. By 1814, Warburg & Co had business relations with the Rothschilds in London. According to Joseph Wechsberg in his book The Merchant Bankers, the Warburgs regarded themselves equal to the Rothschild, Oppenheimer and Mendelssohn families. 57
These families regularly met in Paris, London and Berlin. It was an unwritten rule that these families let their descendants marry amongst themselves.

The Warburgs married, just like the Rothschilds, within houses (bloodlines). That’s how this family got themselves involved with the prosperous banking family Gunzberg from St. Petersburg, with the Rosenbergs from Kiev, with the Oppenheims and Goldschmidts from Germany, with the Oppenheimers from South Africa and with the Schiff's from the United States.

The best-known Warburgs were Max Warburg (1867-1946), Paul Warburg (1868-1932) and Felix Warburg (1871-1937). Max Warburg served his apprenticeship with the Rothschilds in London, where he asserted himself as an expert in the field of international finances. Furthermore, he occupied himself intensively with politics and, since 1903, regularly met with the German minister of finance.

Max Warburg advised, at the request of monarch Bernhard von Bülow, the German emperor on financial affairs. Additionally, he was head of the secret service. Five days after the armistice of November 11, 1918 he was delegated by the German government as a peace negotiator at a peace committee in Versailles. Max Warburg was also one of the directors of the Deutsche Reichsbank and had financial importances in the war between Japan and Russia and in the Moroccan crisis of 1911.

Felix Warburg was familiarized with the diamond trade by his uncle, the well-known banker Oppenheim. He married Frieda Schiff and settled in New York. By marrying Schiff’s daughter he became partner at Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Paul Warburg became acquainted with the youngest daughter of banker Salomon Loeb, Nina. It didn’t take long before they married. Paul Warburg left Germany and also became a partner with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in New York. During the First World War he was a member of the Federal Reserve Board, and in that position he had a controlling influence on the development of American financial policies. As a financial expert, he was often consulted by the government.

The Warburgs invested millions of dollars in various projects which all served one purpose: one absolute world government. That’s how the war of Japan against Russia (1904-1905) was financed by the Warburgs bank Kuhn, Loeb & Co.  The purpose of this war was destroying the Czardom.
As said before, in testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, James P. Warburg said:

“We shall have a ´world government´, whether or not we like it. The question is only whether world government will be achieved by consent or by conquest.”

The Illuminati

To prove the existence of a worldwide conspiracy one needs to bring up facts that cannot be denied by opponents of such a principle. The imminence of such a worldwide conspiracy is, amongst others, confirmed by the existence of organizations that rank above the separate states. These organizations have been operating behind the scenes of official world politics for several decades. Whoever wants to understand how and why political decisions come about needs to study these organizations and their objectives. The real answers cannot be found with the government of the United States or other political powers of this world. In reality the politics of countries are not determined by democratically chosen representatives, but by all sorts of internationally operating unions and their powerful bosses. Of course a large majority of the constituents are unaware of this, and so they blindly continue to confide in a party or president and give their vote every four years. Ordinarily the constituents do not know anything about the international connections that are hiding behind a political party or politician. Neither color nor orientation of the party or politician makes any difference.

Writers and investigators that have tried to uncover this worldwide conspiracy, stem from all ranks of society. In spite of their differences, they all agree on the existence of this conspiracy. Sooner or later every investigator that researches this matter will come across the secret Brotherhood of the Illuminati. This organization was officially founded in 1530 in Spain. Their goals are based on the famous Constantinople Letter of December 22, 1489 in which plans were made to conquer the leadership of the world.

In 1773 the plans stipulated in the Constantinople letter were restored, modernized and developed further in consultation with the founder of the Rothschild bank.
During a secret gathering, to which several members of the most influential families were invited, Mayer Amschel Rothschild commented:

“If we combine our forces, we can rule the world.”

The ultimate goal was to create a world dictatorship with one world leader at the top. The Constantinople letter and meeting provided a structural plan of how to control all aspects of humanity by withholding information and restricting freedom. Manipulating the media and censuring the truth would prepare for and enable the puppeteering of the world. Mankind would be a mere toy controlled by a few powerful families that dominate the economic, financial and political world stage. The ultimate goal was to reduce human interest to a point where they would agree to anything, therefore setting up the stage for a one-world leader. Nobody would really care and the few remaining opponents could easily be eliminated.

The influential families put the elaboration and implementation of the plans based on the Constantinople Letter in the hands of Adam Weishaupt, a professor in canon law. Weishaupt not only controlled the Freemason Lodges in Munich, he also was an important member of the Grand Lodge (Grand Orient) in Paris.

On May 1, 1776 Weishaupt founded the Illuminati Order in absolute secrecy at the University of Ingolstadt (Bavaria, Germany).

The smartest heads in economy, politics and culture joined the Order and Weishaupt did not shun corruption and blackmail to maintain control over these people.

Weishaupt built a complicated hierarchy of secret degrees. At that time thousands of leading Europeans entered the Order. Weishaupt set up a meticulous plan with the goal of drawing the power of all countries of the world to the Illuminati through a mass of insiders that operated in the background of politics, education, economy, et cetera.

Thanks to the organizational skills of Adolph Freiherr of Knigge and the help of several Freemasons that did not find the action they were hoping for within their lodge, Weishaupt’s Illuminati became the secret rulers of Bavaria and its surrounding states in less than five years. Later the head office was brought over to Frankfurt.

Soon the German political stage was infiltrated by figureheads of the Illuminati that immediately started to reform the state government.
When Franz Georg Lang, a court advisor in Eichstätt who was active in the Illuminati, was hit by lightning during a trip on July 10, 1785, the police found parts of secret Illuminati plans intended for the Grandmaster of the Grand Orient in Paris. These plans proved that the Illuminati favor the extermination of the Jewish-Christian philosophy, abolition of the power of all royal houses and monarchies, annihilation of all patriotism and loyalty to sovereignty, abolishing traditional family structures including marriage, a collective education for children by the state, and many more issues that can be found in our modern society.

It became clear that the conspirators strived for worldwide objectives when the ruler Charles Theodore of Bavaria ordered a police raid in the house of Weishaupt’s assistant, the prominent lawyer von Zwack, on October 11, 1785. A large number of protocols, documents and letters by Weishaupt that were based on the Constantinople Letter, were found in his house. A quote from one of Weishaupt’s letters to Von Zwack reads:

“With this plan we will be able to rule all of mankind. In this way we will be able to put everything in motion and set things on fire with most simple means. Our satellites will have to be placed and instructed in such a way that we are able to secretly influence all political negotiations.”

The next year more secret information was found in the houses of other Illuminati members. Confiscated items included tables with secret codes and symbols, secret calendars, geographical locations, badges, inaugural ceremonies, lists with the names of members, and about a hundred and thirty official government seals that the Illuminati used to forge government documents. These findings resulted in a direct prohibition of the order.

The Order was immediately dissolved. Officially, the Illuminati have been extinct shortly after the October 1785 police raid. However, the apparent fall of the Order was only a predetermined tactic by the conspirators. With this they tried to create the illusion that the Order of the Illuminati was a thing of the past. Weishaupt fled, but continued his work underground. This is when the real work of the Illuminati really started.

After the conspiracy had been revealed, the visible leaders of the Illuminati began operating in Italy, and took on a different name: Carbonari. The Mother-Lodge was called Alta Vendetta and was led by Carl Rothschild.
In 1788 the Misraïm-Rite was founded in Venice. Followers of the Carbonari and Carl Rothschild were the most important members of the rite. The official Freemason Newspaper of Leipzig wrote on December 24, 1864:

“All the Italian upheavals since the year 1790 until the most recent glorious events have been the work of the Illuminati alliance. After all, aren’t the Carbonari its sons? Many constitutions drawn up by Freemasons only state that Freemasons should subject themselves in a peaceful manner to these laws not to raise the suspicion of the tyrants.”

On July 16th 1782 the leading Freemason Lodges of the world met in Wilhelmsbad at Rothschild’s Castle to form an alliance with the Illuminati. Since 1785 the Illuminati order spread over the whole of Europe and America. Even before the separate states united themselves, the constitution was written, and the Republic of the United States had been founded, fifteen lodges of the Illuminati had settled in the thirteen colonies. The Columbia-lodge was founded in 1785 in New York. A year later the lodge in Virginia was founded. Thomas Jefferson, the composer of the Declaration of Independence, was also a member of this lodge. When the devilish plans for a new government ruled by Weishaupt were revealed in Bavaria, Jefferson defended him and called him an “enthusiastic friend of humanity.”

The foundation of the United States is closely connected with the Order of the Illuminati. George Washington, the first American president, belonged to the Order and was, like many of his generals, a Freemason. The American Declaration of Independence was, under the guidance of Jefferson, drawn up and signed by almost all Freemasons. One can say without exaggeration that, without the Illuminati, there would not have been a United States of America.

Does this mean that the Founding Fathers of the United States were part of a big malicious conspiracy? No, absolutely not. The secrecy within the lodges of the Freemasons and Illuminati was the perfect cover-up for their revolutionary activities. Only few or perhaps none of them knew about the plans of the Illuminati. Most of them thought that they only strived for independence from a tyrannical dominator. As so many of today’s members of Freemasonry, they considered the lodge to be a brotherly organization, which is devoted to promoting social skills, and maintain friendships with the brotherhood. The majority consist of gullible Christians. The Illuminati and Freemasons had changed their methods in America to appeal to as any people as possible.
Adam Weishaupt described the adjustment of the philosophy as follows:

“I have come up with a statement that has the advantage of appealing to all Christians, freeing them from their Christian prejudices and cultivating their social values. My means are effective and irresistible. Our secret society works in a way no one can resist.”

Which siren song was sung to mislead a number of the most intelligent and most idealistic men in a predominantly Christian America? Weishaupt’s exact words were:

“Jesus of Nazareth, the Grandmaster of our Order, appeared at a time when the world was in great confusion, and he walked among people that had already been living under oppression for a long time. He taught them the lessons of reason. To be more effective, he used the support of religion - opinions that were common - and cunningly connected his secret doctrine with the religion of the people. He kept the valuable meaning and consequences of his doctrine hidden. In the end he revealed them to only a small number of followers. This small group of chosen ones kept the doctrine in secret to pass it on to the Freemasons.”

This sly tactic made it possible to mislead a significant part of the elite of the American Revolution, just as many Christian Freemasons are being misled today. Freemasonry was considered the liberator of Christianity and it promised freedom and happiness for mankind. But Professor John Robison, a Freemason-expert and contemporary of Weishaupt, was not fooled by this:

“This so-called happiness of mankind is no more than an instrument that the regents (the leaders of the Illuminati) joked about among themselves.”

It is interesting to remark that the United States was the first country in which the human rights and freedom of religion that the Illuminati strived for were recorded in the constitution! With this we can conclude that from the beginning, the United States has been directed by the Illuminati and Freemasons, its puppeteers. The constitution centralized their power and expanded their influence to all areas of the American society. At that time the opposition had already become silent and the effects have become especially disastrous for the American people today. The Illuminati use the United States as a springboard for their world leadership to subject other countries and to eliminate the remaining independent heads of state.
Three years after Weishaupt’s death (1811) the Misraïm-Rite was also introduced in France. In 1815 the Mother-Lodge Arc en Ciel was founded in Paris. In 1817 the Rite was prohibited in France. Just like Weishaupt’s Illuminati order the Rite continued underground.

The Misraïm Rite grew rapidly in Belgium, Ireland and Switzerland, and in 1870 the Ancient and Primitive Rite of Misraïm was officially founded in England. One of the highest governors of the Misraïm-Rite was Isaac Adolphe Cremieux (1796-1880), a 33rd-degree member of the Scottish Rite and also member of the Grand College of Rites of France and founder of the Alliance Israélite Universelle. On December 31st 1870 a Supreme Council General of the 90th-degree was founded under leadership of Cremieux. In 1881 the Italian revolutionary Giuseppe Garibaldi became Grand Master of the Misraïm-Rite.

The French Revolutions

One of the biggest successes of the Illuminati at that time was their influence and control over the different French revolutions that began in 1789. The official Freemasonry Newspaper in Leipzig wrote the following on December 24, 1864:

“The French Revolution of 1789 was the work of the Illuminati; all the excellent and outstanding men of that time were Illuminati or Freemasons. The Revolutions of 1830 and 1848 were also led by the Illuminati.”

In an official statement issued by the Grand Orient it was emphasized that the Illuminati together with the Freemasons indeed had prepared the Revolution of 1789 and implemented the principles of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity!

The book, Proofs of a Conspiracy Against all the Religions and Governments of Europe by Professor John Robison (1798) has been written to warn us about the Illuminati. Robison wrote:

“Most of the active leaders of the French Revolution belonged to the Illuminati Order. They used front organizations to achieve their goals in France just as they did elsewhere.”

In fact French history is a sequence of revolutions and counter revolutions, all starting with the Great Revolution. In 1789 a couple of powerful Illuminati bankers in Paris had been active to obstruct the arrival of ships with corn and food that was meant for the people of Paris. This caused a shortage of food and turmoil arose amongst the people of Paris. The catastrophe had clearly been planned beforehand. It is clear that the victims, the common people, had nothing to do with this.

The Great Revolution came to a climax in 1793 and ended with the enormous tyranny in 1794. Most of the aristocrats were decapitated with the help of the guillotine. When they ran out of aristocrats the people started killing each other. The revolution snatched the power away from the king, nobility and church and put it in the hands of the Illuminati. After the revolution, the chaos that erupted only calmed down after Napoleon Bonaparte seized power.

Napoleon’s ambition to rule the whole of Europe was undermined and his reign was brought to an end, after which all Bonapartes were banned from France at the end of Waterloo.

A special congress was held in Vienna to create a New Order in the political relationships of Europe after the wars and the collapse of the French Empire under Napoleon (1769-1821). Here it was decided to give the French throne back to the Bourbon family. With this decision Louis XVIII ascended the French throne. He died in the summer of 1824 and was succeeded by his brother, Charles X, who hoarded all the power for himself. His rule as a dictator was as if there had never been a revolution. He tried everything to restore the Ancient Régime but was met with resistance by the Illuminati. An inevitable coup followed on July 27, 1830. Charles X refused to reduce his power and on July 31st was forced to give up the throne. He resigned in favor of his grandson Henri d’Artois, considered to be the true Bourbon-king, and fled abroad.

The Illuminati neglected the wish of everybody that wanted Charles’ grandson to be recognized as king. Instead, they replaced Charles X in 1830, with his cousin Louis-Philippe of Orléans, a descendent of Louis XIV. His popularity among the population had grown exceptionally during the restoration of the monarchy under Louis XVIII and Charles X, and was thus accepted immediately. After a while Louis Filips I decided to break from the control of the Illuminati. However, following several threats, most likely stemming from the Illuminati, Louis suddenly resigned on February 24, 1848. Afraid of what happened to Louis XVI and Marie-Antoinette he disguised himself and fled Paris.

The French Revolution of 1848 showed the involvement of the Illuminati even more than the Revolutions of 1789 and 1830. Despite the fact that the government that came to power in 1848 mainly consisted of Freemasons, or had great influence on the parliamentary elections, the new parliament chose not to follow the directions of the Illuminati. The Freemasons then focused on the exiled Charles Louis Napoleon, whom they considered a fellow member because of his membership in the Carbonari. Louis Napoleon had asked his father for money to finance a coup in France in 1840. Although his father indignantly rejected this request, Louis did not give up. But his coup failed, and Louis was sentenced to life imprisonment, from which he managed to escape on May 25, 1846.

In 1848 the Freemasons that revolted against the Illuminati supported the coronation of Charles Louis Napoleon (Napoleon III). From day one Napoleon III showed that he indeed was a man of revolution. During his first legislative period he managed to become president.

Through his connections to the Pope and his education politics, he was able to secure for himself the support of the Catholic Church in 1849. The Freemasons did not foresee this, and the decision by the Senate to recognize the Pope’s power, resulted in outright conflict with the Freemasons.

On January 14, 1852 Napoleon III seized definite power through the implementation of an antiparliamentary constitution, and on December 2, 1852 he became the Emperor of France.

The French-German war that broke out under the leadership of the Illuminati on July 19th, 1870 caused the life of 50,000 French citizens. The French army, consisting of 160,000 men, was surrounded near Metz.

On September 1, 1870 Napoleon III suffered a crushing defeat with his men near Sedan. When the general staff announced that the Emperor had been taken as a prisoner of war, in October the Third Republic was proclaimed.

It should come as no surprise that the Illuminati caused the Fourth Revolution in France. In the same way as in 1789 they wanted to regain control over the government. France had to be handed over to the Commune. The French defeat in the war against Germany accelerated this process. The Illuminati felt forced to take action sooner than they had anticipated. From March 18 to May 29, 1871 the Commune caused a lot of damage in Paris. Statues of French heroes were selectively taken down, citizens and members of the clergy were killed. It is interesting to point out that the 145 houses of Alfonse Rothschild and other belongings of prominent Illuminati were carefully spared. Who would have told the people to spare the houses of the rich Illuminati in such a situation?

On April 26, 1871, under the leadership of their respective dignitaries, 51 lodges of more than ten thousand Freemasons with flags and badges proceeded in a festive parade towards the city walls of Paris to place their banners in the city. At City Hall, Tiriforque greeted the representatives of the revolutionary violence and shouted to the insurgents:

“The Commune is the most powerful revolution the world has ever seen.”

In the night between the 3rd and the 4th of September, Jules Favre ordered the deposition of the house of Bonaparte. The representative of the imperial government, General Cousin-Mantauban, did not dare offer resistance to this call of treason, because neither the army nor the National Guard failed to clearly choose a side. In the afternoon of September 4th a crowd stormed the assembly of the legislative corporation, to dissolve the Senate and proclaiming the government of the people.

With the revolutionary fall of Napoleon III the French monarchy came to a definite end and an important step in the Illuminati world revolution was made: Catholic France became an atheist republic in which the lodges would govern until the Second World War. From documents included in the official Bulletin en Compte-rendu of the Grand Orient, it can be concluded that all anti-clerical measures that were discussed in parliament had already been decided on and were implemented by the Illuminati and the Grand Orient. Since 1902, more than three thousand religious schools were closed and it became forbidden to teach religion in schools. Many members of the clergy were arrested, some were banned, and Christians were treated as second-class citizens. This caused the Vatican to break all diplomatic contacts with France in 1904. The Illuminati were realizing in France what they wanted to realize in the rest of the world.

Many people have difficulties believing that the Illuminati really exist, believing rather that it is a fictitious group. Most people hardly believe that there is a worldwide conspiracy that aims to repress the whole of humanity. This is understandable because the Illuminati have done everything to erase their tracks throughout the course of history. It was extremely important to the Illuminati to erase their name from official and common vocabulary.

Weishaupt and his companion Adolph von Knigge wrote in The Instructions of the Order:
“It is important that the objectives are realized; the mask that is used is less important as long as there is a mask. The biggest power of our Order lies in its secrecy; don’t ever let the true name and intentions of the Order become apparent at any occasion or place, but keep operating under different names and causes.”

The Illuminati use several umbrella organizations whose leaders usually don’t know that they are being manipulated and controlled. Some of the Illuminati organizations working from behind the scenes of visible world politics are amongst others, the Association of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, the Trilateral Commission and the Bilderberg Group.

The following objectives are strived for by these groups:

- An international economic Power Block.
- Founding an international Parliament.
- Creating an international World Army through the abolition of national armed forces.
- Restriction of the sovereignty of national governments in favor of a unique and coordinated World Government.

In his speech before the Senate, on 15 December, 1987, Senator Jesse Helms warned against the New World Order:

“Private organizations such as the Council on Foreign Relations, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, the Trilateral Commission and the Bilderberg Group serves to disseminate and to coordinate the plans for the so-called New World Order in powerful business, financial, academic, and official circles.”

Making money out of nothing

“The study of money, above all other fields in economics, is one in which complexity is used to disguise truth or to evade truth, not to reveal it. The process by which banks create money is so simple the mind is repelled. With something so important, a deeper mystery seems only decent.” - Nobel laureate John Kenneth Galbraith

In the media, we, the unqualified, are often confronted by images of central bankers who steer markets by lowering or raising interest rates, as though they were witchdoctors. Their speeches are often so incomprehensible that it takes an expert to translate their meaning. We shouldn’t expect them to be any clearer, because that would make them obsolete and they would risk losing their jobs.

We, the uninitiated, tend to think financial and economic matters are boring, so we just switch channels. These gentlemen will do the thinking for us. As long as we get our pay check and are able to pay our bills, everything will be alright.

However, when we realize that controlling the world’s financial flows is the beginning of all “real“ power, it wouldn’t hurt us to be a little more involved in these matters. Let us not forget what real power is:

The creation of economic growth or depression. The creation of war, inflation and the economic downfall of entire nations and cultures.

These aren’t natural phenomena, nor the Hand of God. These are deliberately created events. Henry Ford, the American automobile manufacturer and member of the global elite, put it as follows:

“It is well enough that the people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.”
In other words, we are being lied to. Over the years, the lie has become so universal and complex that we struggle to comprehend it. As a result, we have a situation in which a relatively small group of people is in control of the planet. The basis of their power is simply an illusion.

If we gain insight into this monetary system, we can rewrite this planet's future, abolishing war or famine for all.

“Money is the most important subject intellectual persons can investigate and reflect upon. It is so important that our present civilization may collapse unless it becomes widely understood and the defects remedied very soon.”

The central issue at stake here is simply that banks create money out of nothing. If we were to do this, we would be considered frauds and counterfeitters. Our central banks, however, have been authorized to create money by law. When we realize that these banks are in turn controlled by the afore-mentioned small group of people, our leaders, the global elite, we can’t help but start to question the value of democracy.

What do banks have to say about their money?

“Neither paper currency nor deposits have value as commodities. Intrinsically, a dollar bill is just a piece of paper, deposits merely book entries.”

The same people who published this also control the daily lives of millions of people by determining interest and inflation rates!

Every day, we are bombarded by the media with stories that allegedly show that there is a shortage of money for this, that and the other: Healthcare, education, housing, income for a decent living, research and innovation in alternative energy, normal biological agriculture are just a few examples.

We are told that there is enough space, enough labor, enough creativity, and enough brainpower. Enough of everything, just not enough money (and when interest rates go up, there’s even less money). All kinds of false reasoning are used, for example that wage increases equal inflation.

The central question to ask is how money is created?

Here is an example:
You buy a house or take out a mortgage on the excess value of your property, let’s say 200,000 Euros. In simple terms the following will happen: the bank’s computer adds this virtual number – because that is what they are – to your bank account. As a result, the bank owns the property until complete payment is received and you are obliged to make repayments for the next 30 years, with interest.

Again, the bank attached a fictional number to your name and for 30 years you need to work to pay the money back. The bank didn’t build your house, nor did it pay for the materials. That was done by people like you and me. They too have obligations to the bank, because they also have a mortgage. And when you die, your kids will have to pay taxes on your estate, often, needing to take out a mortgage of their own to do so.

Another example of how banks create money out of nothing:

You go to the bank to borrow 1,000 dollars. One year later, you have to pay 1,100 dollars back, which includes interest. The additional 100 dollars needs to come from somewhere, for instance in the form of wages or profit sharing. In other words, the extra 100 dollars come from society.

This system can only remain stable when the total amount of money in circulation increases. This increase - inflation - is created when the banks create more money. In other words: Interest payments are a direct way to create money. All the money that exists in the world today comes from a bank.

This remarkable phenomenon has been described as follows by Robert Hemphill, Credit Manager of the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta:

“If all the bank loans were paid, there would not be a dollar in circulation. This is a staggering thought. We are completely dependent on the commercial banks. Someone has to borrow every dollar we have in circulation, cash, or credit. If the banks create ample synthetic money we are prosperous; if not, we starve. We are absolutely without a permanent money system. When one gets a complete grasp of the picture, the tragic absurdity of our hopeless situation is almost incredible - but there it is.”

Higher interest rates have the effect of slowing down economic growth, unless additional money is created. If that does not happen, it will lead to a shortage of money and impending recession, or even a depression. The shortage of money is simply too limited in settling our economic affairs.
During an interview with Jim Lehrer (PBS News Hour), on September 18, 2007, Alan Greenspan, former head of the Federal Reserve, claims:

“First of all, the Federal Reserve is “an independent agency”, and that means, basically, that there is no other agency of government which can overrule actions that we take. So long as that is in place and there is no evidence that the administration or the Congress or anybody else is requesting that we do things other than what we think is the appropriate thing, then what the relations are don’t, frankly, matter.”

In other words, the Federal Reserve is not responsible to anybody.

What about Democracy? Power to the people?

As you can understand, this will get us nowhere. And that is exactly the idea. We are in trouble because we are shackled to an institution that is authorized by law to write out dodgy checks! And should a brave and misguided soul takes it upon himself to storm the bank and take the money at gunpoint, he finds, much to his dismay, “NOTHING“. If anything beyond a few bank notes of no particular value, the robber might find a purring computer churning out virtual numbers.

How has it come to this?

Let us first determine what money actually is.

Through the ages, civilizations have come and gone. Because any civilization involves a group of human beings, that civilization, as a foundation, will have to have factors that bind those human beings, and that are recognized as binding factors.

In essence, these binding factors are the same for every human being. Food, clothing, and shelter form the basis of our primary needs. In addition, creativity to meet these needs, expressed in labor, is required. The same creativity, another word for skills, allows people to maximize their labor capacity, resulting in an increase in spare time and prosperity. In this kind of situation, people depend on and become loyal to each other.

However, because the needs and the skills can be different for everyone, a common trading tool is needed. In its purest form, a trading tool is an expression of common trust. A tool that ensures everyone in society can take part, enabling people to match their needs and skills. Nowadays we simply call it money, which can also be seen as a reflection of the value of the fruits of our labor.
Like the value of our labor, the value of this trading tool can be seen as a constant. Since there is no lack of labor, there should be no lack of food and housing. The conditions for stability are present, because the two factors, labor and goods, are under our control.

The logical consequence of this should be that the common trading tool, money, also has a constant value. This should be common sense. The common trading tool, money, is the lifeblood of society, which forms the basis of our economy.

Our leaders realized ages ago that the person who would be able to control the flow of money, through the banking system, and manipulate it through inflation and interest rates has absolute power. Due to the simple fact that most individuals are unable to understand this system, the position of our leaders remains unchallenged.

With this power our leaders have waged wars, financed revolutions, destroyed entire cultures, and propagated fear of more to come. As a result, there has been an increase in the concentration of power over the centuries. Our leaders call their culmination of power advancements in the civilized world, promotion of the free world or simply globalization.

The flow of money

Andrew Hitchcock claims in his book The French Connection - The History of the Money Changers:

“If the money in circulation in a country is £5.000.000, and a central bank is set up and prints another £15.000.000, stage one of the plan, sends it out into the economy through loans etc, than this will reduce the value of the initial £5.000.000 in circulation before the bank was formed. This is because the initial £5,000,000 is now only 25% of the economy. It will also give the bank control of 75% of the money in circulation with the £15.000.000 they sent out into the economy. This also causes inflation which is the reduction in worth of money borne by the common person, due to the economy being flooded with too much money, an economy which the Central Bank are responsible for. As the common person's money is worth less, he has to go to the bank to get a loan to help run his business etc, and when the Central Bank are satisfied there are enough people with debt out there, the bank will tighten the supply of money by not offering loans. This is stage two of the plan. Stage three, is sitting back and waiting for the debtors to them to go bankrupt, allowing the bank to then seize from them real wealth, businesses and property etc, for pennies on the dollar. Inflation never affects a central bank in fact they are the only group who can benefit from it, as if they are ever short of money they can simply print more.”

Central banks can be compared to a dam with sluices. The bank owners - all members of our power elite - are a kind of lockkeeper. They can decide to open the sluices a little more and create or let through money (causing inflation) or to close the sluices and reduce the flow of money (by increasing interest rates). Thanks to the power of these lockkeepers, communities that depend on these money flows can either drown (Weimar Republic, Germany in 1923) or suffer tremendous thirst (Great Depression, USA in the 1930s).

These powers realize full well that they can create major earthquakes in the social fabric of the civilization being affected, or even tear that fabric completely apart.

Paving the way for World War II

In 1923, Germany lost all of its possessions at a monumental pace, because they were being snapped up by foreigners (Illuminati) for next to nothing.

Hyperinflation had taken its course, resulting in mass unemployment. Those who were lucky enough to still have jobs needed a wheelbarrow to collect their wages.

Not a bad idea at all when a Second World War, as we will see, was being planned in the foreseeable future. There will be enough soldiers, as well as workers to manufacture munitions, artillery and other equipment needed to conduct the war. Everyone is so miserable that they are yearning to be productive. Work will get them food and allow them to pay their rent.

Ultimately, this is how our leaders paved the way for one of their star actors: Adolf Hitler.

Recent example in Zimbabwe
This is an example of a war against one's own people. People lost everything; famine is only a matter of time. On the official Dutch news broadcast of Friday August 3, 2007, a Zimbabwe citizen was interviewed. When the reporter asked him about the enormous price increases, he responded:

“It is normal that prices go up when a new banknote is introduced.”

Plainly spoken, people see inflation as a force of nature. But this is impossible, since the money that is needed to cause price increases will have to first be created. Shopkeepers don’t raise their prices for the sheer fun of it, but have their own costs to cover and are trying to make a living.

To make matters worse, the government of Zimbabwe prevented further price increases by setting the police on anyone who dared increase their prices even further. The country’s shopkeepers were (deliberately) completely destroyed. As far as world leaders are concerned, the President of Zimbabwe is doing an outstanding job, so he can continue to do as he pleases.

We allow our money sluices to be controlled by people we don’t know, didn’t elect and are not under our control. All we see are the financial oracles that are presented to us in the mainstream media, promising us solutions to the problems they themselves have deliberately created. And when it becomes clear that they are responsible for the mess, they claim that they have simply made an error in judgement, and that the markets have behaved in an unpredictable way. They make it look as though they are doing everything they can to get the crises under control.

These lockkeepers in Europe have now united themselves in a central system known as the European Central Bank, making even the individual nations powerless. Our finance ministers have become simple office boys to the ‘Oracle’ in Frankfurt.

What power does the European Central Bank (ECB) actually have?

- The ECB is the only institution with the authority to create money in Euro zone.
- By allowing or forbidding credit for investment, the ECB determines where the money flows and where employment will be created or diminish.
- The ECB determines the amount of money in circulation.
- Only the ECB knows how much money is in circulation.

The ECB is in charge of keeping inflation in check, but also in control of money creation that causes inflation.

This information is drawn from the European Central Bank’s annual report and various news articles. The ECB has been accused of causing inflation by printing too much money, which has led to social unrest and economic turmoil in many countries.
- The ECB determines the inflation rate. (Price increases in our daily lives are the result of inflation.)

- Only the ECB knows whether or not the inflation figure is correct.

- When the creation of money leads to inflation, the ECB sets the interest rates.

- The ECB knows the content of its vault (we will come back to this later).

The ECB therefore controls economies and nations and has the power to make or break them. This gives the ECB the power to create crises and wars at will. The extent of its power becomes clear by the fact that they have never been called into question by the national governments, parliaments and media. Those who do rise up and question ECB control are ignored.

Do you remember the introduction of the Euro? People in most European countries weren’t even consulted. There was no need for a referendum and now you know why. People who are planning a coup usually don’t hold a referendum beforehand. What Europeans did get was a barrage of moronic television commercials of singing and cheering clay figures. Mass media convinced the people that they should be overjoyed with the Euro (the ultimate in power concentration).

Leaders treat their people as simpletons, taking everything away from them and even sending them into battle without resistance. It should be clear by now where the politicians stand in all this.

The fact that education is unable to shed light on this is also a worrying sign. As we will see later on, we have been warned repeatedly by renowned economists, as far back as hundreds of years ago. However, their books are being ignored by our educational institutions and are gathering dust in our libraries.

A fitting question to ask is; “How exactly is money created?”

As a banker, a simple excuse is needed. The main purpose for an increase in money is to meet leaders’ targets. When money is created, investments go up and unemployment decreases. One of the excuses to create money is something we see around us every day: Rising real estate prices, forcing people to take on second and third mortgages, with the help of low interest rates.

Why have house prices raised so much in recent years? The answer is simple. In the 1980s, advances in Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) meant that housewives needed to be persuaded to take part in the economy, rather than staying at home. This meant that the average income per household increased tremendously.

As a result, demand on the housing market increased accordingly. In turn, this meant that the value of existing houses rose as well, and that additional value could, in some cases needed to, be mortgaged. This way, banks managed to create billions of Euros, in some case up to 40 billion per year, out of nothing. People started spending the extra money, which is often referred to as economic growth. Who are the victims? Because people are now unable to buy a home, thanks to the deliberately created increase in house prices, it is the family who suffers. Remember that this is because of targets the governments set to look good.

And what does our lockkeeper have to say about the increase in money? On a regular basis, messages from the ECB indicate that growth is twice as high as originally anticipated. Without so much as batting an eye, it is announced that the growth of money is at 11.5% and inflation at 2.5%. At best, analysts will indicate that certain factors have been excluded from the calculation. The average person will not think about the consequences before switching the channel.

Inflation

How does inflation work? In everyday life, inflation is seen as an intangible natural phenomenon, which our leaders are happy to let us believe.

Suppose you were as rich as Uncle Scrooge. You have a warehouse filled with money. Still, it is only money. When you start spending it, its value is determined by banks. When they decide to increase inflation, the value of your money decreases.

The fact that the Big Bosses in Frankfurt decided what the exchange rate between the pre-Euro currencies, e.g. the Dutch Guilder or the Italian Lire, and the Euro makes one thing clear: Being dependent on money is not a good option. In the end, money will give neither independence nor security.

Whenever wages and prices increase, it’s called inflation. However, this is actually the result of the amount of money being created by the banks in the form of loans and low interest rates. Inflation is also a form of theft.
The world-famous economist John Maynard Keynes, in his book The Economic Consequences of the Peace, said the following:

“By a continuing process of inflation, governments can confiscate, secretly and unobserved, an important part of the wealth of their citizens. By this method they not only confiscate, but they confiscate arbitrarily; and, while the process impoverishes many, it actually enriches some.”

The ‘some’ here refers to the higher servants of our politicians. Keynes also said:

“There is no subtler, no surer means of overturning the existing basis of society than to debauch the currency. The process engages all the hidden forces of economic law on the side of destruction, and does it in a manner which not one man in a million is able to diagnose.”

In the case of disasters, such as the one in Zimbabwe, inflation can be very threatening. It touches the core of our existence and our leaders use that fear. Upper management of large corporations have their bonuses multiplied while the masses observe how their demands for better conditions via trade unions, are immediately swept from the table with the reasoning that it will lead to irresponsibly high levels of inflation and that it will overheat the economy.

We are informed that; We need to know our place and take our responsibility!

The former ECB Director, Trichet - head of a picking order, formalized by the introduction of the Euro - calls this the Second Round Effect. When workers demand better conditions during pay negotiations due to an increase in the cost of living, this causes inflation and threatens economic stability. Then the verdict is given:

“We will make sure that these second round effects do not materialize.”

How can this be ensured?

“Chance of ECB interest rate cuts diminish.”

This is a clear message to local politicians, trade unions and employers in the Euro zone. In other words:

“Do as we say or else you will be punished with higher interest rates.”

Inflation is an excellent way to prevent us from getting rich. If we do manage to negotiate a pay raise, we are immediately punished with higher inflation.
Interest

Doesn’t inflation affect everyone, including our higher servants? There is a known solution called interest. Interest is the protection of the fortunes of the rich. The masses need to borrow money to invest or buy a house. The higher interest rates are, the more limited the options will be. The elite don’t need to borrow. If they do, they do so via a special construction. The more money they have, the more numerous their options will be, for example through offshore tax havens.

It is often said that interest rates go up whenever inflation does. If you were to take a close look at the actual numbers, provided they are even available, you would see that this relationship is a questionable one. Since the actual amount of money in circulation is only known by the banks, there is ample scope for manipulation. Needless to say, the interest-inflation model is a brilliant invention. The concept of inflation has been linked to labor.

“Labor is the engine of our economy.”

Whatever one may have gathered today through hard work may have lost most of its value tomorrow.

Capital, the result of our labor, is in essence a static phenomenon. Without labor, nothing happens; you might as well bury it underground. But that’s where interest comes in. Capital grows on its own, a form of parasitism. Of course, those who own capital don’t work; they have the masses do that for them. They just direct the money to wherever labor is cheapest. Thanks to interest, their position is safe, generation after generation.

The higher interest rates are the fewer opportunities people have of determining their own future. A growing middle class and children that go to universities will only make them independent and less eager to serve our leaders’ interests. Interest rates and inflation will delay and stagnate this process. 132

In the New York Times of June 12, 1921, Thomas A. Edison wrote:

“Interest is the invention of Satan.”

Interest is the engine behind the growing gap between the rich and the poor. The higher interest rates are, the faster that gap will widen. This is how, via the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank, the Third World is looted:
“Pay the interest you owe via your natural resources.”

What purpose does poverty in the world serve? It is easy to keep poor people ignorant. Poor people are defenseless, thinking only about how they will get their next meal. Poverty (like war) serves an economic purpose.

What about the middle class in the developed world? Most individuals feel guilty and give development aid in the hope of decreasing world poverty. This doesn’t help much because we fail to pay attention to the real cause – the monetary system. Economic development is an item on the government’s agenda, and naturally should be.

Aristotle had the following to say about interest in Politica:

“Interest is money off money, which makes it the most unnatural form of property acquisition.”

Interest creates wealth for those who have and scarcity for those who don’t have. For our leaders, it is a means for creating scarcity through interest rate reductions and wealth and riches through interest rate increases (‘Roaring Twenties’).

Here’s an example of how our leaders really deal with money. On March 20, 2006, The Guardian ran the following story:

“Iraq was awash in cash. We played football with bricks of $100 bills.”

Iraq’s assets had been transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York. In the first year of the American occupation, under interim governor Paul Bremer, a total of 363 metric tons of $100 notes were transported by plane to Baghdad. These transports took place twice a week. The largest amount - $2.401.600.000 - was transported on June 22, 2004. This was the largest shipment of cash money in the history of the Federal Reserve. The total amount was about twenty billion dollars.

This deal was arranged by a shady accounting form, North Star Consultants, Inc. According to one of Paul Bremer’s assistants, Stuart Bowen, this company was run from a private residence in San Diego. But it gets even better!

“They reported that CPA’s entire accounting system consisted of just one contractor maintaining Excel spreadsheets. That’s one person for 20 billion.”

In 2003, after the invasion, UN sanctions were lifted, enabling the release of the $20 billion. It may be clear that what happened here was a matter of malicious intent, putting the people of Iraq in a state of total economic and social chaos.

In higher circles, people knew that this money existed. It could have been used to kick start the Iraqi economy and give the people water and electricity. But that was never the plan. That’s why the money was dropped at the airport by a couple of planes. The Waxman Committee never established who was responsible. Paul Bremer’s interim government, which had ordered the transports, even went so far as to carry out the biggest transport mere days before power was handed back to the Iraqis. A final transport worth $16 billion took place on June 25, 2004.

To prevent an orderly distribution, the money was simply dumped. Not on a bank account, but from a C-130 plane on an Iraqi airport. Nobody can claim the Iraqis didn’t get their money. Global accounting giant KPMG was ordered to carry out an investigation, which they only managed to do to a certain extent, due to unwillingness on the part of the interim government. The Waxman Committee also interviewed Mr. Bremer, and received the following answer:

“The auditors presume that the Coalition could achieve a standard of budgetary transparency and execution which even peaceful Western nations would have trouble meeting within a year, especially in the midst of war.”

Mr. Bremer refused to take any responsibility. His statement contradicts the speed with which the transports were carried out. He would have at least taken preventative measures if the situation had been as chaotic as he claimed it to have been.

This story tells us something about the mentality of the people we are dealing with. They see money as a weapon! In this case, Iraq was stripped of its assets in a very effective way. This massive influx of money drove the country deeper into chaos. Two birds with one stone.

In our mind, the question, “What is money” is on a par with the question, “Is the earth round or flat?” It has to do with our primary insight of how we experience it? For our leaders, it’s simple. Money is a means to an end, created by the kilogram and get your chums to do the accounting.

A bank note is attached to a fishing rod as an incentive, and their bidding is done. It will never occur to us that there are strings attached, or that the incentive is used to manipulate.

The direction into which we have been manipulated thus far isn’t very promising. A global empire has been built, with famine, war, diseases, pollution, and much more!

The powers that be use money to play us off against each other. They see the world as a global arena. To motivate us, they create fear, hate and insecurity via their media, while, at the same time, their economic system create scarcity.

Our world leaders and bankers use gold, or its derivative, money, to get us to do their bidding.

Let us example the gold rush phenomena. Thousands of men ploughed the American desert, looking for what exactly? Will gold provide a better life? Can gold be eaten or lived in? Simply put, one can’t do anything with it, besides use it to get other people do things. And this has unpredictable consequences.

One man’s profit is another man’s downfall. Darwinist laws apply:

And the strongest is always the one who owns the most. Nowadays, this is called competition or free market. During this process, possessions automatically increase. Any gold that is being dug up, via the monetary system, automatically ends up in a bank vault.

People who have struck gold immediately exchange it for the common trading tool: Paper money. These notes are introduced via the banks into society by our leaders. They simply print the paper and collect the gold.

This is also what continues to happen in the Third World. Gold mines in South Africa and Brazil are mined by the local people, who sell it to our leaders for paper notes, “dollars”. The gold is then stored in vaults in Switzerland, London, New York and Singapore.

Some time ago, some South-African miners of the Kimberly diamante mines were interviewed. The mine was exhausted, with a big hole in the ground. The men were unemployed and the diamonds had been moved to Antwerp and London. The men had no pension or other form of financial security. Their wealth had simply vanished!
The paper money system does two things. It robs a country of its wealth and then it destroys the local economy and society.

The gold that has been secured by our leaders can use the paper money in circulation to wield its power. Via the dollar, its tentacles reach the furthest corners of the planet. The way to subjugate the planet is not through brute force, then, but through paper money.

The very thing that should unite us - our common trading tool money - is being used against us. And as long as we allow ourselves to be used, because of fear, stupidity or lack of confidence, this process will continue with horrible consequences for us all. This has been planned; this is part of an agenda that has spanned for centuries.

One Humanist Religion

“None are more hopelessly enslaved than those who falsely believe they are free.” Johann Wolfgang von Goethe

At the beginning of the past century the Illuminati published an incessant flood of books with which they tried to manipulate the thoughts and will of the masses to convince them of the necessity of a world government. The Second World War provided the Illuminati with the best and clearest argument for the propagated foundation of a unique world government:

“If there was only one state in this world it would be impossible for separate states to enter into war.”

In the autumn of 1940 a small and inconspicuous book appeared both in the United States and Canada with the very appealing title The City of Man: A Declaration on World Democracy. This publication was coordinated by Bertrand Russell’s top American agent and later CCF collaborator, University of Chicago President Robert Maynard Hutchins.

The book had three editions published within three months. In the United States, City of Man was published by The Viking Press, New York, and is an editorial that is part of the Rockefeller “empire”. With an apparent interest in rapidly spreading the Declaration on World Democracy worldwide, the book was given as a present to all major libraries in the United States, Canada and Europe. 138 But just as rapidly, the book no longer was available “anywhere”. Not a single copy was for sale nor did any of the libraries lend it out. Whoever enquired about the book was told that the title was either no longer available, or that it could not be found.

Not every publisher is able to completely retract a title that has been published in several editions and spread over all American and European libraries or issue a secret and effective loan prohibition of all copies of the book. The exact reason for the disappearance of this widely published book will probably never be clear. Among other things The City of Man claims:

“This New Order requires a re-shaping of family, educational association, neighborhood and church under the direction of a new religion... the universal religion of Democracy.”

The City of Man charges that all existing churches have “meddled in the anarchy of the nations and bowed to the powers that be,” and that “therefore the hour has struck when we must know that limits are set by the religion of freedom, which is Democracy, to the freedom of worship.” 139 The City of Man is nothing more and nothing less than the revealing as far as the public is allowed to know of the age-old Illuminati plans. This plan contains five main points that, if possible, have to all be realized at the same time:

1. A “One World State” should arise that will contain the entire world.

2. This will prevent possible wars. All economic and social problems will be solved as fairly as possible. Democracy will be the just and only government form.

3. At the same time, democracy will be the sole and general world religion. Humanity will continue to develop; the ideal man is the ultimate goal of existence: man will be god.

4. All existing religions should be integrated into one humanist religion. Religions that refuse to comply with this, because they hold on to their inflexible dogmas, will be prohibited because they form a threat to Democracy as well as to the development and well being of mankind.

5. Worldwide Humanism can only be achieved through a drastic Americanization of this world. Founding a World state should be initiated by the United States.

Without a doubt, The City of Man contains, more or less, the complete program for an approaching realization of the ultimate goal of the Illuminati. Among other things, this goal is to cause the fall of Christianity and other religions. The authors of The City of Man ultimately strove for a worldwide monopoly for “Humanism” as a world religion. Humanism is the religion of the Freemasons, and the worldwide spread of it is the emphatic goal of the Illuminati. 140
The City of Man craftily tries to hide its true intentions. At first sight it gives the impression that the authors are concerned about the recovery and maintenance of world peace:

“This world peace can only be guaranteed if all separate states and kingdoms are combined into a One World Empire. This World Empire can only exist by the grace of one common persuasion for all humanity. That persuasion should be the religion of the Democracy. Apparently, such a world religion is a necessary condition through which the building and stabilization of a World Empire and world peace can be realized. This World Empire should guarantee that nobody on earth supports a religion other than Democracy (i.e. Humanism).”

To speak in the words of the Bible book Revelations:

“He [the beast, Satan] was given power to make war against the saints and to conquer them. And he was given authority over every tribe, people, language and nation. And all that live on the earth shall worship the beast” (Revelation 13:7).

And with that we have come to one of the most important parts of this book: the beliefs of the Illuminati.
Chapter 15

The Great White Brotherhood

“If you want to raise the ultimate kind of power within Satanism you sacrifice someone. In the highest levels of Satanism they believe the best way to raise your energy is by murdering something, either an animal or a person. With a human being there’s an enormous amount of energy released.” Bill Schnoebelen

The most powerful Illuminati bloodlines lead the Satanic Hierarchy and are part of Satan’s Kingdom. Each of these bloodlines have demonic princes, just like the “man and demon” Prince of Persia in the Bible. The following overview has been composed by former Illuminati members.

Male Part

1. Royal Ipsimus
2. Council of the Grand Druids
3. Higher Masters
4. Pentacle Servants Regular Witchcraft Circle (Under the leadership of a Priest)

Female Part

1. Queen of Darkness
2. Grande Mother of Darkness (13 degrees)
3. Sisters of the Light (9 degrees)
4. Matriarch Regular Witchcraft Circle (Under the leadership of a Priestess)
Within organized satanism, at the highest level of the Illuminati structure, at the top of the pyramid and above the “Royal Ipsimus”, we find "The Great White Brotherhood". Few people are aware of the existence of this organization because The Great White Lodge of The Great White Brotherhood is not a visible organization. Its members do not gather for meetings nor do they have a temple of their own. The structures within The Great White Brotherhood are actually very simple. Satan is the Deputy Grandmaster of the Great White Lodge, with other spiritual members being demons. Both Satan and his demons are in constant telepathic contact with the few visible (human) leaders of the Brotherhood. Introduction to The Great White Brotherhood takes place through a Cosmic Initiation.

Potential candidates are recruited in different ways. Members of the Brotherhood meet a certain person who they believe has the personality that makes him or her suitable for the lifestyle within the Brotherhood. The new victim is not addressed directly. First, the candidacy of this new member is discussed with the Grandmaster of the highest Degree who will have him tailed. A thorough background check is carried out, with all the habits, preferences, strengths and weaknesses of the candidate meticulously mapped out.

When sufficient information concerning the life of a potential new member has been collected, and when it is determined that he is easily influenced, the Masters will order a detailed plan to be drawn up to bring the potential candidate into contact with the Brotherhood. This sophisticated approach usually works perfectly. The Brotherhood takes the initiative, and all the prospective new members have to do is take the bait. Often, they have no idea that a fine net is being spun around them.

The first real contact takes place in such a way as to ensure that the meeting makes an overwhelming impression on the new candidate. When the Brotherhood decides to add a new member to its organization, the action has to succeed. A person informed of the existence of the Brotherhood that decides not to become a member usually places his life in danger. People who have been marked as untrustworthy almost certainly risk losing their lives.

In this regard, the Brotherhood’s motto is:

“It is better to have a reliable member end the life of a hazy suspect than to be exposed by an unreliable member.”
Executions ordered by the Brotherhood will only be carried out when there is a guarantee that the act will not be discovered.

When the candidate has been dazzled by the Brotherhood and has declared a willingness to be initiated into the teachings of the Brotherhood, there is no going back. At least six Masters and one of the higher Masters are present at the acceptance ceremony. The light is dimmed, candles and oil lamps are lit, and incense is burned. The leading Master pronounces the oath, repeating it six times while looking into the eyes of those present. It is important to look into each other’s eyes when pronouncing the oath. Like with the Rosicrucian Brotherhood, the Freemasons and other occult societies, the candidate is connected to a demon through hypnosis during the ceremony.

The text of the oath is as follows:

“I swear on my life and my soul never to reveal that which fate lets me encounter on this night. Should I, my friend, break this holy oath, I hereby officially grant permission to annul my life and my soul.”

After that, all seven who are present pronounce the oath six times. They do so solemnly and with great emphasis. During the “test,” which comes next, a phenomenon called the transfiguration occurs. The demon literally takes possession of the spirit of the newcomer. In addition to dreams and astral projections, a kind of fata morgana can also transmit visions.

Before the test takes place, the candidate is told that he has been chosen by providence to possess special powers. These powers will be transmitted to him through another human being. The way this is done is secret and the candidate has to swear never to reveal that secret. After the candidate once again swears on his life never to reveal the knowledge he will receive, the Grandmaster and the other Masters present tell him about rituals from the Incas and the Celtic Druids. He is not told how these rituals were carried out in practice; he is only told that they exist and that they involve natural processes. The candidate is told which priests were authorized to transmit which powers, and that these secret techniques are only passed on to a handful of the chosen. For thousands of years these practices have been carried out in secret, and it has to stay that way for all eternity. The Incas were masters in transmitting special powers, and the candidate is told that he is about to experience how they did it.
One of the most powerful Grandmasters within the Illuminati, in his book Pro Mille Lies, writes the following about his first test and initiation:

“Present in the room was a woman, five Masters and a Grandmaster. Before the test commenced, one of them suggested we eat something first. The woman asked those present what kind of pizza they wanted, and she ordered them by telephone from a pizzeria nearby. When she had put down the telephone, she left the house. At the time, I had no idea what this behavior meant. After a while the woman returned, bringing a young man who carried a pile of boxes from which the delicious smell of pizza emanated. We were all very hungry. The Grandmaster asked the pizza delivery boy to sit down while he fetched the money. The boy was offered a large glass of soda, which he emptied in just a few big gulps. The pizzas were put on plates and cut. The young man fell into a deep sleep. I was very worried. Had they poisoned him? The Grandmaster assured me that the pizza delivery boy had only been sedated. He suggested we eat first, and we ate our pizzas. After we finished, we cleaned up. Then we put on white, nightgown-like robes and brought the pizza delivery boy to the basement. The Masters tied him to a metal rack that was placed in the center of the basement room. They attached leather cuffs to his wrists and tied him so tightly that he appeared to be crucified to the metal rack. By then he had regained consciousness. We sat in a circle around him.

The Grandmaster told me the pizza delivery boy belonged to me and that I could withdraw as much energy from him as I wanted. He then handed me a large knife and made an inviting gesture towards the restrained boy. I understood.

Next, the anonymous author describes how he murdered the pizza delivery boy in a gruesome way. The torture and bloodshed, which are described in detail, are absolutely unfit for reading. Too shocking and bloodcurdling to quote, we have chosen to skip the recounting of the bloodletting and will continue with the author’s description of the end of the ritual:

“I acted as if in a trance. Suddenly I was interrupted by one of the patient onlookers, who jumped up and pulled the knife from my hand. He used the knife to make a deep cut in the dying young man’s upper belly. He grabbed my wrists and pushed my hands into the hot and bleeding wound. The ecstasy reached an unknown peak when I took the beating heart of the living man and yanked it from his body. I sunk my teeth into it and became one with the heart that was still warm. After I had eaten a part of my victim’s still beating heart, the others led me from the room, like a sleepwalker."

After the author had showered, the Grandmaster told him that the boy’s body could not remain in the basement. He was told that one of the people also present at the ritual had to show him how to get rid of it. Meanwhile, the woman and another Master made sure that the boy’s car would be made to disappear in such a way that the victim could not be tied to the delivery address.

“With the appointed Master I went again into the basement. The scene I saw there was horrible. What I had done was beyond the comprehension of a normal human being. Hanging from the metal rack was a monstrous corpse. There was blood everywhere, and there were severed fingers and toes. They were the remains of what once had been a strong and vital young man whose future had ended so suddenly. His suffering must have been immeasurable. However, he had found peace now, and I had his heart. This person and his strength lived on in me.”

A little later into the reading, the author claimed:

“My comrades fetched two electric knives and a hacksaw. Carefully, we dissected what remained of the body. The flesh was removed from the bones and put through a meat grinder. We sawed the bones into pieces and threw them into an electrical grinder. It was time-consuming and tiring work destroying the entire body. Only the cleaned skull, from which all flesh had been removed and which had been boiled, was left. We were going to need that, the Grandmaster said.”

A new initiate is taught the principles of mystical knowledge. In this phase of his life he gets to know the dark forces lurking deep within his own psyche. After a period of apprenticeship he can, via a test, move up the ranks to Master. As a Master, he begins to associate himself with important persons from the world of politics and economics. He also associates himself with other Lodges and Orders.

After he becomes a Master, he can move up within the hierarchy to reach the level of Grandmaster of the Chair (highest Degree). A condition of this promotion, however, is that the simple Master, with the help of demons, hypnotizes and tries to kill a Grandmaster of the highest Degree. One of them has to die! During this special ritual several human witnesses are present.

A Grandmaster of the Chair can never occupy an official position, nor will he ever be able to manage a multinational company. The reason for this is that visible leaders have to leave their position from time to time, when they are demanded to do so by a majority of the population. In other words, the visible leaders of this world come and go, whereas the invisible leaders controlling them are always the same.

Josef Mengele and Monarch Mind Control

Much has been written about the invisible elite behind the New World Order, which is aimed at absolute control of the world. With the help of important networks, money and violence, this elite has infiltrated all structures of power. On all-important posts within governments, church organizations, science, education, finance, mass media and many other branches of society, the true leaders of this world have their men in position. From this starting point they wish to manipulate world history and lead all humankind to a forced world dictatorship.

There aren’t many researchers who are getting answers as to how this is possible, and it is because the plans that will lead to this New World Order are being kept secret. Under normal circumstances these plans would leak sooner or later; because covert operations tend to be infiltrated with dissatisfied individuals or whistle-blowers. However, this is not what is being seen with the Illuminati.

The Illuminati are masters in the art of secrecy. One of their best kept secrets and most important triumph as of yet is the successful containment of the ultra-secret Monarch Total Mind Control program. This program is the foundation of the dateless plan to force all of humankind into one universal slave state. The Monarch program and the mind control (control of someone’s consciousness) of a select few in society is guarantee for absolute secrecy of the plans that are to lead to the worldwide dictatorship of the Antichrist.

The Monarch program uses penetrating and excessive mind control methods to transform humans to robots. The mind control methods used deliberately create traumatic experiences for those being manipulated. These human robots (Monarch slaves) are subjected to “controllers” who are part of the Illuminati. The Monarch slaves are deployed in the highest ranks of government, church, scientific, financial and educational institutions that are able to influence civilian life. The Illuminati make sure that the human robots that are placed in high ranks do their work without revealing any secret plans. It is easy to understand that one weak link could be fatal to the organization. Without these Monarch slaves there will never be a New World Order. They make sure that the entire spectrum of their affairs and units can be controlled and kept secret.

Dr. Joseph Mengele, one of the cruelest criminals of the twentieth century, has played a crucial role in the development of the Monarch Mind Control formula. Mengele was not only the designer of this program; he also introduced it to the world of science.

Many people are convinced that two months before the evacuation of Auschwitz, Mengele managed to escape back to his hometown Günzberg, Bavaria, and that in 1949 he traveled (via Austria and Italy) to Argentina before fleeing to Paraguay where he could avoid all requests for extradition. At the end of the Seventies, he was allegedly killed in a plane crash in Brazil. When some researchers came dangerously close to Josef Mengele’s tracks in 1985, it was immediately publicly announced that the body of Mengele had been found in the Embu (Brazil). DNA found in the “remains” matched the DNA in Mengele’s surviving son, Rolf. Josef Mengele was dead and the search for him terminated. However, this is not the truth!

Mengele’s life is one surrounded by secrets, contradictions and smoke screens. What really happened to Mengele will always remain hidden, and this is because he was part of an occult hierarchy that is in pursuit of total world control. Mengele was handed instructions to give the impression that he spent the rest of his days in South America. And even though Mengele did live in Brazil, Argentina and Paraguay, the Illuminati spread a great deal of misinformation about his true life.

Mengele was born in the Günzberg in 1911. He studied in Munich, Bonn, Frankfurt and Vienna. His goal was a career as researcher in the field of genetics. After medical school, he became an assistant to Otmar von Verschuer at Frankfurt University. In 1931 Mengele joined the Stahlhelm, a militant nationalist organization where many World War I soldiers had united. In 1934 he changed to the Sturmabteilung (SA) of Hitler’s rising dictatorship and in 1937 filed for membership of the National Sozialist Deutsche Arbeiterpartei (NSDAP). Not long after that, he joined the Schutzstaffel (SS). In 1942 Mengele returned to Berlin, where he worked at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute. Under supervision of this institute Mengele conducted countless experiments in the sphere of mind control on thousands of innocent victims. As said before, from the beginning the work and research of Josef Mengele were funded by important foundations owned by the Illuminati. These foundations were actively involved with the “final check experiments” of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute. In 1943 Von Verschuer, sent Mengele to the Auschwitz-Birkenau camp. Mengele had, as will be shown, the duty to develop a technology that could turn people into “machines”. For that reason, no laboratory note or manuscript relating to Mengele’s work has ever been found.

Act of naturalization of Josef Mengele to the Paraguayan nationality

Since September 7, 1940, Mengele also had the Paraguayan nationality.

In January 1945, when it became apparent that the Nazis were going to lose the war, Mengele disappeared from Auschwitz. He was secretly flown to the United States. There he could further develop his knowledge about programming the human mind for the profit of the planned New World Order, using knowledge he had already gathered while experimenting on thousands of children in Auschwitz. With the help of our invisible elite, the research and experiments of mind control were secretly continued. Part of the Monarch Total Mind Control program was established in the beginning of the Fifties. The three developers were Dr. Green (Josef Mengele), Dr. White (electroshock specialist Ewen Cameron) and Dr. Black (Leo Wheeler).

The brain of a Monarch slave is programmed step by step, just like a computer. The method is the same as if a computer program were being implanted into the brain of the Monarch slave. That program controls the behavior of every Monarch slave, giving him direction.
The Monarch program divides the human psyche into different personalities, all within the same individual. These alternating or changing personalities are called “alters”. An “alter” is a separate part of the memory that possesses its own identity. The brain regards each alter as a different and separate individual that is capable of fully taking control of the behavior of that individual. The existence of two or more personalities within one person is called Multiple Personality Disorder (MPD). In recent specialist literature MPD is also called Syndrome of Multiple Personalities and Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID).

The basic principle of the Monarch program is that the brain protects itself from extreme trauma by consciously creating multiple personalities within one person. An alter always appears based on terrible occurrences that cannot be dealt with, and are thus repressed. When heavily traumatized, the human mind builds a virtual wall around this painful memory. This wall functions as a sort of shield for the individual. The actual personality of this person doesn’t know what goes on in his subconscious. The primary personality of this person is being pushed aside for his own protection, and must make room for new identities. During this process, the alter takes over the original personality of the individual. These new (and often multiple) personalities are focused on one or more tasks. These tasks can be aimed at the execution of certain jobs, but also at coordinating the programmed personalities of the alters. The wall, built around a traumatic event, also protects the identity of the programmers. The shield ensures that the Monarch slaves can live an ordinary life in order not to be recognized as such by people around them.

As said, the Monarch program uses mind control based on a traumatic event. The complete programming of every Monarch slave is executed based on a trauma. Mengele’s research in Auschwitz was primarily aimed around the amount of pain and number of traumatic experiences a person can undergo without dying from it. Maybe now we can understand how Mengele was able to operate in Auschwitz without using sedation. He removed organs from living, and conscious, victims and sewed children together all without anesthesia! The experiments were statistically summarized for the Illuminati to immediately see how much torture a man can take and, ultimately, be enslaved based on a trauma. The results of Mengele’s research have been kept absolutely secret to this day.
The success of Monarch Mind Control is mainly owed to the simple fact that a new personality can be created with continuous abuse. This new personality can take over one’s consciousness at any given moment and knows nothing of the existence of other personalities in the same individual. Each alter (new personality) receives a unique code from the programmers. This code can be activated at any moment. As soon as the programmers give a certain code, the programmed alter is activated and takes control of the person. The alter that was in charge before becomes instantly inactive. The alters that exist within the Monarch program are bound to programmed paths. Should they venture outside their allocated “surroundings”, they will run into their demons. Each alter is no more than a tiny part of a large diabolical system and is but a small wheel in a large machine. One tiny wheel is not capable of fighting its oppression in a maze of thousands of wheels.

Programmed Monarch slaves can be found in each layer of our society. The ultimate goal of Monarch programming is to create people who go unnoticed in public life and are considered “normal”, but who can at any time be activated by their programmers to carry out assignments. There is a variant of the Monarch programming aimed at influencing adults, yet mind control based on trauma and aimed at programmed split personalities (MPDs) is generally applied to children under the age of six.

According to several former Monarch slaves, it is customary that the Monarch program is applied to babies of just a few months old to children of age six. They do this because children under the age of six can be easily influenced. When a child is raised in a certain way, it will be hard to later change or restructure that personality. Of major importance here is the difference between Monarch slaves within the hierarchy and those outside, the most important difference being the way the two types of slaves are programmed.

Monarch slaves outside the hierarchy are indispensable to the conspirators. They come in the shape of saboteurs, drug runners, murderers and suppliers of children. They are used to serve a certain purpose before being killed, often at a young age. Such Monarch slaves mostly come from the Third World where they have been sold by their parents or given up to adoption agencies. Some of the children often live in special institutions with their adoptive parents. Children who don’t live with a blood relative are easy prey for the Illuminati. They are all too eager to buy them and turn them into programmed slaves. There is a living child trade in the world. Eastern European girls are being brought to the West under false pretences. Not only are they forced into prostitution; they are also forced to bear children, which they are forced to give up to the Illuminati. 167

Many of these future slaves outside the hierarchy are being born from women who have already been programmed. All these women have been told that it’s a great honor to sacrifice their children to Satan. Because these mothers “willingly” give up their children, these things hardly reach the outside world. 168

As far as the Monarch slaves within the hierarchy are concerned, their programming has already been planned before their birth. Beforehand, the Illuminati determine the position a child will take in the hierarchy. The child is usually conceived during a satanic ritual and is expected to perform certain tasks within the satanic hierarchy. His or her life will exclusively and completely be determined by the Illuminati. Many Monarch slaves within the hierarchy have been programmed to be multifunctional and are expected to be able to program other slaves. Their entire life will revolve around programming the lives of others. Nowadays second and third generation of Monarch slaves are occupied with the programming of others. 169

In addition, there are also generational satanic families. They have been sold to Satan and their children, therefore, belong to the devil in a very special way. The fetuses of children from such families undergo demonization during special rituals. These kinds of rituals in which such demonizations take place are also called “moonchild rituals”. Creating these moonchildren is the greatest achievement in the sphere of magic these devil artists carry out. The thought behind creating a moonchild is that a perfect and clean soul is captured. This emotionally charged ritual is always accompanied by blood or even human sacrifice.

The Monarch program uses mind control based on a traumatic experience to thus trigger the different personalities of a human being. The entire programming of each individual Monarch slave is based on one or more traumatic experiences. The Illuminati decide which unforgettable traumatic event will be their base of programming. A method often used is premature birth. This method is crucial because the child is traumatized in a natural way. For a premature baby the lack of a comfortable maternal body will be experienced as a trauma. Such a start in life will make it easier for the programmers to mold the child. A premature birth will make a child combative. When a child develops a strong will and a fighter’s attitude to survive its premature birth, it will also be capable of living through the torture that comes with programming. Not all these children are premature, but since it’s the favorite method of the programmers the number of forced early births is increasing.\textsuperscript{170}

The mothers who are pregnant with the children that will be programmed are also subjected to traumatic experiences during their pregnancies. The intent is to traumatize the expecting mothers in such a way that their children are also influenced. Besides this, some babies are tortured with thin needles even as they are still in their mother’s belly. Through the abdominal wall the unborn children are poked at, each part of their tiny bodies injured.\textsuperscript{171} At birth the Illuminati see to it that the child first sees the person who will play a large part in the programming. In the eighteen months following the child’s birth, the programmer will coax the child lovingly. During this period, these loving words are the only things the child will hear. This way an intense bond between the child and his personal programmer develops naturally. The splitting of the child’s mind will not be long following this period of “bonding”. After the child is showered with love, everything that is safe and good is taken away. There is a cage in which the child is subjected to electroshocks. The child's mind is manipulated in such a way that it eventually becomes numb. The child suffers hunger and cold and is left naked. When the child sees his loving master after all this suffering (usually after forty-two to seventy-two hours of pain), he is highly emotional and carefully puts away the memory of the previous painful hours. The child is happy and believes that help has finally come. In that specific moment, the programmer will show his most horrible side and force the child to come to terms with the events by assuming another personality. The former loving caretaker has turned into the child’s worst enemy. The child cannot comprehend the two extremes of his programmer: loving caretaker and torturer. The person the child trusted most is now also the one he fears the most.\textsuperscript{172} The next step is to establish whether or not the experiment was successful. This test is usually executed when the child is about eighteen months old. The victims are tested to find out if they are now capable of splitting their personalities before the special programming can commence.

The original and most important torture to definitely split a child’s mind was carried out by Mengele at a California Air Force base. The base was built to “test new weapons”. Most of these “new weapons” involved the production of human robots on a large scale. The production process of this Monarch Mind Control program took place in an airplane hangar. In this hangar were thousands of small cages stacked as high as the ceiling. Each cage was just large enough to hold a baby. There were about 2000 to 3000 babies stocked in the hangar. 173

The cages in which the babies were locked were electrified so that electroshocks could be applied at any moment. The purpose here was again to split these children’s personalities. 174 The cages had the macabre name “woodpecker grids”. The victims were also subjected to sharp light flashes. These flashes were applied as a means of hypnosis, causing them to imagine themselves living in another dimension. After the children had spent days in the woodpecker grid, the real trauma would start: the raping. These rapes were cruel and bestial, leaving the memory of it as very traumatic to the child. 175

The programmers also used video footage that influenced the subconscious. For this purpose, they used large projectors that looked like binoculars. The crucial difference was that the right and left eye were showing completely different images. Through the right viewer, positive films such as fairytales were shown. Through the left eye was shown a horror show that consisted of horrific pornographic images of snuff (movies of sexual acts in which people are actually killed) and all sorts of ceremonial and ritual cruelties. 176 To traumatize the children, the programmers also used trained dogs, monkeys and other animals as part of the programming. To split the children’s personality, they were often locked in a cage full of spiders and snakes. Moreover, the children were given soft drugs, which were administered through injections, while music was being played in the background. The application of this programming with children had several goals:

- To cause pain
- To force out-of-body experiences (experiences during which one has the feeling that the mind leaves the body)
- To intensify the trauma
- To position each created alter ego in the desired tier or part of the child’s brain
- To reduce the child’s memory capacity

One of the victims, Cisco Wheeler, remembers that Dr. Josef Mengele would come in with an icy smile on his face, and holding a daisy. Mengele would stand before the child and start pulling the leaves one by one. His only words during these events were: “I love you, I love you not, I love you, I love you not....” The child would be driven to madness, for he knew from experience all too well that he could be killed as soon as the last leaf was pulled from the flower. A child that was not loved was killed in the most horrifying manner. Other programmed children were forced to watch how the unloved child would be skinned alive.\textsuperscript{177}

To gain full dominance over the life of the victim, the programmers use the most terrifying tortures. Children are buried alive or hung by their hands and feet while being sexually abused. Rabbits, dogs and cats are brutally slaughtered while the children watch or take part in the killings. Dogs and snakes are used for sexual acts with children. Human faeces, urine, sperm and blood play important roles in humiliation sessions. Children are rubbed with these bodily fluids and often forced to drink a cocktail mixture of the fluids. The live skinning and bleeding to death of victims is also used quite often. Survivors say that victims are even boiled and eaten, and baby fat used to make candles.\textsuperscript{178}

In California, there were several crematoria where fire traumas were created. In these institutions, children are forced to watch other children (with whom they had been close) being burned alive. One child was completely burned to ashes because of the extreme heat used. The ashes retained the contours of the child until somebody opened a window. The tiniest air stream caused the ashes to lose their shape. The other child that was forced to watch from a glass window felt the heat and heard the screams of the child in the oven and was forever traumatized.\textsuperscript{179} The fire trauma is carried out in such a way that the child watching is forced to imagine that he will burn from the heat. This trauma is consequently used as a basis for the “melting stadium”. After the melting process, the programmer is able to determine, in detail, what the programmed alter will do.\textsuperscript{180}

As soon as the children reach the level of absolute obedience, they are lowered into a deep well. Here they are given orders, such as “cut yourself”, “give yourself an electroshock” and other assignments to maim themselves. These tortures in the well are usually a great success, because the alters wound themselves in gruesome ways.

When the child reaches the age of five, his own will have been completely destroyed. In the place of the individual innate will and opinion is now the manipulative, dependent slave. The weak and strong points of the child are specifically documented and consequently it’s decided what role each child will fulfill in society. In detail the programmers describe what the assignment of a certain child will be and what it will mean for the Illuminati.

Among the Monarch slaves are many artists and film stars. Marilyn Monroe was, for example, a Monarch slave who was robbed of her own personality. This surfaced in the film that was made about her life. Lena Pepitone wrote in her book Marilyn Monroe Confidential An Intimate Personal Account:

“Everywhere were floor-to-ceiling mirrors. Even the dining room in the back part of the living room was decorated with a mirrored plate table.”

The use of mirrors is of crucial importance in the programming of Monarch slaves. The slaves see thousands of reflections within themselves. The decoration of Marilyn’s house completely fitted her inner state of mind: all mirrors. Many Monarch slaves fill their house with mirrors; Marilyn however, did this to an extreme. In that context the song texts of Jimi Hendrix, also a Monarch slave, are interesting to read. The title Room full of mirrors leaves no doubt about the fact that Jimi Hendrix was a Monarch slave.

\text{I used to live in a room full of mirrors} \\
\text{All I could see was me} \\
\text{Then I take my spirit and I smash my mirrors} \\
\text{And now the whole world is here for me to see} \\ \text{Now I’m searching for my love to be} \\ \text{A broken glass was solvin’ my brain} \\
\text{Cut and screamin’ crowdin’ in my head} \\
\text{A broken glass was loud in my brain} \\
\text{It used to fall on my dreams and cut me in my bed}

Drugs are an important part of the method used to program people’s thoughts. According to one of his biographies, Jimi Hendrix didn’t want anything to do with drugs, but his manager forced him to take them. Shortly after that he became addicted.

It’s important to remember that mind control will always be part of the life of the Satanic Monarch children. They will never escape abuse. The abuse of the hierarchic Monarch slaves will not be visible on their physique, which is common with the slaves who don’t belong to the Illuminati elite. Even though the scars of torture and control are less visible in the members of the satanic elite, they too suffer many traumas.
The torture that is part of the Monarch program is considered “conditioning”, with the goal of developing specific talents. Those who are programmed must eventually function according to a certain plan and are subjected to a well-thought-out system. They are shown a certain image of the future and receive a code word that is stored in their subconscious. This code word will, at a meticulously chosen moment, mobilize their entire body.

They have been whispered to:

“In every one of us there is a primitive force which takes, and one which gives. These primitive forces make us who we are. Fulfill your destiny.”

You can distinguish many different alters. An alter that is being used for espionage and blackmail is called a beta (sex slave). Sex slaves are programmed to possess skills to use their charm, optimize seductive skills, and to be creative and charismatic. Political leaders and ministers are often connected to betas so that they can be blackmailed at any desired moment. Another special alter is programmed to turn a man into a hitman. They are known as “delta killers”. They are slaves with one purpose: murdering a person. It was such killers that were responsible for the deaths of John F. Kennedy and his brother, Marlyn Monroe, Martin Luther King, Jr., John Lennon, Princess Diana, Pim Fortuyn and many others. By means of mind control, the true killers (clients) are able to have their dirty work done by their programmed alters. That’s what makes it hard to expose the actual killers of major public figures and personalities.

Monarch slaves are not only murderers or spies, more often they can be found in high social functions where they can profoundly influence human existence. Examples can be found in governments, church organizations or in science, education, finance, media and many other branches of society. In order not to reveal the true motive, all peoples in these posts are programmed personalities. This is important because using non-programmed people could lead to the truth being exposed. Sooner or later secret plans would leak if non-programmed individuals were used.

In the last fifty years, a select category of Monarch slaves has helped build the largest empire that ever existed. This Illuminati Empire has been primarily built on deceit, fraud and economic manipulation. These Monarch slaves are economic assassins that are strategically located all over the world in both rich and poor countries. Poor countries with valuable resources are being cheated by these Monarch slaves out of billions by money lending practices that leave them unable to repay the debt and at the mercy of Illuminati control over their economy. The larger parts of these loans are being allocated by the Illuminati. The World Bank together with the IMF accommodates the greater part of the funding used by the “economic assassins”.

One of the conditions of these loans is that ninety percent of them need to be redeemed to companies such as Halliburton or Bechtel. These companies are in the hands of the Illuminati and, consequently, execute large infrastructural projects such as airports, motorways, harbors and power plants in these countries. The receiving countries are left with a debt plus interest. The poor inhabitants of these countries are burdened with these sky-high debts that cannot possibly be repaid. These countries become totally dependent on the Illuminati. The multi-billion-dollar profit from such arrangements go straight to the Illuminati, and from that moment onward they control the entire political system of these countries.

If the Monarch slaves fail, a coup is attempted or a revolution forced with the help of different secret services. If this doesn’t work, a special elite unit carries out liquidations. And when the time has come, the leader or dictator of a country will suffer a “heart attack” or some other accident. If all this fails, the military division of the New World Order comes in. 182

Ecuador is a typical example of a country that has come under the control of the New World Order with the help of Monarch slaves. The riches of oil wells in Ecuador can be compared to those of the Middle East. That’s why the country was forced to give up rainforests in the Amazon to large corporations that belong to the global elite. In the late sixties they started drilling for oil in the Amazon basin. The country had been granted a large loan with the future extraction of oil as pledge. Employees and missionaries of the Summer Institute of Linguistics (SIL), an evangelical community funded by the Rockefellers, encouraged the local Indian people to leave their land. Their reward would consist of free food, drink, clothing, boarding, education and medical treatment. 183

Ecuador had suffered greatly under a series of dictatorships. Jaime Roldós was the first elected president after a long history of dictators. Roldós was the great exception. He recognized some connections politicians on the other side of the Panama Canal seemed not to be noticing. He noticed the undercurrents that threatened to change the world into a world empire making its people mere slaves. Roldós was a man who believed that the rights of the poor were the responsibility of the politicians. He was one of the few politicians in his day that wasn’t afraid to fight the Illuminati. He not only fought for preservation of his land, but also battled the large oil companies.

In 1981, Roldós’ government presented a new law for the extraction of oil to the parliament. The new law anticipated a new basic relation between Ecuador and the oil companies. The leaders of the New World Order expected this example to carry far beyond the Latin American borders and spread through the entire world. They responded as expected: they did everything within their power to make Jaime Roldós look bad. The press portrayed the first elected president of Ecuador as a second Fidel Castro. Lobbyists swarmed to Ecuador with briefcases filled with slush money to undermine the regime. There was also a fierce battle with the Rockefellers’ Texaco.

But Roldós was not easily intimidated. To the contrary, he emphatically pointed out the conspiracy between politics and oil. He openly accused the Summer Institute of Linguistics (SIL) of cooperating with the oil companies and didn’t shy away from evicting them. A few weeks after he had presented his new law for the extraction of oil and the eviction of the SIL missionaries, Roldós warned each company in his country that if they profited from the Ecuadorian people, they had to leave the country immediately. Then something happened that was not totally unexpected. After a long speech in the Atahualpa Station in Quito, Ecuador’s capital, Roldós was killed in a plane crash on May 24, 1981. Roldós had been warned of an attack the very same day and had taken precautions. He left with two airplanes. At the very last moment before his return, a safety adviser convinced him to take the other plane, the one that blew up.

Osvaldo Hurtado became Ecuador’s new president. Not only did he let the Summer Institute of Linguistics resume their work, but also by the end of that year an ambitious plan started. It was the increase of the extraction of oil by Texaco in the Gulf of Guayaquil and in the Amazon basin. The oil companies pumped wastewater directly into the rivers of the Amazon, deliberately killing people, plants and animals. Daily, eighteen million liters of toxic water containing heavy metals, oil and other carcinogens were pumped directly into the rivers.

Ecuador was completely damned. The Illuminati received almost the entire profit of the excavated crude oil. Today the country loses fifty percent of its national budget to the repayment of debts, an impossible feat to accomplish. For education, exactly two percent of housing and medical supplies go to the Ecuadorian treasury. The country is by no means capable in paying off its debt. In early 2006, the government was bold enough to protest against clandestine oil drilling and the illegal repossession of land in the Amazon area. As punishment, the United States imposed several sanctions on Ecuador, among which included a ten-billion-dollar fine. Just like all the other South American countries, Ecuador is backed against a wall!

John Perkins

John Perkins was an “Economic Hitman“ (Monarch slave) for many years. He is responsible for a lot of pain, poverty and even the death of many people. He earned a lot of millions by ruining many Third World countries. In Ecuador they hate him for all he has caused to this country. In his book Confessions of an Economic Hitman it seems he feels sorry and confesses. However he does not mention anything about the people or organizations that operate behind the “Economic Hitmen“. Perkins never named any of our ruling elite in his books.

After being a puppet for the Rockefellers and finishing the work as an “Economic Hitman“, Perkins claimed to have a “New Age“ spiritual awakening.

With his book Confessions of an Economic Hitman, he again is earning a lot of money. His book sells many hundreds of thousands. He is even on the bestseller list of the New York Times. Nobody asks how this is possible. People are not aware that this is only possible because our ruling elite gave him permission. This time they use him to provide disinformation.

Perkins travels the world with his New Age message how to make a better world. Again he deceives for his secret masters. He does more harm than good with his poisonous mixture of truth, errors and lies.

The title of Perkins convention is Financial Terrorism Exposed! He charges $15,000 to perform three talks. People pay $150 (in England) for a talk!

Perkins has created a class system, where standard tickets and premium tickets for his talks are offered, at different prices (lower class and upper class tickets). For those who do not wish to use their credit cards or share personal information online in the process of purchasing tickets, they are penalized with higher prices if they pay at the door. Only those who avail of the corrupt credit system (i.e. the use of credit cards) are offered the reduced price. There are no concessions for the unemployed, single parents and old age pensioners. Standard (lower class) ticket holders are not permitted to get books signed, are forced to sit at the back, and do not get an event program.

Global “Land grab”

We hear that it’s a scientific fact that our planet is warming up. People like Al Gore try to make us believe that soon our planet will perish. They are not telling us that the poles are not melting and that the temperature on Antarctica continues to drop. The fact that warm regions, such as Miami, are experiencing snow and extreme cold along the Gulf Coast is being kept out of the news. A scenario of doom is being concocted to make us frightening and ignorant.

Bribes by the elite think tank American Enterprise Institute (AEI) make sure that economists and scientists keep their mouths shut. 191 There are hardly any scientists among the members of the United Nations climate panel. Known scientists mostly depend on the elite, and are generously rewarded for saying the things the Illuminati want us to hear, causing the truth never to be revealed.

Why want our ruling elite us to believe that our planet is warming up?

The answer is… Global “Land grab”,

How does it work?

The Illuminati made a plan to lend money (with the guarantee of our governments) to the poorest countries with wilderness areas rich with mineral as security. When one of them cannot repay loans it must give up a piece of its territory to one of the Rothschild banks.

At the 4th World Wilderness Congress in 1987, Edmund de Rothschild stated - without any foundation or source - that CO2 is the cause of a man-made global warming. He said that, CO2 had to be caught and transported to the poles and into the Sahara to lower the temperatures there! This absurdity was accepted without discussion at the UN Rio Summit in 1992.
Rothschild made clear that combating the CO2, needs money (our money). For this reason he had founded in 1991 a new bank, The Global Environment Facility (GEF). In 1992 Rothschild had his GEF smuggled into the United Nations UN system. From that moment on high-ranking ministerial officials from 179 countries are on the council of the bank.

The GEF has allocated billions in co-financing, for more than 2,400 projects combating the CO2 in more than 165 developing countries.

Where the charitable GEF bank does gets all his billions from?

Rich UN countries committed themselves to pay $100 billion of climate aid every year to the never-developing countries through Rothschild´s GEF. Governments are donating money and exchange our tax money for useless Special Drawing Rights (SDR´s) on the reimbursement of our loans to Least Developed Countries (LDC) for the Rothschilds to take over up to 30% of the Earth as forfeited security!

A Stroke of Genius

At the Rio Earth Summit (1992), 30% of the world´s surface was defined as “wildernesses” which could be collateralized (i.e. land given as security for loans). It will be no surprise, that those wildernesses were all areas rich with mineral.

Poor nations with areas rich of oil and other minerals will gradually come under the control of the Rothschilds as they struggle to pay the interest, and have to borrow more and more. When a country cannot repay loans to the GEF it must give up a piece of its territory to the Rothschild banks (GEF, IMF, World Bank).

Example: In South America, the GEF lend money to defaulting countries taking the Amazon basin as collateral. Most of the borrowing Nations cannot return the loan. Their wilderness has been forfeited and belongs now to the Rothschilds. That´s what happened with Brazil, Argentina and others. And so it goes on and on. This is the ultimate goal of Rothschild’s New World Order.

Maybe now you will understand why the GEF started funding projects that enable the Russian Federation and nations in Eastern Europe and Central Asia to phase out their use of ozone-destroying chemicals. Imagine what collaterals Russia has in Siberia and the Nord Pole for Rothschild to take over as forfeited security.

The Rothschilds cashes in from all peoples on the planet, letting them toil as his slaves to pay to their GEF bank, in order that they can fleece the poorest countries of the very same planet – or take their land with all its mineral riches as forfeited collateral!

Food Crisis and the Global “Land Grap”

Farmland is one of the best investments of our time. Our elite have taking a long-term position in agriculture, in particular in Africa, leaving the Africans with even less food at their disposal. There have been riots against it in Madagascar and Kenya.

Among others, the Rothschilds use their investments for food-speculation and prospecting for and extraction of minerals. In Haiti, before the earthquake - people could not even afford to buy mud pies with minimal nourishment, because the price of food doubled - in consequence of the production of bio-fuel as a result Edmund de Rothschild’s unscrupulous but very profitable lie about CO2 as driving global warming.

How it must vex the Rothschilds, the failure in Copenhagen. It could have led to an enforceable definition of their system to cashing in increasing CO2 taxes globally and gradually towards the “world community’s” ruin, as well as to their becoming the invisible control of the world. But they have got time. They know their time is near - after nearly 250 years of hard mole work.
“In fact nobody should know hunger or thirst. Unfortunately a minority has taken possession of the gold, the silver, the source materials, the water, the best ground and the petroleum. These resources are now in the hands of a small elite group.” Hugo Chávez, the President of Venezuela during his Christmas speech (2005)

Along with interest in natural resources such as oil, gold and silver, one of the most important objectives of the Illuminati is complete control over the food supplies. He, who controls the food supplies, is also able to control the nations.

For the planned world government the penetration, in all aspects of life, is an important condition for central control. This means that there is no place for the traditional production of food in the global and deregulated world economy. The traditional farmers are in the way of the plans of the power behind the scenes! In the future New World Order the farmers are superfluous. 197

Through meticulously executed cancellation of taxes and financial aids and the opening of the free market, we have come to an overproduction of butter, meat and many other products. This caused a shift in power from arable farming and stockbreeding to the international food industry and big trade corporations. The traditional farm has been pushed aside by the big specialized companies.

The objectives of the Illuminati have been agreed upon in the World Trade Organization (WTO) to which all European governments compelled themselves. In the end, all the market forces in the food industry will be eliminated, and each product will have a fixed price on the world market. This will mean the end of independent farming as we know it. First it will affect the farmers, then complete regions and then... the consumer.

For years, all sorts of food has been dumped on the world market against minimum prices, causing farmers to go bankrupt. They are driven away from their land, which falls in the hands of banks and corporations. This development is going on all over the world. In the past couple of years alone, two million farmers have gone bankrupt in the United States. The percentage of agricultural land has been reduced by fifty percent in the seven original countries of the European Economic Community. In 1999, the number of farms with more than two hectares was reduced by five percent. In 2000, 300,000 jobs were lost in the agricultural sector. In Europe, forty percent of all farmers live below the poverty line!

In 1960, Germany had two million farmers. In 1980 there were only half a million farmers. These frightening changes are no coincidence. They are all part of a cold-blooded expropriation of land and of trade monopolization... the way of the future. Could all this be just coincidence? In each case the mad cow disease (BSE) and the foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) crises had the exact result the ruling power was looking for. The Illuminati saw the crises as a way to destroy a huge part of the arable farming and stockbreeding sector. No other government has misused crises to oppress agricultural politics as much as Germany. Both the Schröder and Kohl administration followed the agricultural reform course of the EEC-commission in Brussels, and with that they turned Germany into the biggest agricultural grave digger of Europe.

The farmers associations have also pulled wool over the eyes of their gullible supporters. The dubious wording used to justify their actions was comparable to that regularly used by politicians. It is crystal clear that the EEC-politicians have killed almost all traditional agricultural structures in Europe.

Today, the production and processing of food will be handled by a few cartels and the food trade limited to some central international companies. Soon the complete control over food will be managed by an organization called the World Food Authority, an institution that will be like the United Nations. This institution will decide over the division of food. It will be able to decide over food shortages and even famine wherever and whenever one wants.

David Byrne, member of the European Commission whose responsibilities include health and consumer interests, announced the precursor of such an organization in 2002. The European Food Authority will be responsible for the control of food in Europe. That way European agriculture and stockbreeding will be completely at mercy of the ideological fanaticism of the invisible power behind the scenes.
Through mergers, takeovers and an aggressive urge for expansion, the ruling power has greatly enlarged its hold on the international market and food industry. The multinationals (Monsanto, DuPont, Novartis, Unilever, etc.) dictate the market supply and demand. They have complete control over the food industry and over almost every item of food. They determine the way our food is processed and what we eat.

Reducing the World Population

The same people who run the blood banking as well as the money banking industries have funded, historically, eugenics, racial hygiene, genocide, depopulation, family planning, maternal and child health where they make and deliver vaccines, and contaminated blood supplies. They have put a lot of money into reducing world populations.” Dr. Leonard Horowitz

In his book The True History of the Bilderberg Conference (Utrecht 2007), Daniel Estulins shows reports on the Bilderberg Conference of May 1973. The report discussed the overpopulation of our planet, which needs to be reduced by billions of people (at least three-quarters). Population reduction is a fundamental aim of the invisible elite. The Illuminati goal is clear; to only have a small elite and a specific number of controllable slaves that remain. Eventually those slaves will serve one purpose alone: the production of new slaves in quantities the reigning elite find necessary. Many years ago the elite carried out three separate studies to research to what extent a population explosion would undermine their plans. These studies led to the one conclusion: that the population growth must be decreased drastically. Our invisible rulers then committed to doing everything necessary to restrict population growth. Publications and quotes from the ruling elite clearly show that plans were being made for genocide of unprecedented magnitude. The world population rapidly faces decay, and many will fall victim to the New World Order.

Already in 1944 a campaign was started through the Federal Security Agency to add fluoride to the water system distributed by state and city waterworks. Only a few people know that this fluoride, which is supposed to stop dental decay, had been used as rat poison for over fifty years. Nowadays this rat poison is added to drinking water worldwide and can also be found in most tooth-pastes and in many foods, such as table salt. Besides the fact that fluoride may cause many health conditions, it also has the side effect desired by the invisible elite: it makes the human brain impressionable and numb.

The Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the largest international pro-abortion organization in the world, was founded by the elite as early as 1933 for several objectives. The organization profits from its almost fanatical intensive worldwide commitment to abortion, birth restriction, and propagating free sex for young people and is supported with taxpayer money. The organization’s true activities are jealously guarded from the public. The organization’s own stated purpose is very revealing:

“To provide leadership, making effective means of voluntary fertility regulation including contraception, abortion, sterilization, and infertility services available and fully accessible to all as a central element of reproductive health; stimulating and sponsoring relevant biomedical, socioeconomic, and demographic research; developing appropriate information, education and training programs to increase knowledge about human reproduction and sexuality.”

To many it may come as a surprise that unborn children do not matter to UNICEF. In third world countries this organization supports projects in the sphere of abortion. UNICEF has been caught illegally sterilizing 300.000 African women. These women were vaccinated against a disease; only the vaccine contained a little extra dosage, causing sterility in the women. When UNICEF was caught their response was:

“We don’t understand how this could have happened; it must have been an error in the production process.”

UNICEF, the International Planned Parenthood Federation, the World Health Organization (WHO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and the United Nations Population Council all work together to stop the population growth by means of anti-conception, sterilization and abortion. 199

The elite succeeded in having the majority of mankind cooperating willingly with their program! First, they convinced independent experts that abortion, sterilization and a properly set up control of the population growth is crucial to mankind’s survival. Meanwhile, the strategy of anti-conception with pills, IUDs, sterilizations and abortions has decreased the population growth of industrial countries by half. This is a fundamental part of the long-term politics of our invisible elite!
The annual number of legally performed abortions worldwide is thirty-five million, with an additional twenty-five million being illegal abortions. The combined total of abortions per year is an ample sixty million. The total number of human lives terminated by abortion each year exceeds the total number of casualties from the six-year Second World War, which is estimated to have cost fifty million lives.

It is important to point out the fact that our Creator considers the life of an unborn child to be precious, even in the very first developing stages after conception (Psalm 139:13-16). The unborn child that develops in the womb is not just a lump of tissue, but it follows a strict pattern as if following instructions that are imprinted in a computer. This is the reason that God has stipulated that someone will be held accountable for harm that befalls an unborn child (Exodus 21:22-23).

The Dutch Parliament accepted a law regarding euthanasia on April 10, 2001, making it the first country in the world to do so. Minister Borst of Public Health shocked the world with the words:

“The mission has been completed.”

What did the minister mean by these words? Whose mission had been accomplished? Were the invisible elite finally satisfied? While the ink of the law was still drying, the same minister paved the way for a debate about Drion’s pill. This suicide pill supposedly meant for aged people, who are tired of life, will not be severely restricted much longer. Euthanasia and Drion’s pill are only just the beginning.

The Dutch newspaper Metro reported on April 12, 2007, that of 300 researched deaths among babies, half of them died by active termination of life (euthanasia) in the first year! As a result of this the Dutch Health Council advised minister Ab Klink that more research must be done into the life cycle of children who are being born with a severe handicap:

“Clear conditions must be formulated under which doctors can end the life of young babies!”

Dutch Mobile Death Squads 2015
The coming brave New World Order features euthanasia by the state. This is called “Quietus”.

In the Netherlands mobile medical death units already are used for patients who meet the criteria for euthanasia but whose doctors are unwilling to carry it out. Dutch Health Minister, Edith Schippers suggested that not only patients with no hope of recovery, but also cases involving mental health problems or an inability to consent to euthanasia because of dementia, could be enlisted in. The state wants to provide euthanasia even on a wider basis, to include people with chronic psychiatric problems, with Alzheimer's or dementia and people who feel they have “completed” their life. New guidelines will consider factors such as income or a patient’s social life.

The Dutch government has said repeatedly that euthanasia is only administered at the explicit request of the patient. These are empty assurances. More than 4,000 euthanasia deaths in Holland each year are done without the patient’s consent. Thousands of frightened, elderly people in Holland carry anti-euthanasia cards.

The Dutch medical profession has an ignominious record when it comes to respect for life. Apart altogether from its liberal abortion laws, Dutch doctors kill scores of babies after birth each year and justify this infanticide on the inherently discriminatory basis that they can decide that a life is of such low quality that it ought not to be lived.

In the future anyone who is no longer productive; such as the elderly, handicapped, etc. will be lawfully killed!

Contagious Diseases

In the last years many new and very contagious diseases have surfaced. A great deal of these diseases originated in laboratories, with examples being a new type of tuberculosis that is resistant to antibiotics, a new type of cholera, a new and deadly type of meningitis, Ebola and the Bird Flu. These diseases are used to keep mankind uneasy and in constant fear while reducing the population growth on our planet.

In his book Emerging Viruses: AIDS & Ebola, Accident or Intentional? (Tetrahedron 1996), Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz claims that amongst other diseases, AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) originated in a laboratory! As we will see, there is sufficient evidence that AIDS is an artificially created form of the black plague. AIDS disrupts the immune system of the infected patient. As a consequence of this weakened immune system, an AIDS patient will more likely die from one or another infection.

The Patriot, which is issued in New Delhi, wrote on July 4, 1984:

“AIDS is a type of chemical biological warfare, which has been developed in the Chemical Biological Warfare Laboratory of the American army in Fort Detrick (Frederick, Maryland).”

In the New York newspaper Native, a letter from an anonymous source stated that the writer had worked in the Fort Detrick laboratory in question. 203

In 1986 Jacob and Lilly Segal, two experts in the field of virology and microbiology, published a flyer with the title AIDS, Not from Africa, But an Evil from America and distributed it in English-speaking African countries.

The South African newspaper Saturday Star issued in 1992 stated:

“AIDS is a weapon manufactured by the whites to weaken Africa: an invention from the West to drastically limit the birth rate of the black population on this continent. AIDS is the largest destabilizing factor of the African economic and political situation.”

The London Times issued on May 11, 1987, reported on its front page:

“Smallpox vaccination cause of AIDS: This particular vaccination program was carried out in Africa in the Seventies and was conducted by the World Health Organization (WHO). In the exact areas in Africa where the vaccination took place, most AIDS victims can be found.”

The number of AIDS casualties in Africa is alarming. Nowadays, the estimated number of HIV-positive individuals in Africa lies somewhere between sixty and seventy percent of the total population! In some of this continent’s countries, AIDS patients occupy eighty percent of all available hospital beds. This, however, is only the tip of the iceberg. Within a period of ten years the larger part of the inhabitants of the African continent will die as a result of AIDS.

In Africa, the media continually encourages the use of condoms. The publicity about the condom as a weapon against AIDS does not only cause birth control, it also has a misplaced and contradictory effect. The supply of condoms is utterly irresponsible because it contributes to the spread of AIDS. Condoms give a misplaced feeling of security and lead to more risky sexual behavior. Condoms may not only tear or glide off, they are also porous. Statistics show that out of 100 sexual acts with condoms, fifteen fail because spermatozoa penetrate the latex. 204 Given the fact that AIDS microorganisms are 450 smaller than a spermatozoid, it’s fairly obvious that the use of condoms involves enormous risk of AIDS infection. 205 Instead of promoting the use of condoms, Africans should be told of the necessity of celibacy and monogamy as the only possible way to avoid infection.

Several virologists deny the existence of the HIV virus. According to them, HIV has never been scientifically proven or documented. According to the well-known German virologist Dr. Lanka, there is only a general consensus regarding the existence of AIDS:

“What kind of viruses don’t exist. They are being proclaimed by politicians and as an international scientific consensus acknowledged as a proven fact.” In an interview Dr. Lanka added: “The statement that there is such a thing as a pathogen virus is an obvious deceit, a fatal lie with dramatic consequences. The bacteria in our cells are called chondriosomes and cannot leave the cell because they are dependent on the metabolism within the cell. Viruses are able to do this. They leave their metabolism behind in the cell. Afterward they are no longer of use in the cell and they leave. Outside the cell they aid other cells by providing them with materials and energy. These scientifically proven viruses have a mutual building and supporting effect in the very complicated biochemical process. Not in the least damaging. Also in other diseases like the Bird Flu virus one has never been able to discover a structure which can be typified as a virus. Neither in the sick organ, nor in the bodily fluids.”

Most people believe that modern medical science and all scientists involved want what is best for us. This is a grave misunderstanding. We have been made to believe that we should trust doctors and governments and are convinced that they lobby for our wellbeing, a fatal error on our part.

In 2005 there was a global warning for the mutated flu virus H5N1, better known as the Bird Flu. It is claimed that this virus will claim millions of victims in the near future. As with the true origin of HIV, the Bird Flu virus has never been proven and there was never a connection between the Bird Flu and the contamination of birds or people. The media, however, did not fail to print the news on the front pages of newspapers or broadcast it on television. Sick migratory birds from Asia, supposedly infected with the Bird Flu, traveled thousands of kilometers over the seas to infect local poultry in Europe and Africa. It is remarkable that these migrating birds don’t seem to have any problems with traveling thousands of kilometers. The media reported that all chickens with suspicious symptoms were being tested for the H5N1 virus. The results of these tests remained inconclusive.

Neither in the body of man or animal, nor in plant or dirt has there ever been discovered a protein structure that confirms the existence of the Bird Flu virus. Proof for the Bird Flu virus H5N1 amongst birds is actually scant. The catastrophic danger lies entirely elsewhere. As is the case with many feared deadly epidemics, this is about a very carefully planned action with a political motive of creating fear and insecurity amongst the world’s citizens. Furthermore, governments try, despite the fact that vaccinations have proven their damage to our health on a large scale, to convince people to get annual flu shots, which yield billions of euros and dollars. The same leaders that control important aspects of our respective societies control all major pharmaceutical companies in the world. In the case of the Bird Flu, we will experience how politicians will turn us over to their employers and true leaders by forcing us, through the use of fear, receive vaccinations. In fact, an entire book could be written about the many networks and mutual arrangements between political and social world leaders with those actually pulling the strings.

In truth there is absolutely no danger of contamination with Bird Flu. According to experts, these birds have actually died of stress, bad living conditions and lack of food. It is likely that keeping of these chickens and other poultry in cages with little to no space to move about is causing their deaths.

The media continually publishes pictures of the Bird Flu virus, showing them as round microorganisms that are supposedly viruses. Virologist Dr. Lanka explained:

“They are actually artificially fabricated parts of protein and fat. Any given micro-biologist can easily recognize and confirm this. The pictures show perfectly normal cells. Any given micro-biologist can research and confirm this as well. Whenever anyone asks for a scientific explanation that concerns the virus, nobody responds! When checking with press agencies about the source of the ´telling´ pictures, they always refer one to the American epidemiologists of the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) of the Pentagon.”

The outbreaks of Bird Flu caused an increase in anxiety amongst the European population. The Dutch, for instance, were more worried about an outbreak of the virus than about the economy, safety or crime. People were inundated with information about virus inhibitors such as Tamiflu. With this anti-virus remedy, a pandemic could be prevented. It is said that Tamiflu does not cure the disease but only relieves the symptoms. Research shows the opposite. It is a given fact that each anti-virus always damages the body to a small or larger lasting extent.

A large number of people, in fact, died after using Tamiflu. The side effects of these virus inhibitors are almost identical to that of the symptoms of a nasty flu: rapid onset of fever, muscle aches, shivering, sore throat, coughing and exhaustion. When infected people use Tamiflu as medication, it will cause more deaths than necessary. The culprits of this disease will use the fatal results of Tamiflu as proof that there is grave danger with the Bird Flu virus.

Many Turkish people were distraught when they learned that the fourteen-year-old boy, Mehmet Ali Koçyigit, and his fifteen-year-old sister, Fatma, had died of Bird Flu. The father of the children said that at first they only had mild symptoms which resembled a regular flu. After the children had taken Tamiflu they became much sicker, and eventually died. These children and other people had the bad luck of falling into the hands of the “H5N1-hunters”, which consequently led to them taking enormous dosages of the virus inhibitors to “suppress” the phantom virus. Many died of organ failure in hermetically sealed plastic tents.

Already in 2004 I received information about plans to subject people who had contracted any kind of flu to chemotherapy. On March 8, 2006, the time was right to begin preparing individuals for the planned chemotherapy against Bird Flu. The renowned medical trade journal The Lancet first published that chemotherapy may also be effective in treating people with Bird Flu. The journal claims:

“The chemotherapy is largely available and not expensive.”

Vaccinations
More and more, the medical establishment propagates the use of vaccinations. Politicians support these campaigns in all areas. Over and over again we are told that various infections and diseases pose the greatest human threat. The drawbacks to all of these vaccination programs are being kept a secret.

Vaccinations serve the primary purpose of injecting pathogens into the body to enable the body to create antibodies against these very same pathogens. However, vaccinations appear to be the major cause for many diseases and for much suffering in today’s world! Diseases such as cancer, syphilis, AIDS, autism and other life threatening disorders are directly related to vaccinations.

The medical world suspects that vaccinations against the mumps and the measles could be, amongst others, the cause of Crohn’s disease.

Forced vaccination against smallpox, causing the human bloodstream to be poisoned with an animal-lymph, was one of the darkest pages in the history of the last century! After meticulous research and studying of the facts and, in connection to the observations and experiences of many doctors, one can now conclude that instead of protection from the smallpox the vaccination only caused many diseases.

The most primary causes of developing cancer are the carcinogens that end up in the bloodstream. In 1991 the American Cancer Society predicted that by the year 2010 one out of three people would get some form of cancer. In 1901 this number was one out of twenty-five, which means that we are dealing with an increase of 800 percent in the area of cancer alone.

Today, many governments worldwide say that children must be vaccinated against Hepatitis B. This is a typical example of how our leaders control the medical world. The vaccination against Hepatitis B is regarded as highly dangerous and extremely controversial. Many doctors are concerned that the vaccine may be contaminated with the microorganism that causes AIDS. Nevertheless many governments are making preparations to inject every newborn within twelve hours after birth with the vaccine. The big question is: why? Hepatitis B is a pathogen mainly found among intravenous drug users, prostitutes and homosexuals.

Food Poisoning
The last few years the world has been confronted again and again with outrageous food scandals, like dioxin in eggs, meat with bad hormones, toxic apples, genetically manipulated vegetables, Swine Fever, Foot-and-Mouth Disease (FMD), Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE) and the Bird Flu. The food industry continues to receive negative publicity. What is going on with our food, and where do these disastrous developments come from?

Our health highly depends on the quality of our food. If ever we would come to realize how the elite manipulate the quality of our food, we would be scared out of our wits. Many of the food products we can buy in a supermarket today are not really foods anymore. Instead, they are processed, having therefore lost their essential nutritional value. Although most of the nutritional content in many of our food products has been depleted, we are constantly being told that the processing of the products is aimed at improving the nutritional value and the quality of food. This so-called “refinement” is a big lie; synthetic, inorganic vitamins that are not tolerated by our metabolic systems have replaced essential vitamins and minerals.

Almost seventy percent of all diseases and conditions are a direct result of wrong, unhealthy foods! Most of our “light” products contain aspartame, an artificial sweetener that acts like nitroglycerine to our body and eats away at the blood-brain barrier and important organ linings.

Genetically enhanced products have also slipped into our diet. Genetically manipulated food poses a serious threat to our health. Thorough research has shown that rats being fed genetically manipulated potatoes will have severe dysfunctions in their organ systems.

Already, the final steps are taken to reach full manipulation of our food. The last step involves the radiation of our foods with radioactive isotopes such as Cobalt-60. These isotopes have, just like other radioactive materials, the ability to initiate genetic mutations and other changes in humans. Many scientists have now indicated that radiation of foods decreases nutritional value and can cause cancer. Animals that were being fed radiated foods have experienced changes in their white blood cell counts, damage to their kidneys and deleterious effects to their immune system. Research also shows that these animals were also subject to stronger growth of tumors, indicating that several types of cancer can be linked to a changed combination of our foods. Consuming these foods for an extended period of time could also cause certain kinds of cancer in humans.
To stop public resistance to our food products being radiated, our ruling elite have purposely poisoned them. Deliberately, they have spread fear of contaminated foods in people by enabling, for instance, salmonella poisoning in chicken products and the E-coli problem in beef products. As usual, the conspirators cause the problem and then offer the “best” solution to the problem. Due to the indifference and ignorance of the world population, this method of divide and conquer by the world elite always results in success and further advancement of their cause. The deliberate deterioration of the health condition of the world population and the use of poison in the environment and in our food supplies provides our leaders with the desired result: reducing the world population by the occurrence of diseases that eventually lead to death.

The Movie Industry

The expansion and the propaganda of occultism is one of the many goals of the Illuminati. David Rockefeller is part of Lucifer’s Trust Management. In one of Lucifer’s Trust publications entitled Externalization of the Hierarchy, we are told who will rule the earth in the coming days… His name is Lucifer! Sanat (Satan) is the ruler of the spiritual world (Shambala).

Delta Airways (Boeing) belongs to the Rockefellers, as does Standard Oil, which uses the satanic pentagram (five-pointed star) as its company logo! The five-pointed star is one of the most preferred signs of the Freemasons, witches, satanists and other demon-inspired groups. Time and again this star is spread amongst the public effectively. The five-pointed star appears on many flags and military vehicles, in movies, television programs, literature, clothes and shoes. It also is present during Christmas in a frightfully exclusive and particularly dominant way. It is truly ironic that during this period the satanic five-pointed star is on display everywhere in the streets and shops. What is also worrying is the increase in the number of cartoons in which the satanic star appears. In films, the five-pointed star symbolizes “good”, which is transferred onto kids on a subconscious level.

To be able to subliminally influence the masses on a continuous basis, one of the tools that the power elite use is the movie industry; and one of their most powerful tools is Hollywood. The most important part of the movie industry is in the hands of the Illuminati, and their interest is in being able to reach a mass audience. They also produce movies that are filled with the Monarch propaganda. In most movies and popular television soaps, Monarch slaves play the lead roles.

Modern day soaps have totally brainwashed a generation and left us feeling that we operate under freedom when in reality we are operating under hours and hours of conditioning. Soaps influence our behavior. Some of them go on for over thirty years. People know more about what goes on in their favorite soap than what happens in their own lives. Worse still, they become a (virtual) family. What do soaps teach us, besides the entire arsenal of dirty tricks that are used in social conflicts? We learn how to betray each other, how to cheat on our spouse, and how to accumulate personal gain to the detriment of others. After seventy years, this has clearly left its mark on society. Whether they realize it or not, television has its influence: Monkey see, monkey do!

Hollywood is a gigantic center for mind control. Lieutenant-Colonel Dave Grossman is a specialist in the field of programming. He trains soldiers to kill people on command. In his book On Killing, Grossman writes that the world of entertainment uses the same tools the army uses to train soldiers in killing people. According to Grossman, there is, however, a difference:

“Soldiers are trained to kill on command, but kids are trained to kill whenever they feel like it!”

Grossman writes that the training to kill starts with cartoons:

“It starts with innocent cartoons and, as they grow older, goes on with very violent actions on the screen. At that point, parents start to forbid their children to watch movies with age restrictions (violence, bad language, etc.). These movies show stabbings, spraying blood, gunfights, bodies being riddled with bullets and other atrocities.”

Walt Disney was the man that gave us cartoons, theme parks and amazing movies for all ages. Disney has become the largest corporation in the area of entertainment. Most people are convinced that Disney films are both harmless and pleasant.

Walt Disney is one of the Illuminati’s best deceptions! The treacherous image of “the wholesome Disney movie” is a major triumph of the Illuminati. Behind Disney entertainment dark things lurk: the so-called snuff movies (in which people are actually being killed on-camera) and hard and violent porn. Joe Roth, director of Walt Disney Studios, also heads daughter companies like Touchstone, Miramax and Hollywood Pictures. These companies are front companies for pornographic movies. However, the main public will never see the pornography that has been produced for years by the Illuminati.
Walt Disney was, in reality, a sadistic porn king pin who enjoyed making pornographic movies. Behind the scenes at Disney, we also find white slavery, mind control of Monarch slaves and the temptation of several generations to witchcraft. Nobody in the world has managed to sell witchcraft as effectively as the Disney brothers. 248

- The well-known movie Return from Witches Mountain was one of the most powerful encouragements for witchcraft in its day. Mind control and Monarch slaves were paraded on-screen deliberately.

- One of the biggest temptations to witchcraft and Satanism is the world-famous production of the Star Wars movies. Everything in this trilogy has to do with Satanism and witchcraft, which became prolonged and even more pronounced with each subsequent episode. Like many other Hollywood productions, Star Wars is used to program people into becoming Monarch slaves. And all that under the cover of innocent entertainment.

The film company ABC produced the Disney vehicle Wild Palms, a movie that clearly showed how mind-control works and how the Illuminati live. It is about the way children are kidnapped and babies are switched at birth. It even showed how cartoons are used to teach children to kill. Wild Palms also showed the interconnection of the bloodlines through deliberate marriages amongst the Illuminati. The name “Illuminati”, however, is not mentioned anywhere in the movie, but the similarities between “The Father” and the leadership of the Illuminati are quite obvious. In the movie the slaves addressed the programmers as “Father” and “Mother”, with one of the main characters stating:

“There will be a day when we wake up and realize that this country isn’t ours, and nobody will give a damn.”

The movie showed that nothing happens by accident. The movie’s producer, Bruce Wagner, clearly showed his knowledge of mind control. The fact that the movie was produced and released is testament to the arrogance of the Illuminati, who target and program thousands of people for criminal intentions. The masses do not realize that there is no difference between the fictional violence in these movies and the violence that we see in the real world! It would appear that the Illuminati assume that, should they be recognized, “nobody will give a damn.”

Parents and adults will be shocked to learn what lies hidden in Disney’s cartoons. The master plan of the Illuminati involves disturbing the family life by setting children against parents and encouraging violence. Ultimately, the Illuminati are working towards establishing a violent society. To achieve their objective, there has to be a lot of violence in movies, on TV and in cartoons. Parents do not realize that their children are continuously being exposed to a cocktail of occultism, witchcraft and subliminal pornography. As an example, the animated movie The Little Mermaid contains various pornographic images, incorporating male genitalia on the cover of the video.

The occult world of black magic also supports Disney’s movie industry and, as early as the 1920s and 1930s, knew what had to be done in the name of the master plan of the New World Order:

- A 1920 Disney movie shows children skipping class successfully, shoplifting and playing a cheerful game of hockey. A veritable encouragement of bad behavior.

- The 1925 movie Alice Stage Struck shows how little Alice is bound and gagged, and dragged to a lumber saw. The Illuminati cleverly address the curiosity of the “child” inside each adult person. The Illuminati want to show that occult witchcraft is a common phenomenon.

- In the early 1940s, Disney experienced financial difficulties. Nelson Rockefeller helped out by paying for the production of cartoons about South America. The Three Caballeros shows an illustrious Donald Duck chasing after South American women.

- In 1934, Walt Disney made a cartoon about the goddess of secret religions called Persephone. In this movie, entitled The Goddess of Spring, Satan abducts Persephone to take her as his bride and bring her to the underworld. After six months she is allowed to return to earth. It is remarkable that the rituals surrounding Persephone are the same as the rituals that have their origins within the Illuminati.

- The 1951 Donald Duck cartoon Corn Chips shows how Donald hits his nephews Huey and Louis over the head. Huey and Louis later return with a bag of stolen popcorn, which they empty over Donald’s front yard. The “eye for an eye” principle is, dialectically speaking, completely justified in Disney movies.

- In the movie Alice in Wonderland Disney shows how Alice walks away from her responsibilities and partakes in wonderful and carefree adventures.

In Disney’s The Little Mermaid the castles are male sexual organs.
- In the 1951 cartoon Get Rich Quick, Goofy wins a huge amount of money at a poker game. His wife, who first was against him playing poker, immediately forgives him when she sees how much he has won. Quite a reprehensible form of dialectics.

- Disney’s Gargoyle cartoons were made for television and are clear examples of Satan’s demonic teachings. They tell the story of a race of demons that protect the city of New York. One of the gargoyles is even called “Demonia”.

- In another cartoon, Mickey Mouse is shown sniffing cocaine!

Whoever thinks that Disney only creates fairytales is very much mistaken. In these fairytales, facts are replaced with fiction to facilitate mind control. Both Snow White and Pinocchio contain occult principles like death and resurrection. Snow White and the Seven Dwarves contains very important occult theme’s that were used to program Monarch children.

- In 1940, Disney produced the two animated movies Pinocchio and Fantasia, which were used by the Illuminati to program children. Although Fantasia was a flop, it was a perfect mind control tool.

- In the 1950s, the Illuminati used Disney’s animated movies Alice in Wonderland and The Wizard of Oz as a basis for programming Monarch slaves.

- On October 27, 1954 Walt Disney’s Wonderful World of Color, a celebration of Disney’s movies, was broadcasted on television. The words “wonderful”, “world” and “color” were chosen deliberately by an Illuminati mind programmer. Specific colors and color combinations were chosen for the Disney cartoons and theme parks, all as part of mind control.

- In the Magician’s Apprentice (a cartoon about the ancient theme of total control over the earth), we see Mickey Mouse getting involved in a love-hate relationship. Such a love-hate relationship is used to traumatize and program slaves.

- In America, the television program The Wonderland Show was shown in several states. This show was designed to program the thoughts of children. We see girls walk through a mirror with the three lives of Thomasina, accompanied by the song “I’m a Little Teapot”. Eventually, someone indeed is turned into a teapot!

The appearance of a fictional reality is what makes these movies so dangerous. Behind this façade hides the ideology of occultism, which is passed down from generation to generation and is one of the most far-reaching aspects of occultism in the world.

Walt Disney worked hard on creating a seemingly benign and innocent image and was not afraid to squash property owners, steal ideas and leave a trail of victims. For decades, Walt Disney was a heavy drinker and alcoholic. However, with all the power of the media behind him he had nothing to worry about, because nothing ever reached the light of day. These kinds of façades of moral purity and sobriety usually hide extremely sinister and satanic practices. Adolf Hitler, for example, was someone who washed his hands several times a day. Walt Disney washed his hands several times an hour! It is important to know in this respect that an alter ego that is forced to take on a different personality or to carry out an Illuminati command compulsively washes his hands in pretence of innocence. Walt Disney was a Freemason in the thirty-second degree and a dedicated supporter of occultism and born in Spain, out of wedlock. It is suspected that Isabelle Zamora Ascendo was his mother. Upon investigating his history, it was discovered that this Hollywood mogul was related to the Bush family, porn king Hugh Heffner, Princess Diana and Hollywood star Clint Eastwood. Many researchers have studied Walt Disney’s legacy, and those who found out his well hidden secrets and published them faced terrible hardships.

The Music Industry

The Illuminati control famous movie stars, writers, directors and also musicians. What could have a greater impact on our lives than the music we listen to? Not only is music everywhere, there is no doubt that it influences our behavior. Unlike books or movies, which always involve some sort of cognitive process, music directly touches our hearts. Because we are most susceptible to music, we are also influenced by it most easily. We assume that the intellectual and emotional development of children is stimulated by certain kinds of music. It has also been proven that certain physical handicaps can be positively influenced by music. Classical music, especially, has a very positive influence on stimulating both mental acuity and the growth of specific flowers and plants.

However, there are also dark sides to music. Scientific research indicates, for example, that certain kinds of music stimulate antisocial behavior. Listeners of heavy metal and rap, for instance, lead much more turbulent lives than those that have a preference for other types of music. This means a lot: heart and consciousness can be influenced by music in both positive and negative ways. Both music and magic are known to go hand in hand in every culture. People can enter into a trance by powerfully repetitive rhythms, and music can even cause mass hysteria and is known to lead to “demonic possession”.

When we watch a live concert, we see that music can influence mass audiences in such a way that individuals lose control of their emotions and become part of the crowd. This is a typical and dangerous phenomenon of music. In the case of rock concerts, it often leads to excesses. During a concert in San Diego, for example, a band had an audience of 15,000 chanting “Natas” (Satan).

Heavy metal, rap and other similar music tend to contain lyrics that glorify the sexual humiliation of women, hatred and violence, racial segregation and Satanism. The following six themes keep popping up in rap and heavy metal as things to be glorified:

- Drugs and alcohol abuse
- Drugs and alcohol abuse
- Violence against women and authority figures
- Power
- Sexual abuse
- Racism
- Suicide
- Satanism

Time and again, youngsters are given messages through these types of music. Youngsters who get into trouble almost always do so due to the influence of drugs, alcohol, violent music and Satanism. The result is an increase of criminality in child rape, grave desecrations, animal mistreatment and, increasingly, murder. The link between certain kinds of music and sexual abuse, suicide and antisocial behavior has been researched and scientifically documented. The programmed rock star Jimi Hendrix once said:

“I know that my music penetrates the subconscious, and that is exactly what we want.”

Heavy metal is continuously linked to drugs, suicide and depression amongst youngsters. An advisor to a radio station even called it “music that can be used to get someone to kill their parents.” Many people are also worried about the connection between heavy metal and Satanism. Police officers point out that this kind of music stimulates Satanism among youths.

Have you ever wondered why people who know absolutely nothing about music and who have no talent whatsoever manage to stay at the top of the charts? And why people with talent and ideas seem to go nowhere career-wise?

Many singers and groups have appealed to the powers of the occult by making pacts with the devil in which they literally sell their souls to Satan. Satan promises them fame, wealth and all the earthly pleasures they want. In return, the musicians are expected to pay a steep price: to completely surrender and submit to Satan’s will and to serve him in all aspects of their lives, including converting others to Satanism through their music. After making their unholy pact with the devil, many singers and groups conspire to gain access to inspiration and supernatural power. Most of them not only glorify Satan and hell, they are also guided and controlled by demons.
- Little Richard once said: “Some bands, before they go on stage, stand inside a circle and drink chalices filled with blood. They fall on their knees and worship Satan.”

- When the Red Hot Chili Peppers were given the MTV-Award in 1992, they commented: “First of all we want to thank Satan for this.”

- Jon Bon Jovi swore: “For Rock’n’Roll I would murder my mother, I would sell my soul!”

- Neil Diamond said: “I swear that I completely give my mind, body and soul to the plans of our commander Satan.”

- The band “Venom” showed the true nature of its music with the lyrics: “We are not here to entertain you, we preach Satan! Listen to him!”

- The world famous guitarist John McLaughlin was sure that his Mahavishnu Orchestra was possessed by a spirit, “One night when we were performing, a spirit took possession of my playing. It was no longer me playing the guitar!”

- The band AC/DC is known to roar: “I bring you to hell, I will have you, Satan will have you.”

- Frank Zappa once boasted: “I am the devil’s advocate; we have our own worshippers, the groupies. These girls give themselves to the musicians as though they are making a sacrifice.”

- Rock star Marilyn Manson, priest of the Church of Satan once said: “If I am lucky I will go down in history as the man who put an end to Christianity.” He claimed that his album - Antichrist Superstar - had been given to him in a supernatural way: “I am certain that every time somebody hears my new record God is destroyed in that person’s soul.”

Marilyn Manson tripped on stage and tore up the Bible and cursed and ranted against Jesus Christ. On his T-shirt was written, “Kill your parents” and “I love Satan”. He was certainly not stage-acting!

- The band members of “Slayer”, one of the most famous rock bands in history, considered themselves a group of warriors of the gates of hell: “We believe in the god Satan.” The group’s records sold by the millions! Satan is praised in every single one of their songs.

- To Led Zeppelin’s Jimmy Paige, a performance was really a ritual in which his successful band tapped into magical sources, no matter how dangerous.
that was.

- The heavy metal band “Black Sabbath” once wrote on the cover of one of their albums: “And you, poor sod, with this album in your hands, have sold your soul, because you will be caught swiftly in the hellish rhythm of this devilish music.”

Another one of their songs has the following lyric: “Jesus, take this meal, because it is the meal of the Antichrist, the 666.”

- After Ozzy Osbourne quit Black Sabbath, he habitually bit the throats of birds during his solo shows. This went on until someone in the audience threw a bat on the stage. When Ozzy bit the animal’s throat, he had to undergo a series of painful rabies shots. The following line is typical of Osbourne: “I was raised by a demon, we want your soul, put an end to your messed up life, kill your parents, nobody will cry about it.” It will not surprise anyone that, in one of his lyrics, Ozzy addressed the biggest New Age occultist and satanist Aleister Crowley.

Especially in the 1960s, occultism was a major influence on rock music, which was directly attributed to Aleister Crowley. In this period, Crowley books were also popular with California’s subcultures. Under the immediate influence of Crowley, Anton LaVey and Kenneth Anger founded the Church of Satan, which attracted many famous directors and actors. Roman Polanski, Sammy Davis, Jr., and Jane Mansfield were among the members of this church. Crowley’s writing also inspired Charles Manson’s “Final Church”. In 1969, the members of this sect killed eight people! After this period, rock music increasingly moved towards Satanism.

In a 1985 interview with the newspaper New Solidarity, Ben Aaron, at the time the third highest member of the Church of Satan, said that it was thanks to his church that bands like Blue Oyster Cult, The Who, Ozzy Osbourne and many others emerged. Heavy metal came from “hard rock”, and the satanic genres are called “death metal”, “doom metal” and “black metal”. They not only proclaimed themselves satanists through their appearance and onstage performances, they also put satanic symbols on the tickets to their shows.

Many heavy metal acts nowadays incorporate a horror show into their concerts, decorating the stage as execution and torture chambers. During those concerts, they throw flesh, skulls and fake blood about. These days, the visitors of virtually all heavy metal concerts are encouraged to kill in the name of Satan.
Lyrics like the following are typical of this type of music:

We enter into your body and rape your soul and turn you, mercilessly and cold.
We force you to kill your brother, eat his flesh and brains.
Skin him and lick his bones until all madness has gone.
We sow destruction in the world where demonic legions will rule.

Many parents long for the time of the Beatles. Few people know, however, that that’s where it all started. The Beatle phenomenon was carefully planned by the Illuminati to spread a very destructive element among the global masses: the possibility to change a person against their will.

In 1962, John Lennon told Tony Sheridan in the Hamburg Star Club:

“I am certain that the Beatles will be very successful, because I have sold my soul to Satan!”

Shortly afterwards, the Beatles were asked to record for the EMI label, one of Europe’s major music producers. And, led by EMI producer George Martin and his friend Brian Epstein, they were cleaned up and provided with the proper “Beatle look”.

At the time, the Beatles could not read a single note, and could only play the guitar. Theodor Adorno wrote their lyrics and music, which was kept a secret from the outside world. Adorno was one of the earliest leaders of the Frankfurt School. In 1950, he reorganized and “de-nazified” the post-war German educational system and cultural institutions. This project was known as the Congress for Cultural Freedom (CCF). Adorno also was co-director of the “Authoritarian Personality Project” that willfully engineered the Baby Boomer drug/rock/sex counter culture. Few people know that the Beatles were part of a mass experiment by the Tavistock Institute for Human Relations in London. Most actors and singers are “puffed” to become stars. This technique is what is known as “profiling”. As said before, profiling can be applied to individuals, small or large groups of people, and organizations of all sizes. The Beatles were “puffed” day and night without ceasing until everything (lies and all) about them was accepted as truth. The Tavistock Institute, as part of a social experiment, brought them to America. In the experiment, a certain population group would be brainwashed without anybody ever finding out, and the brainwashing would involve a very powerful psychotropic drug called LSD (Lysergic Acid
The experiment with LSD was an exponent of the Illuminati goal. In 1943 Sandoz AG, a Swiss pharmaceutical company belonging to the London-based Warburg Co. began producing LSD as a drug. The Tavistock Institute obtained this drug from Sandoz AG via the Institute for Policy Studies. The experiment was structured within the framework of the CIA’s infamous MK-ULTRA project. This program used innocent CIA personnel as guinea pigs, with the experiment costing several personnel their lives. Following the results of this experiment, the Illuminati transformed San Francisco in the early 1960s into a satanic playground! Teenagers were kidnapped, and groups were recruited. It was a joint project with the CIA and Britain’s MI6. LSD was to make people psychotic and cause them to hallucinate and, in addition, cause serious brain damage. For many of the people involved, their experiment with this drug ended in them committing suicide. The result of the experiment was impressive: the entire Flower Power culture flourished, and finally gave rise to the student riots that were funded by the CIA to the tune of twenty-five million dollars.

Alan Ginsberg was an idol at the end of the 1960s and thanks to the cooperation of the media he was able to promote (on American television) the use and benefits of LSD! Whereas ordinary commercials would have cost him a fortune to air, Ginsberg paid very little to air his LSD promotions. He did it in the name of “new ideas” and “new cultures” that emerged in the world of art and music. The media was filled with articles and programs about Ginsberg and his drug propaganda. In the entire history of the media there has been no other propaganda able to match Ginsberg’s. The New York Times dedicated over five pages to Ginsberg and his defense of the benefits of marijuana and LSD use! The impact of this publicity campaign immersed the generally conservative American public into one culture shock after another. The LSD that was manufactured by Sandoz was supplied free of charge in huge quantities at many universities and music concerts throughout the United States.

In 1967, American society escalated its open cultural battle against youngsters and the “Flower Power” movement. The year began with massive open-air concerts to which youngsters flocked in the millions, with many of them falling prey to the Illuminati’s well-organized LSD experiment. The hallucinogenic drug was distributed freely, and its use heralded the arrival of New Age.
The real intention behind the Monterey Pop Festival was the introduction of a new psychedelic and hallucinogenic drug culture. During this festival, thousands of people were introduced to this new drug. The organizer of the festival was John Philips, a member of the band “The Mamas and the Papas”. Philips was a drug dealer who was closely connected to the satanic network that included Charles Manson, movie director Roman Polanski, producer Terry Melcher (son of Doris Day) and the group “The Beach Boys”. During the Monterey Pop Festival, LSD and marijuana were freely available for public consumption. The pill called “Monterey Purple” was handed out to anyone interested. Under the influence from the music and peer pressure from those that used it, many people not used to experimenting with drugs decided to use the drug. These rock festivals served as breeding grounds for the counterculture of free sex and public drug use. During the Woodstock festival, LSD was secretly mixed in drinks like Coca Cola, turning thousands of innocent youths into mindless psychotics. Many of them committed suicide.

During the first twenty-four hours of Woodstock, 300 youngsters ended up in medical emergency units and were diagnosed with “bad LSD trips”. Thousands more would follow.

On August 17, The New York Times reported:

“Today, one of the organizers of Woodstock went on stage to announce that there was LSD around that had been tampered with. He said: ‘LSD is not a poison. It has only been tampered with you are not going to die. If you are worried, take half a pill.”

This warning to about half a million people came from none other than Wavy Gravy, an MK-ULTRA agent. Because of the enormous influx of people to the emergency services, over fifty doctors and medical staff were flown in from New York. At the end of the festival, there had been 5,000 emergencies and patients.

When the Beatles arrived for the first time in America in 1964, the airport was filled with young girls and the press reporting the outbreak of “Beatlemania”. These girls had been brought to the airport from the Bronx by employees of the Tavistock Institute (the promotional team) and were paid to scream hysterically. When the Tavistock Institute brought the Beatles to America, nobody could suspect what the disastrous consequences would turn out to be. Nobody would ever have heard of the Beatles if every effort had not been made to get the media’s attention. Ed Sullivan and American Bandstand were responsible for creating an audience that would change the world. Ed Sullivan was hired by the Illuminati. Shortly before the Beatles went to America, he studied at the Tavistock Institute. Without his major influence with the media, the Beatles and their music would have died a silent death.

As said before, the music of the Beatles was written by Theo Adorno. It was based on music from the Dionysius Cult or that of the Baal Priesthood. Adorno simply added a modern sound to the music.

The launch of the Beatles was accompanied by a careful selection of words and phrases that had been composed by the Tavistock Institute. The word “rock” was related to music, and the words “teenager”, “cool”, “discovered” and “pop music” were codes representing the acceptance of drugs. These words followed the Beatles everywhere they were “discovered” by “teenagers”. There is no doubt that the word “teenager” only became popular with the Beatles and the hearty greetings of the Tavistock Institute.

Because the code words were linked to the music, fans of the music started to use them more and more. The words created a new generation that began identifying itself more as amoral youngsters, who were being manipulated and conditioned to believe that the Beatles were their idols. All these code words were used to gain control of this target group of American youths. After the Beatles “conquered” the world, more code words were added. The media addressed the “Beatle generation” and the Tavistock Institute introduced the terms “Beatniks”, “Hippies” and “Flower Power”. Additionally, it became fashionable to wear dirty jeans, to have long, dirty, unwashed hair. The new lifestyle captured millions of youngsters, leading to a veritable revolution. Other generations could do nothing about it and were unable to trace the origins of this movement of drugs and other bad habits or to stop it.

Sergeant Pepper’s Lonely Hearts Club Band was the title of the first album by the Beatles that directly encouraged the use of drugs. The album even contained a song called “Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds” (LSD), about a colorful LSD trip dedicated to this drug. The album was dedicated to satanist Aleister Crowley. It was released exactly twenty years after Crowley’s death, with the album cover containing his picture. The title song starts with the words: “It was twenty years ago today.”
Shortly after the album was released, the Beatles shocked the world by announcing they were in favor of the legalization of marijuana and LSD. In an interview with Life Magazine, Paul McCartney said:

“LSD has opened my eyes. We use only a tenth of our brains.”

Song titles like “Norwegian Wood”, “Yellow Submarine”, “Strawberry Fields Forever”, “Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds” and many others were all about drug use. John Lennon and his wife Yoko Ono openly admitted to having used heroin. Other members of the Beatles also admitted to using LSD.

On John Lennon’s album “Mind Games”, he literally worships the Antichrist in some of his songs. One such song was “Bring on the Lucie”, the lyrics to which contain the following phrases:

Here’s something you just better do
Free the people now
Do it, do it, do it, do it, do it now!
Well we were caught with our hands in the air
So let’s shout it aloud like a prayer
Free the people now
666 is your name.

In his book A Spaniard in the Works, Lennon portrays Jesus Christ as:

“A small, garlic-eating, stinking, yellow, dirty Fascist, Catholic Spanish bastard.”

During the publicity campaign for the “White Album”, Lennon stated:

“Christianity will disappear. It will splinter and thus lose its power.”

It is common knowledge that many Beatles songs contain hidden messages that can only be heard when they are played backwards. The song “Revolution nr 9”, for instance, when played backwards contains the message “Start smoking marijuana now.” Backwards messages were based on the instructions of Aleister Crowley.

He gave his followers the following instructions:

Learn to read BACKWARDS
Learn to think BACKWARDS
Learn to write BACKWARDS
Learn to listen BACKWARDS
Learn to speak BACKWARDS

Backwards messages first appeared in recordings in the 1960s, are transmitted directly to the subconscious of the listener. However, these recordings were not discovered until the 1970s. Incorporating such messages into recordings is relatively easy in any professional sound studio.

Shortly before his death, John Lennon was interviewed by Playboy Magazine, in which he commented that drugs like LSD, heroin, cocaine and other hard drugs had been distributed deliberately to create social chaos and, ultimately, to destroy civilization.

“We have to thank the CIA and the army that LSD exists and can be bought. They used LSD to be able to control people. They gave us that freedom. Look at what the government has to say about this.”

As earlier stated, the Beatles were part of a mass experiment by the CIA, Britain’s MI6 and the Tavistock Institute. John Lennon had opened Pandora’s Box and had become aware of the global impact of the Beatles phenomenon. He knew that the Beatles were, to a large extent, the result of a detailed social experiment that resulted in the worldwide distribution of drugs.

John Lennon was aware of the fact that the Beatles were subjected to a mind control that ended in drug use and dependency for some of the band’s members. He also claimed that he knew the phenomenon labeled “Beatlemania” was merely one aspect of a large global conspiracy of social manipulation and experiments. Better than any other member of the Beatles, he knew of this corruption and infiltration by the Secret Service in this Hippie culture from which rock music emerged. Finally, he was once one of the major guns in the arsenal of the CIA/MI6/Tavistock conspiracy, therefore posing a threat to the entire operation.

On December 8, 1980, John Lennon was murdered by the programmed Delta-Monarch slave Mark David Chapman. John Lennon, the most politically engaged rock star of his generation, was shot to death in front of the building where his penthouse was located. This secretive building overlooks New York’s Central Park, and was the building used for the movie Rosemary’s Baby, after the famous novel by Ira Levin. Rosemary’s Baby was about the birth of the Antichrist in a New York apartment.

The murderer of John Lennon was nothing more than an obedient and programmed Monarch slave controlled by the Illuminati, who claimed he had heard voices from the devil. He immediately admitted his guilt, which prevented the case from going to trial. This is typically what happens with these kinds of murders: An immediate confession resulting in no trial. Case closed! And no one will be the wiser regarding the actual event that took place.

The human mind is strong. John Lennon was not the only one that stood up to the Illuminati! Other musicians like Jim Morrison, Kurt Cobain, Jimi Hendrix and others took their own measures against the programming and surveillance by the Illuminati. When secrets do come out, like John Lennon’s Playboy interview, these musicians were killed immediately. Many allegedly died of a drug overdose: Brian Jones, Mama Cass, Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin and Tim Buckley, to name a few. When Hendrix and Joplin died, Jim Morrison’s manager said that he might well be next. And he was right; Jim Morrison died of a heart attack in his bathtub. It is very likely that these musicians became too dangerous for the Illuminati and they were murdered when they were able to remember their lives before they were programmed!

John Todd was responsible for one of the recording industry’s biggest mergers in history. From this mega-merger emerged the label Zodiaco Productions. Todd was initiated into the highest occult circles of power within the Illuminati (Council 13). In an interview, after leaving the occult, he warned:

“What connection is there between rock music and satanism? Do you really want me to answer that? When I converted to Jesus Christ I smashed up my entire collection of rock music. Before that, I belonged to witchdom. I was the manager of Seria Cotatchens, one of the largest music empires in the United States. Of course, I did not own the company, the Illuminati did. The Illuminati own everything, the Rothschilds own everything. At the start of the 1970s, I lived in Los Angeles, and I knew about every rock band in America. I also lived in Los Angeles, because I constantly needed to be with the artists who also lived there. As a result, we also knew all the television stars. And indeed not a night went by without seeing someone on television that I had not already initiated as a witch. Whenever you talked to one of them and asked what kind of music they liked, almost all of them would tell you that their choice was based on an LSD trance or some other kind of transcendental meditation, or that it had been transmitted to them during a séance.”

According to John Todd, Illuminati rituals (black magic) preceded every original music recording:

“The actors and musicians are initiated by a priest according to a specific ritual, and they can be certain that demons will guide all their products. The best-known and best-selling music these days carries such a curse. This means the demons simply guide such a product. And when you buy such a product, you bring the demon into your house free of charge. With every CD, whether it is pop, rock or country music, there is a chance that you will invite a demon into your house. And I mean that literally. There are thousands of people who have problems in their marriages, families or otherwise. But when they destroyed their disgraceful music collection, peace returned. As long as people listen to this kind of music, youngsters will continue to convert to evil. Even when a Christian comes up to me and tells me that he still listens to rock music, I ask him about his mental condition, and it turns out to be weak. It is simply impossible to grow spiritually as long as you keep listening to that music.”
Chapter 26

Israel or Judah?

As we have seen, the house of Judah (the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and the Levites) was also punished by God. Nebuchadnezzar, king of the re-emerged Babylonian empire, between 598 and 586 B.C. moved the main part of “all” the inhabitants of Judah to Babylon. In 539 B.C., the Persian King Cyrus (Kores) allowed all the inhabitants of Judah to return to their lands. A small part of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, the Levites and other Israelites then returned to Palestine (Ezra 1:1-5, 2:1). The other Israelites mentioned, as said before, are a group who were already living in Judah’s cities at the time of the rift between Israel and Judah. From the outset, they belonged to the inhabitants of Judah. It is assumed that they were very small in number. Only a handful of people over time have mixed with the men of Judah and Benjamin.

In an attempt to match prophecy to their version of what happened, some theologians claim that a part of the house of Israel also returned from Babylonia, in a way hitching a ride from the house of Judah. However, based on what we read in the Bible, we cannot possibly accept this to be true. When we read the reports of the return from Babylonia, it quickly becomes clear that there are no returned exiles from Assyria. The return from Babylonia is described in great detail in chapter 36 of the second book of Chronicles. The last verse of this chapter follows:

“Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? The LORD his God be with him, and let him go up.”

This verse is a historically accurate testimony. Investigations and discoveries of a fairly recent date have shown that the king of Persia gave similar orders to rebuild the sacred shrines of other peoples. It would appear he wanted the conquered people to become his friends and loyal subjects by allowing them to rebuild their ruined shrines. It would furthermore appear that he used an idea that at the time was commonly held among the heathens, that every people had its national gods and that it was worthwhile to placate those gods and turn them into benevolent powers of the Persian Empire.

The book of Ezra starts with the same message of King Cyrus in a more elaborate and complete form:

“Now in the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, that the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made the proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also into writing, saying, Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath charged me to build him a house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? His God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the House of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God), which is in Jerusalem. And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beast, besides the freewill offering for the House of God that is in Jerusalem.”

The order by the king of Persia was issued to all his subjects throughout his kingdom, including the tribes of Israel in Assyria, which was part of Persia after he conquered it.

In his brief introduction to the book of Ezra, Prof. Dr. A. Noordzij explains that the members of the ten tribes did nothing to indicate they would obey the order of the king of Persia. In this context we should not forget that the kingdom of the ten tribes had distanced themselves from the religion that was connected to the temple service in Jerusalem long before they went into exile. In addition, the house of Israel was separated from the related tribes of the house of Judah.

In Babylon, on the other hand, the heads of the families of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, the priests and the Levites, all those who God urged to do so, prepared to leave for Jerusalem to start building the Lord’s temple (Ezra 1:1-5). Although the order from the king of Persia also extended to the tribes of the kingdom of Israel in Assyria, the final verse clearly indicates that it was almost exclusively obeyed by the heads of the families of Judah and Benjamin, the priests and the Levites. Both Ezra and Nehemiah say:

“Now these are the children of the province that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the King of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon [not Assyria], and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, everyone unto his city” (Ezra 2:1, Nehemiah 7:6).

Jewish sources show that the Jews are the descendants of only one of the twelve tribes and that they only have mixed with the tribe of Benjamin, not with the other ten tribes. Some hundred years after the first exiles returned, Nehemiah compiled a census of the people. Nehemiah 11 shows that, apart from the Levites, only the tribes of Judah and Benjamin were present. This was confirmed by Flavius Josephus around 90 A.D.:

“"There are only two tribes in Asia and Europe subjugated to the Romans, while the ten tribes must form an immense multitude across the Euphrates."" 286

Those who returned from exile to inhabit the lands of their fathers, then, were the exiles from Judah and not the Israelites who had been taken into exile in Assyria. This also becomes clear when Ezra 2:2 talks about “the men of the people of Israel.” Surely, this refers to the house of Judah. We should not forget that all Jews are also Israelites. In the book of Ezekiel, for instance, the men of Benjamin and the Levites are referred to as the Israelite companions of Judah (Ezekiel 37:16).

When it is argued that, at some point after the return from exile, the tribesmen of Ephraim and Manasseh are said to be living in Judah, we refer to 2 Chronicles 10:17, where it is written that after the rift between Israel and Judah, the son of King Solomon, King Rehabeam, continued to rule over the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, as well as the children of Israel who lived in the cities of Judah. Verses 16 and 21 of chapter 6 of the book of Ezra show that these children of Israel had been exiled in Babel, for they returned together with the priests, Levites and others (Judeans). They were joined by those who remained in Judah during the period of exile. 287 Of how little significance these groups were, however, becomes clear from the book of Ezra, where every time the heads of the people are mentioned, reference is only made to the men of Judah and Benjamin. 288

There can be no doubt, then, that on the basis of what we read in the Bible about the times after the period of exile, the return was limited to those who had been taken to Babel, including some members of the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh.
However, the latter group belonged to the inhabitants of the cities of Judah from the beginning. This, in no way, supports the idea that the tribes of Israel returned from Assyria.

After the return from Babylon, the members of the tribe of Benjamin were known as Galileans. Later, when Emperor Titus completely destroyed the temple in 70 A.D., several groups of Galileans left Palestine. According to many historical sources, these groups joined the Massagetians who, at the time, inhabited the South of Russia. 289 The Massagetians in turn are the ancestors of the Normans and the Icelandic Vikings. The crest of Iceland is the wolf, which was also the emblem of Benjamin. Rurik, the founder of the Russian empire (Rossija), was a descendant of Benjamin.

The original Jews descend from the tribe of Judah, with a few descendants of Levi. It was only later in history that the people of Judah and his descendants became known as “Jews”. 290 The word “Jews” was first used during and after the Babylonian exile.

It is important that we have a clear understanding of the difference between the house of Israel and the house of Judah, as it is indicated in the Bible. When we have a clear understanding of this difference, we are also able to understand the prophecy and the events that currently take place in the world. Few people who read the Bible make the distinction between the house of Israel and the house of Judah. Since the days of Jacob, the prophets have talked about this with great clarity. For those who do not clearly understand the difference between the house of Israel and the house of Judah, or who do not wish to recognize that difference, the Bible remains a closed book. The Bible places the position of the house of Israel in an entirely different light than that of the house of Judah. The Bible describes the past, present and future of the house of Israel. It is the book of Israel in which God commands the people of Israel to be a blessing to all the generations of the earth. Judah’s destiny was to be a very different one. According to the Bible, the name of Judah itself would become a curse (Isaiah 65:15). The Bible also makes it clear that the name Judah would be scattered around the world by God as a name to be mocked. The curse would last until such time as the people would receive God’s grace at the end of time. After the exile of Judah and Israel, the prophets also aimed their divinely inspired promises, admonitions and threats to the two separate houses. When we look at the following prophecies by Jeremiah, we see that there is a clear difference between the two houses. There is a major difference between Israel and Judah:
ISRAEL

- Israel would be lost as a populace, a people that would be blind to its own identity (Jeremiah 50:3-6; John 10:27-31; Isaiah 42:16-20, 43:8; Romans 11:25).

- Israel would give birth to a multitude of peoples ( Genesis 35-11, 48:19).

- From Israel, nations with large colonies would emerge. The descendants of Israel would be plentiful as the sand of the sea (Hosea 1:10).

- Israel would be named after Isaac (Isaiah 62:2, 65:15; Genesis 21:12; Romans 9:7). As we have seen earlier, since the times of the exile, parts of the people of Israel were known by the names of Sacae, Isacae and Sacasunna.

JUDAH

- Members of Judah that had remained in Jerusalem during the exile would await a terrible future (Jeremiah 24:9).

- The people of Judah were to be without a home in all countries, without a geographic legacy. Judah was to be mocked and cursed in all the places to which they would be cast out.

- Judah’s name (Jews) would continue to exist (Isaiah 65:15).

Many Christians and theologians often mistakenly refer to Israel as the Jewish people, and vice versa. Even current Jews are often referred to by the name Israel. There are even Christians who believe Abraham was a Jew. If Abraham was a Jew, then so would be his descendants. However, Abraham was a Semite, a descendant of Sem and Heber. Abraham’s descendants are Semites and Hebrews. Entire peoples would spring from Abraham. As with their Arab cousins, Abraham is the forefather of the children of Israel, including the Jewish people. The Old Testament makes it clear that Isaac was also not a Jew; neither were Jacob, Moses, Joshua, Gideon or Samuel. Even Esther and Mordechai were not Jews but members of the tribe of Benjamin. Most prophets were not Jews but Israelites.

As we will see, the Jews certainly play an important role in God’s plan; however, according to the prophecy, the ten tribes would also play an important role in the future, because it is their important birthright.
To this day, the houses of Israel and Judah remain separated; although we shall see that a reunification has been foretold. That will be in the beginning of the Messianic age, an age in which everyone will live in a peaceful, universal brotherhood. In this utopian era, all of mankind will worship one God, in peace and harmony, with Jerusalem as the capital of the Holy Land.

Let us not forget that Satan, God’s monkey, will declare Jerusalem to be the capital of the world before the second coming of Christ; before the beginning of the Messianic age. His descendant, the “false messiah” will take his place on the throne in Jerusalem.

It is important to remember that Judah was elected to produce the Messiah, from the house of David. And the Messiah did come forth from the house of Judah! The prophecy was fulfilled when the Son of Man came from the womb of Mary, was killed and then resurrected as Jesus Christ. Judah was also selected to be the first people to spread the teachings of Christ across the earth. This is another task that they have carried out, even though at first it was done by a relatively small group and on a modest scale. Other groups of Jews later converted to Christianity.

Not only Jews, but also many Christians consider the Jewish people to be God’s chosen people, which is often at the basis of the claim that they see themselves as better people. Rabbis like Yisroel Dovid Weiss from New York see that only in a spiritual context. He believes that the Jews have been chosen by God to set a moral example. According to Weiss, there is no superiority involved. In the New Testament there is also no mention of a superiority of Jews at the end of days. Ephesians 2:14 clearly shows us that a distinction can no longer be made. Like any other people on earth, the Jews are destined to enter Christianity as equals.

“There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free person, there is not male and female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham’s descendant, heirs according to the promise” (Gal. 3:28-29).

“For in Christ Jesus, neither circumcision nor uncircumcision counts for anything, but only faith working through love” (Gal 5:6).

“This means that it is not the children of the flesh who are the children of God, but the children of the promise are counted as descendants” (Romans 9:8).
According to the apostle Paul, these “children of the flesh” are not only Jews or Gentiles, but all those who believe in the Holy Christ as the Messiah! Until the second coming, neither Judah nor Israel are favorites in the eyes of God. Individual Jews, like people from other countries, are given the opportunity to benefit openly from the salvation through the sacrifice of Jesus.

The Jews have been persecuted for centuries, because many people considered them guilty of Jesus’ death. However, it was not the Jews, but the High Priests and the elders of the people who decided to kill Jesus. Pontius Pilate said:

“I am innocent of his blood. You are responsible.”

It has to be clear that it was the Pharisees, led by High Priest Kaiaphas, who crucified Jesus.

The fact that the mob shouted:

“Crucify Him, Crucify Him. His blood be on us, and on our children.”

This does not mean that all Jewish people should have to suffer forever for spilling the blood of Jesus. Jesus Christ presented himself as the Lamb of God; His blood had to be spilt over the people. It was not intended as punishment, but as a road to salvation for all sinners. Jesus was not engulfed in suffering and death, but he meticulously carried out God’s foretold plan of salvation. He presented Himself as the Lamb of God, who would carry away the sins of the world. His was not a martyr’s death. He had come to serve and to give His soul as ransom. In John 3:16, we read:

“For God so loveth the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.”

Jesus said:

“No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself” (John 10:18).

The divine blood had to flow over all Adam’s children, to wash them all and cleanse them of their sins. Many Jews were not convinced that it was indeed the blood of Christ. Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg accurately represents the Christian teachings about the Jews:

“The greatest sin the Jews committed was in turning against Jesus Christ.”
Chapter 27

Searching for the Descendants of Judah

After he conquered Babylon, the Persian King Cyrus allowed the people of Judah to return to their land. A small part of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and the Levites then returned to Palestine (Ezra 1:1-5, 2:1). After they returned from exile, they started rebuilding the Temple. It was especially the elders among the Judeans who occupied themselves with the construction, which they completed according to God’s command and the order of the King of Persia. The consecration of the Temple was celebrated with enormous enthusiasm by everybody who had been in exile in Babylon. The house of Judah, on the other hand, was never restored! The new nation was the nation after exile, and it was never known as the house of Judah. The new nation in Palestine became the official representative of Judah after the times of Ezra and Nehemiah. Instead of a Davidian royal family, Aaronite priesthood was created instead. The Jewish community was subject to continuous change, and it was overrun by other cultures around the Mediterranean Sea. Most Jews were influenced not only by the Babylonian culture, but by the Persian as well. The cultures did not merge until Alexander the Great conquered the entire Middle East, and the Greek language, culture and philosophy started dominating life. After the Greek empire had been absorbed into the Roman Empire, the Jews came under Roman dominion. In the first century, the Jews were divided into various groups: the Pharisees, the Sadducees, the Essenes, the Zealots and the Herodians. After the conquest of Jerusalem by the emperor Titus, the entire population surrendered to the Pharisees. From that time on, Judah embraced the Talmud. All Jews who rejected the Talmud were banned from society. 292

The Hebrew word for “law” is “Thora”. In the Talmud, the law consists of two parts: the written law (the five books of Moses: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy) and the oral law containing most of the comments from rabbis like the Mishna and the Talmud. The latter group of laws was handed down orally through many generations. The Talmud, which contains the orally transmitted laws, for the most part contains interpretations rabbinical that were only recorded after the death of Jesus Christ. There are actually two Talmuds: the Jerusalem or Palestine Talmud, which was written in Palestine at the Academies, and the Babylonian Talmud, which was collected at the Talmudic schools in Babylon. The Babylonian edition is the more extensive one. It is also the edition to which most people refer when they mention the Talmud. The Babylonian Talmud gained more authority because the people who collected it lived a hundred years before the editors of the Palestinian Talmud, and because theirs was the first Talmud that was used at the rabbinic schools of the Western world, after the fall of the Roman Empire. Rabbi Adin Steinsalz has said:

“The Talmud is the supporting pillar that serves as a foundation for the entire religious and intellectual thinking. There is no other book that has influenced the thoughts and actions of the Jews to that extent” (The Essential Talmud).

From the beginning, the Talmud teaches that Jews have to obey the many laws of the Thora (613 in all) and its religion, and are not allowed to deviate at all.

In the beginning, the Talmud contained repulsive fables about Jesus. The first editions of the Talmud provoked tremendous hostility towards the Jews. Many were persecuted, and many editions of the Talmud were burned. To avoid this from happening in the future, the Pharisees decided to remove the blasphemous references to Jesus in future editions. One of those references was as follows:

“Jesus worked as a carpenter until he was thirty years old, when he was elected rabbi at one of the schools in Jerusalem. One day he went into the holiest part of the Temple and stole a parchment on which the holy name of God was written. This gave him the power to perform miracles.”

Rabbis believe that those who know the correct pronunciation of the name of God possess supernatural powers. Also, there was a story that was being told that Jesus was boiled in “hot excrement”. The Talmud claimed that Mary was a whore:

“She, who was the descendant of kings and rulers, and shared her bed with carpenters.”

Also, in a footnote to Shabbath 104b, it is claimed that it is written in the uncensored text of the Talmud that the mother of Jesus had sex with many men.
In Sanhedrin 43a, it is written that Jesus deserved his execution:

“On the eve of Jewish Passover, Jesus was hanged. Do you suspect that he was someone who would be defended? Was he not a seducer?”

Because the Talmud emphatically condones and even glorifies the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, for a Christian it is impossible to convert to the Talmud knowingly. Although the Talmudists have gone to great lengths to conceal their hatred towards Jesus Christ in their tradition, the Jewish scholar Israel Shahak clearly underlines:

“This is not about the realistic facts concerning Jesus Christ, but careless and even duplicitous stories in the Talmud. Even in later texts, up to the nineteenth century, they are found, and to the present day still determine what many Jews believe. And these stories have, to a considerable extent, determined the Jewish position on Christianity. According to the Talmud, Jesus Christ was sentenced by a rabbinic court for “God worshipping” and contempt for rabbinic authority. All the classical Jewish sources that made mention of this are all too happy to take responsibility. In these stories in the Talmud, not a single Roman appears! In the more folkloric tales (for example the infamous Toledot Yeshu), which are taken at least as seriously, another crime is added: witchcraft. The name Jesus itself to the Jews represented all that was evil and it does so to this day.”

Israel Shahak continues:

“To this day, copies of the New Testament are burned in public. Also, the commandment from the Talmud is quoted regularly that every new copy of the New Testament has to be burned, preferably in public. And it goes beyond this commandment: on March 23, 1980, hundreds of copies of the New Testament were burned, in public and under the auspices of Jad Le’achim, an organization which is funded by the Israeli government.”

Shulamit Aloni, a member of the Knesset, said in the Yediot Ahront of February 2, 1975:

“Every Jew who has a positive attitude towards Jesus, risks not being allowed to immigrate to Israel. The Interior Ministry has the authority to refuse anyone access who could disturb the feelings of generality.”
Remarkably enough, Christian theologians and Jewish scholars agree that the Talmud is a continuation of Pharisee thinking, both in a personal and ideological sense. According to the Jewish historian Salcia Landmann, Pharisee philosophy and Talmudic thinking can be summarized in identical ways:

“The Pharisees were the actual creators and guardians of accepted Talmudic thinking.”

The eminent Rabi Louis Finkelstein, the head of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, often referred to as “The Vatican of Judaism”, in the Foreword to his first edition of his world-famous classic The Pharisees, The Sociological Background of Their Faith states:

“Pharisäismus became Talmudism, Talmudism became Medieval Rabbinism, and Medieval Rabbinism became Modern Rabbinism. But throughout these changes of name, inevitable adaptation of custom, and adjustment of Law, the spirit of the ancient Pharisee survives unaltered.”

The Talmud is the product of Pharisee thinking. This makes the Pharisees guilty of twisting the original meaning of the Old Testament account of salvation. The distortion of Mozaism was the natural outcome of the blind rejection of Jesus Christ! This left only the external adherence of Mozaism and removed the true experience. If the Pharisees had not intervened, the true Mozaism, announced by Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, would have led Israel to Christianity via the Greek Jews. It was the Pharisees who kept the Jews in their power according to strict rituals and laws. It was not the Christians who first turned against the Pharisees and Talmudists! In turn it was the Pharisees, unlike the truly religious Jews, who turned against their long-awaited Savior with an incomprehensible rage. Old Testament Judaists and Christians, on the other hand, always agreed that they gratefully and joyfully accepted their Redeemer.

“Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad” (John 8:56).

The Pharisees were the exact opposite:

“But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him” (John 12:37).
The Talmud offers a religion that no longer has anything to do with truly serving God, which is why Christians should consider it one of the many forms of heresy and reject it. Talmudism openly shows itself to be a special and very despicable form of heresy, because it is based on a supernatural revelation. Although this should put it close to Christianity, the Pharisees reject God’s revelation in the person of Jesus Christ! Jesus encountered among the Pharisees stubborn misconceptions in the interpretations of the commandments that were based on earlier accounts. According to the Catholic scientist Giuseppe Ricciotti, Jesus at some point lectured the Pharisees:

“Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition” (Matthew 15:3-6; Mark 7:9).

He added:

“You nullify the word of God in favor of your tradition that you have handed on. And you do many [parómoia toiata] such things” (Mark 7:13).

Although at the time of Jesus Christ the Talmud had not yet been written, its way of thinking already influenced the scribes. The form of religious worship known as Pharisäismus in Judea in the time of Jesus was a religious practice based exclusively upon the Talmud. Jesus abhorred and denounced the form of religious worship practiced in Judea, which is known and practiced today under the name “Judaism”.

As far as Judah is concerned, those who returned from Babylon formed the Jewish state until the conquest of Palestine and the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 A.D. In that year, there was an open revolt against Rome, and the Romans razed the city of Jerusalem and destroyed its Temple. Between 132 and 135 A.D., there was another, larger revolt, and all the Jews were driven from Jerusalem. Eventually, Jerusalem became a Roman town, and virtually all the Jews were scattered in the Diaspora. A part of the descendants of Judah ended up on the Arabian Peninsula, where they converted numerous people. Since then, these descendants of Judah have been known as southern Jews. A part of them moved to Spain, and became known as Spaniards or Sephardic Jews. The Sephardic Jews spoke their own Spanish-Hebrew dialect called Ladino, and carefully preserved their cultural and religious traditions. The famous Jewish scholar Bernard Lazare writes about this:
“The Sephardic Jews were a prime example of a people with a mission: their zeal to convert people was unsurpassed. The evidence of this zeal is numerous. In the first centuries A.D., Talmudism expanded with the same speed as later Christianity and the Islam. Rome, Alexandria, Antioch, Damascus and Cyprus, where virtually all Jews were converted heathens, are the places where they penetrated deeply. After the beginning of the Christian calendar, the Jewish mission to convert certainly did not stop. In a biological sense, it is clear that at least half of the Hebrew heritage of the descendants of Judah was lost.” 302

Since they were scattered around the world, the descendants of Judah formed small minorities everywhere. Due to their vulnerability, they often became the victims of aggression and persecution. As early as the Middle Ages, during the fanatical crusades there were large-scale attacks on the Jews. There are plenty of examples of massacres prior to the crusades. Complete communities, like Rouen, Troyes, Metz, Speyer and Mainz, were wiped out. Godefroid of Bouillon and his ruthless crusader army laid siege to Jerusalem for a month. Afterwards, he was responsible for a terrible blood bath, and he had all the Jews burned.

In 1096, thousands of Jews had been murdered in Europe and many communities destroyed. These raids took place in a time when Christians became convinced that the Jews were their enemies. They were held responsible for the many unexplainable natural disasters, diseases and famines. Also, they gained a reputation as child killers and poisoners of wells, and they were hunted down and murdered. In the twelfth century, large-scale mass murders of Jews took place in various countries. When the plague broke out throughout Europe in 1348, it was seen as a divine punishment of the Christians for failing to exterminate the Jews. The Black Death that raged in France and Germany consistently fanned the popular rage against the Jews. Jews who survived the plague were ruthlessly killed. When the plague ended, according to the historians of the age, there were no Jews left in Germany.

In Spain, more than a 100,000 Jews converted to Christianity after the massacres of 1391 and 1441. In those days, mass conversions were numerous. Nevertheless, many converted back to the Jewish faith in secret. Many “crypto-Jews” or “marranos” lived wealthy lives and occupied elevated positions at the courtly and even ecclesiastical circles. Often, they had joined the aristocracy through marriage, and their numbers in Spain grew steadily. Almost all of Spain’s families at some point in history have a “marrano” ancestor. “Most noble families are filled with marranos”, it was said. In May 1492, some 160,000 baptized Sephardic Jews were given a few months to leave Spain for good. According to the Jewish author Arthur Koestler, this involved a branch of Sephardic Jews whose ancestors today still live in England, France and Holland. There Sephardic ancestors were forced to flee Spain in 1492, and Portugal in 1497. After the flight of the Sephardic Jews from Spain and Portugal, the Marranos were observed with increasing suspicion. Many of them were burned by the Inquisition, but in the sixteenth century most of them immigrated to other parts of the Mediterranean, but also to England, France and Holland. Once they found a safe place, they openly converted back to their ancient religion and, together with the Sephardic Jews who had fled between 1492 and 1497, founded the Sephardic communities in these countries.

According to Koestler and Lazare, these Sephardic Jews can also be found in ancient Italy. After all, ancient Rome was inundated with Sephardic Jews. On the other hand, Koestler confirms that after their flight the Sephardim settled around the Mediterranean, in the Balkans and in Western Europe. The Sephardim became blood relatives with many peoples in the area around the Mediterranean Sea and the Middle East which included Egypt, Arabia, Greece, Persia and Rome. In later times, many of them became blood relatives of the Spanish, Portuguese, French, German and Swedes.

At that time, there were also groups of Sephardic Jews who settled in Eastern Europe. These Jews were very surprised when they arrived. They found out that more than half of all people with a Jewish belief in the world lived in that area, which is now present day Russia. However, most of these Jews did not descend from Judah but from the heathen peoples, in particular the Chasars.

The Chasars were related to the Tartar and Mongol race, of whom it is claimed that at one point they stayed on Mount Seïr, the home of the Edomites. It is, therefore, not surprising that the Chasars had a very Edomite bent, from which many false doctrines were born. In addition, there is a link with Askenaz, Japheth’s grandson. The Chasars were a very warlike nation. In a comparatively short period they established the largest and most powerful kingdom in Eastern Europe, and probably the wealthiest also. The population was made up for the most part of Chasars with the addition of the remnants of the populations of twenty-five peaceful agricultural nations conquered by the Chasars.
The Chasars were a pagan nation when they invaded Eastern Europe. Their religious worship was a mixture of phallic worship and other forms of idolatrous worship practiced in Asia by pagan nations. This form of worship continued until the seventeenth century. The vile forms of sexual excesses indulged in by the Chasars as their form of religious worship produced a degree of moral degeneracy the Chasars’ king could not endure. In the 7th century King Bulan, ruler at that time of the Chasar Kingdom, decided to abolish the practice of phallic worship and other forms of idolatrous worship and make one of the three monotheistic religions, about which he knew very little, the new state religion. After a historic session with representatives of the three monotheistic religions King Bulan decided against Christianity and Islam and selected as the future state religion the religious worship then known as Talmudism, and now known and practiced as Judaism. King Bulan and his 4000 feudal nobles were promptly converted by rabbis imported from Babylonia for that event. Phallic worship and other forms of idolatry were thereafter forbidden. The new form of religious worship was now the state religion. The converted Chasars were the first population of so-called or self-styled “Jews” in Eastern Europe. All Chasars had to learn to cook and eat in the Hebrew fashion, and be circumcised, on pain of death. They also had to recognize the rabbis as their spiritual leaders. When the Chasars went to war against Russian peoples, it was customary to kill their adversaries and rape their women. All women were forced to convert to Talmudism. Many of them married Chasars.

When the Chasars in the first century B.C. invaded Eastern Europe their mother-tongue was an Asiatic language, referred to in the Jewish Encyclopedia as the “Chasar languages”. They were primitive Asiatic dialects without any alphabet or any written form. When King Bulan was converted in the seventh century he decreed that the Hebrew characters he saw in the Talmud and other Hebrew documents were thereupon to become the alphabet for the Chasar language. The Hebrew characters were adopted to the phonetics of the spoken Chasar language. The Chasars adopted the characters of the so-called Hebrew language in order to making a means for providing a written record of their speech. The adoption of the Hebrew characters had no racial, political or religious implication. Since the conquest of the Chasars by the Russians and the disappearance of the Chasar Kingdom the language of the Chasars became known as Yiddish. This language must not be confused with Hebrew because they both use the same characters as their alphabets. There is not one word of Yiddish in ancient Hebrew nor is there one word of ancient Hebrew in Yiddish. The Chasars adapted words as needed from the German, Slavonic and Baltic languages.

Directly north of the Chasar Kingdom at the height of its power a small Slavic state was organized in 820 A.D. on the south shore of the Gulf of Finland, where it flows into the Baltic Sea. This small state was organized by a small group of Varangians from the Scandinavian peninsula on the opposite shore of the Baltic Sea. The native population of this newly formed state consisted of nomad Slavs who had made their home in this area from earliest recorded history. This newly-born state was the embryo which developed into the Great Russian Empire. During the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries the rapidly expanding Russian nation gradually swallowed up the Chasar Kingdom.

In the many wars with her neighbors in Europe after the thirteenth century Russia was required to cede to her victors large areas which were originally part of the Chasar Kingdom. In this manner Poland, Bohemia, Lithuania, Hungary, Rumania and Austria acquired from Russia territory originally a part of the Chasar Kingdom. Most Jewish Chasars managed to escape to the West, where they settled in one of these countries. After the destruction of the Chasar Kingdom these Jews were no longer known as Chasars but as the Yiddish populations of these many countries. They refer to themselves in this way today.

Abraham Poliak, Professor of History at the University of Tel Aviv, has made a very important contribution to our knowledge of the descent of the Jewish Chasars. His essay The Conversion of the Chasars to Jewry first appeared in the Jewish magazine Zion, and his book Chazaria was very controversial. It appeared in Hebrew in 1944, and was seen as a subtle attempt to undermine the sacred tradition of the biblical descent of modern Jews. According to Bernard Koestler, there are important similarities between the Chasars and the Ashkenazi. He refers to a thorough historical and ethnological study, and his theory is virtually unassailable scientifically.

One of the first modern Jewish scientists who knew there were strong similarities between the Ashkenazi (Eastern Jews) and the Chasars was Isaac Baer Levinsohn (1788-1860). He was convinced “that the Russian Jews have originated at the banks of the Volga.”

Most historical records indicate that the founding of the Ashkenazi Jewry took place in the Rhine Basin, followed by a dramatic expansion into eastern Europe. However, this is not credible. As we have seen, the Sephardim had been wiped out in this area (1348-1350). According to the German historians of the time, there were no Jews left in Germany.

What secret mysterious power has been able for countless generations to keep the origin and the history of the Chasars and Chasar Kingdom out of history textbooks and out of classroom courses in history throughout the world? Few people know that history was rewritten in order to hide incidents that would expose the Illuminati’s long-standing conspiracy to rule our planet. The Rockefellers have pumped millions of dollars into an ongoing campaign to keep the history books written as dictated by the Illuminati. The Rockefeller Foundation admitted, in its Annual Report 1946, that it was subsidizing corps of historians to prevent anyone from rewriting history. 311

The Ashkenazi and Sephardim had totally different cultural and religious traditions, customs, eating habits and liturgies; they visited different synagogues and rabbis, and did not mix socially. These days, everything is different. Many Ashkenazi who currently live in Israel intermingled with Sephardim. 312 DNA research indicates that members of the two groups have intermarried frequently over the last hundred years. In 1967, Jack Bernstein immigrated to Israel to marry his beloved Ziva. He got married and stayed for six years, after which he moved back to the United States a disappointed man. According to Jack Bernstein:

“The marriage took place in a Sephardic synagogue. The ceremony was simple but beautiful. Ziva and I were very happy until our marriage encountered a serious problem. It turned out that Ziva is a Sephardic Jew and I am Ashkenazi. When an Ashkenazi Jew marries a Sephardic Jew, the entire Ashkenazi community in Israel holds that against him. The first three years of our marriage we were forced to live with Ziva’s aunt because of the racially motivated allocation of houses. In Israel, houses are allocated as follows:

– Ashkenazi Jews who have lived in Israel for years have first choice.
– Ashkenazi Jews from Europe have second choice, especially when they are married to or are going to marry an Israeli-born Ashkenazi Jewess.
– Ashkenazi Jews from the United States have third choice, especially when they are married to or are going to marry an Israeli-born Ashkenazi Jewess.
– Sephardic Jews then have choice of any houses that are left.
– The last people to have a choice are Muslims, Druze and Christians.

With regard to work and jobs, the same order was applied: the best jobs went to Ashkenazi Jews, then the Sephardic Jews, and finally the Muslims, Druze and Christians, who got the lowest jobs and often remained unemployed. Despite the fact that I was an Ashkenazi Jew from the United States, I was a part of the lowest level because of my marriage with a Sephardic Jewess.”

It would appear that during the nineteen-sixties and the nineteen-seventies there were hidden tensions between the absolute majority of the Ashkenazi Jews and the Sephardic minority. It is possible that the tension exists to this day. It will always remain secret to the outside world.

When we consider Jewish history, we could arrive at the conclusion that the present Jewry consists of various ethnic groups: the Sephardim, descendants of Judah, and the Ashkenazi, descendants of the Chasars. As is often the case, this matter is not as simple as it might look. Reality is much more complex. The Sephardim and Chasars are not the only two Jewish groups with a different ethnic background; there are many variations. For as long as they have existed, Sephardic Jews have been zealous in their attempt to convert whoever they may to their Jewish religion. As a result, they have roamed to many different parts of the world. For example, Jewish farmers and nomads, together with the Kabyles and Berbers, moved as far as Setif, Guelma and Bisra on the Moroccan border. From there, they roamed in caravans through the Sahara, as far as Timbuktu. Many of them have a dark skin color, like those of Daggatum, the Falashas and the Abyssinians Jews. There are traces of them as far as Peru (a Jewish-Peruvian Indian tribe), and Mexico (a group of more than one million Indio-Jews). According to the Jewish journalist Egon Kirsh, they can be traced back to Luis de Carbajal, who during the times of the Inquisition was banned to Mexico with hundreds of Marrano families, where they continued the Jewish mission. In India, there are white Jews in Mumbai and black Jews in Cochin. The white Jews settled in India in the fifth century, after they had been driven from Baghdad by the Persian King Pheroce. Another explanation of their presence in India leads to a much earlier time, the arrival of Jews in China, long before the birth of Christ. These Chinese Jews not only looked like the local population, they even converted to Confucianism. 314 This early version of “Chinese Jews” was relatively unknown and led to the publication of the theme issue of the Allgemeine Jüdischen Wochenzeitung in 1992. The magazine reported:

“Thousands of Chinese families have recently gone to the Jewish embassy in Beijing and invoked their Jewish origins. It is their intention to immigrate to Israel. Although their identity papers confirm their Jewish origin, they are not recognized as Jews by the Chinese authorities. Nevertheless, this does shed new light on unknown matters.”

Arnon Matver, director of the Jewish Agency, stated:

“The requests for immigration of these Chinese Jews will be studied thoroughly, despite the fact that the Chinese identity papers indicate that we are dealing with Jews here. At the moment, historians are looking into the matter.”

In the spring of 1992, at an exhibition of the Bayerischen Hauptstaatsarchiv in Munich, documents and testimonies were on display of Jews who had moved to China more than a thousand years ago. Although they maintained their religious culture, over time they adopted the Chinese way of life.

The black population in the United States also contains a large number of Jews. Israel Shahak is fairly affable about that in his thoughtful statement in which he says that “most blacks are not Jews.” In reality, in New York alone in 1942 there were 3500 black Jews, even with their own synagogues. The origin of the black Jews also becomes clear from two details in American history. In 1979, Moses Nuñes confessed that the mulatto Rose was his lover and the mother of his children Robert, James, Alexander and Frances. He left them their freedom, as well as his house and land and thirteen slaves. At a plantation in King’s Creek, Barnet A. Cohen confessed on his deathbed and in front of five witnesses concerning his love affair with the negress Catherine Owen, and he gave their children Bernard and Benjamin Philip his own name: Cohen.

To this day, many people convert to Jewry, despite their different ethnic backgrounds and culture. This is approved by the Talmud and later rabbinic law, provided the conversion is carried out according to proper guidelines. It is very remarkable and important that race and origin has never been an obstacle to convert to Jewry. There was only one condition: unconditional surrender to the Talmud! The British newspaper The Guardian, on August 7, 2002, wrote about a delegation of rabbis that traveled to Peru to convert ninety Indians to Judaism. There was only one condition: they had to live and work in Israel according to the regulations of the Talmud. In short: it is not at all easy to determine who the descendants of Judah are. Most Jews cannot prove that they are descendants of the people of Judah. During the exile in Babylon, there were many new branches. Even in the families of priests, marriages with heathen women occurred. In the book of Esther we read that many of these women became Jews. In that time between the return from Babylonian exile and the beginning of our calendar, large groups of descendants from Ishmael and Esau were also forced to accept the Jewish faith, even though they did not descend from Judah. These new Jews were not descendants of Judah, but they adopted the religion of the Jews. Entire peoples let themselves be incorporated into the Jewish people and culture. The Jewish author Flavius Josephus, in his book Jewish Antiquities, tells us how John Hyrcanus from the house of the Maccabees, around 125 B.C. incorporated the Edomites into Jewry. Hyrcanus also conquered the cities of Andorra and Marissa in Idumea, and after he had brought that entire land under his dominion, he allowed the people to continue living there, provided they let themselves be circumcised and adopt the Jewish religion. The fear of being driven from their land made them accept those terms, and since then they have been considered Jews. In chapter 19 of the same book, Josephus describes the government of the son of Hyrcanus, Aristobulus, who had himself crowned King of the Jews and incorporated an Ishmaeli tribe into Jewry. “He waged war on the Itureans, conquered a portion of their land, which he added to Judea, and he forced the people to be circumcised and live according to Jewish fashion.” It is clear that in this manner enemies of Judah were incorporated into Jewry.

The orthodox rabbi G.J. Neuberger, during a conference in Tripoli, brought up the Jewish race:

“Who is a Jew?”

Neuberger then answered his own question:

“Those who have a Jewish mother and those who have converted to Judaism in accordance with the Halacha, the Jewish religious law.”

Arthur Koestler confirms this, but he refers to the down-to-earth verdict of Raphael Patai in the Encyclopaedia Brittanica of 1973:

“Facts from anthropology demonstrate that, contrary to what was commonly assumed, there is no such thing as the Jewish race. Anthropometrical studies of Jewish groups in many places on earth indicate that the actual physical characteristics are very different from each other.”

The Jewish author Ludwig Schneider uses an even stricter formulation in his Israel Yearbook 2001:

“The rabbinic ruling that has been taken over by the highest court of the state of Israel and that has been declared valid, goes as follows: a person is a Jew if he is born from a Jewish mother who has no other religion than the Jewish religion. Or a person is a Jew when he converts to Jewry in accordance with the strict orthodox rabbinic rules.”

This is the only religious criterion and the only legal method through which the state of Israel can declare a person a Jew. Most ethnologists categorically denounce the notion that a person is a Jew on the basis of his race as a preposterous idea. Science and objectivity do not keep an entire people from claiming it is of Jewish descent.

Does there today exist such a thing as a Jewish religion? Yes and no. Until some 250 years ago, there was still a Jewish religion. Since then, this religion has been eroded by the European Enlightenment. In the wake of the European Enlightenment, the foundation of the Jewish existence was destroyed. For the first time in history, the Jews turned on the Thora and the Talmud. Naturally, there emerged groups that wanted to maintain their Jewish identity. But at the same time these groups denounced God as the center of their Jewish life, and they no longer obeyed the Thora. Only a small minority of Jewry can now claim the Jewish religion.

A small group has been divided amongst a whole range of sects, the boundaries of which are fluid and vague. Good examples of this are the ultra-orthodox (Haredim), the orthodox and the new orthodox, the Hassidim, the reformed and conservatives, the Christian Messianists (Christian Jews) and the Karaeses.

So people are considered to be Jews based on the descent from Jewish parents, birth from a Jewish mother (orthodox position) or Jewish father (liberal position), all without having to convert to the Talmud. Any outsider can become a Jew by converting to the Talmud in accordance with the rules. Only ten percent of today’s Jews consider themselves religious believers. This minority in turn has divided itself among a host of sects.

In this chapter, my research has been based on five studies by Jewish authors and historians who complement each other in an exceptional way because they approach Jewry from different angles. In addition, their studies are considered the “standard works” on Jewry. According to these prominent scholars, the Jews are not an independent race. They are in no way a unit, biologically or genetically, ethnologically or anthropologically. There is nothing that indicates they are the descendants of the ancient Hebrews.

In The Matrilineal Ancestry of Ashkenazi Jewry: Portrait of a Recent Founder Event, Dr. Richard Villems of the Department of Evolutionary Biology, University of Tartu and Estonian Biocenter in cooperation with the Rapport Faculty of Medicine and Research Institute, Technion and Rambam Medical Center of Haifa, Israel, said:

“Both the extent and location of the maternal ancestral deme from which the Ashkenazi Jewry arose remain obscure. By using complete sequences of the maternally inherited mitochondria DNA (mtDNA), we discovered that close to one half of Ashkenazi Jews, estimated at eight million people, can be traced back to only four women carrying distinct mtDNAs that are virtually absent in other populations, with the important exception of low frequencies among non-Ashkenazi Jews. We conclude that four founding mtDNAs underwent major expansion(s) in Europe within the past millennium.”

A scientific study of the renowned Spanish Professor Arnaiz-Villena, geneticist at the Complutense University in Madrid and author of The Origin of Palestinians and their Genetic Relatedness with other Mediterranean Populations, confirms that the Jews are not a race apart. According to this study there exists no difference in the genetic origin between Jewish and Palestinian people. They have the same genetic origin. During the research the geneticist discovered that the Ashkenazim (descendants of the Chasars) as well as non-Ashkenazim Jews and Palestinians in the Middle East are genetically indiscernible. Rivalry between both races is therefore based on “cultural and religious, and not on genetic differences”. In the beginning of 2001 the study was published in the magazine Human Immunology. The magazine accepted the study as a valuable contribution to genetic research, but afterwards it collapsed under the pressure from the Zionistic lobby, which claimed that the article was politically biased and handled “inappropriate observations” concerning the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. His findings caused Arnaiz-Villena to question the Zionistic ideology strictly on the basis of a study on genetic variations in people all living in the Middle East. The heart of the problem here really is that the study questions the concept about the Jews being a race apart, which has unpleasant implications for Zionism.

The publisher of the magazine admitted afterward that she was being threatened with firing should she choose not to withdraw the article. Academics who received the magazine where asked to tear out the pages in question and throw them away. In letters sent to libraries across the world, librarians were asked to “physically remove” the article from their bookshelves. Professor Arnaiz-Villena was fired from the editorial board after these incidents. In the midst of interventions of the magazine’s publication and massive protests, various scientists, such as the British geneticist, Sir Walter Bodmer and Dr. Mazin Qumsiyeh from the Department of Genetics at Yale wrote a letter to the society to support Arnaiz-Villena and protest against the shocking censorship concerning scientific labor. An associate scientist said:

“The regrettable thing about the case is that if Arnaiz-Villena would have found proof that the Jewish people are genetically exclusive instead of ordinary, you could bet your life on it that nobody would have complained about the turn of phrases that he used in the article. This is a very sad case.”

Many claim that Judah, like Israel, has been absorbed into other people, and has left the stage for good. However, God has promised that there will come a time when he will bring back both Judah and Israel to the land that was given to their fathers (Jeremiah 30:3). How God will reunite the two houses can be read in Reunion of Israel and Judah in the book of Ezekiel, where God says:

“Now, son of man, take a single stick, and write on it: Judah and those Israelites who are associated with him. Then take another stick and write on it: Joseph (the stick of Ephraim) and all the house of Israel associated with him. Then join the two sticks together, so that they form one stick in your hand. When your countrymen ask you, ‘Will you not tell us what you mean by all this?’, answer them: ‘Thus says the Lord GOD: I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel associated with him, and I will join to it the stick of Judah, making them a single stick; they shall be one in my hand. The sticks on which you write you shall hold up before them to see.’ Tell them: ‘Thus speaks the Lord GOD.’ I will take the Israelites from among the nations to which they have come, and gather them from all sides to bring them back to their land. I will make them one nation upon the land, in the mountains of Israel, and there shall be one prince for them all. Never again shall they be two nations, and never again shall they be divided into two kingdoms. No longer shall they defile themselves with their idols, their abominations, and all their transgressions. I will deliver them from all their sins of apostasy, and cleanse them so that they may be my people and I may be their God” (Ezekiel 37:16-23).

The Holy Scripture teaches us, then, that the peoples of Judah and Israel had been separated. The house of Israel existed elsewhere from the house of Judah. The Scriptures also teaches us that the descendants of Judah and of Israel continue to exist to this day. As we have indicated earlier, we must not doubt this. All divine statements in the Scriptures are absolutely certain and reliable, because they rest on the character of God Himself. According to the Scriptures, the descendants of Judah and Israel will never be lost, and in time, at the end of days, both houses will be restored. The Scriptures make it clear that this reunion still needs to take place.

Although Judah’s bloodline has mixed with other bloodlines over the centuries, we have to assume that the Sephardim are the true descendants of the Old Testament house of Judah, both ethnically and historically. In short: those who will inhabit the Promised Land together with the descendants of the house of Israel.

Zionism and Anti-Zionism

All ideologies, opinions and ideas can be openly examined, analyzed and criticized. We can happily discuss politics and criticize the Christian faith or Islam. We can also turn against any government, and the biggest risk we might encounter is that of receiving polemics and retort. There remains however one ultimate exception. For one theme the freedom of speech is absolutely not valid: Zionism! This movement does not willingly expose itself to criticism and, therefore, hardly ever goes public. If one criticizes Zionism at all, then the reaction is conflicting and hostile. The subject of “Zionism” has almost become taboo.

The specific ideological principles of Zionism are, amongst others, that the Jewish people have a historic right to Palestine. This right is based on the fact that the Jews lived in this country some two 2000 years ago and therefore originated from there. Moreover, it is often claimed that Palestine, before the arrival of the Jews, was practically uninhabited and that a Palestinian people didn’t exist at all. 379 Nevertheless, as we have seen, there exists no difference in the genetic origin between Jewish and Palestinian people. They have the same genetic origin. 380

If we analyze the roots of Zionism and make amends to the principles of the ideology that lays claim to Palestine, we cross an unwritten line. We have then almost committed a crime, and, before we know it, we appear in court. In order to prevent this I am forced to incorporate all critical quotes in this chapter about Zionism, from erudite Jewish researchers, important Jewish authors and rabbis. Many of them complain about the blurred vision of their own supporters.

After they were forced to flee Spain (1492) and Portugal (1497), many Sephardic Jews settled in, among other places to Eastern Europe. Whilst settling in Russia, they were faced with a longstanding hostile attitude from the government. Upon the ascension to the throne of Czar Alexander II this, Fortunately, came to a halt. For the first time one could find Jews in the more respectable positions of physicians, architects, lawyers and industrialists. The liberal Czar even trusted them with the scientific and economical restoration of the country. Even the foundation of the Russian State Bank was entrusted to the Jews. The good times, however, didn’t last long. When they were accused of the murder of Czar Alexander II on the thirteenth of March, 1881, unsurpassed pogroms started. Shortly thereafter a group of idealistic Jews fled to Palestine to find a refuge for their fellow sufferers. They bought a piece of land in the vicinity of Jaffa to grow wheat and other crops. Later, other Jews from Russia and Romania arrived in Palestine. In 1883, 200 Jewish families were living scattered over six areas. Zionism was born.

The Spectrum Encyclopaedia defines Zionism as a “political movement aiming at the settling of a Jewish state in Palestine.” In other places Zionism is defined as actually striving to achieve this goal. According to historians, Zionism was already established during the Thom (Prussia) convention of 1860. During this assembly, the necessity of a home state for the Jews in Palestine was recognized.

The man who took the actual initiative for this political movement as we know it today was Theodor Herzl, a Jew of Hungarian descent. He graduated from the University of Salzburg, where he read law and subsequently became a journalist, author and correspondent in France for the Viennese Neue Freie Presse. His Zionist ideas and points of view regarding the solution, both politically and economically, were summarized in his 1895 book Der Judenstaat (The Jewish State). Two years later he established the Zionist World Organization and, in Switzerland, organized the first Zionist Congress. According to Herzl himself, the principal target of his Zionist movement was the establishment of an independent state, a new fatherland for the threatened Jews in Eastern Europe.

The Swedish magazine Judisk Krönikan (Jewish Chronicles) from the first of February, 1988, gave another point of view:

“Zionism consists of an invisible, great and powerful emporium that doesn’t appear on any map, but is explicitly present and operates under capitalism all over the world.”

The Jewish author Jack Bernstein wrote a few years ago:

“Judaism is a religion, but Zionism is a political movement created by those same people that were also at the basis of Communism. Their main target is to form a world government presided over by international capitalists.”

Regarding this book, it is important to know that the large banks of the families Rothschild, Schiff, Morgan, Warburg, Russell and Rockefeller not only played an important role in Zionism, they also supported the aim of the Zionist movement with enormous funding. These very influential Illuminati families have established inconspicuous organizations everywhere in Israel. Together with the Rockefellers, the Rothschilds have invested very substantial amounts in Palestinian agriculture and industry.

The Rothschild family made possible the British purchase of the Suez Canal in 1875, through which England gained dominance in Egypt. After the British declaration that Palestine formed the strategic wing of defense for the Suez Canal, preparations were made, aided by the Rothschilds, to end the dominance of the Ottoman Empire over Palestine.

Shortly before the First World War the Rothschilds founded the predecessor of the Mossad. Jozef Tobin, Norman Belkant and Madam Sora headed the organization. The intelligence service’s headquarters were located in the village of Zimmarin, Palestine. Spies were deployed everywhere to gather information about the Ottoman army. To collect the information, everybody who had important intelligence was bribed. Women were used to seduce men in important positions within the army. Crucial and confidential information came from Simi Simon, an attractive Jewish woman that seduced the commander of the Ottoman army in Damascus. With the help of these spies, important information and knowledge about the Ottoman army were provided to the British. Contact with Jewish spies was made every night from a British naval vessel using light signals from the coast, after which messages and information were sent from the coast to the ship via a bottle attached to a rope.

The British fleet controlled the entire coast from Syria to Morocco; and the Russians made Armenian partisans into an army. To divert attention away from Palestine, the population throughout the Ottoman Empire was encouraged to revolt. The first uprising against the Ottomans took place in Saudi Arabia and was led by Amir Faisal, son of Sharif Hussein.

Soon after, Ottoman intelligence discovered the existence of the Jewish spy ring. The headquarters in Zimmarin were attacked and every suspect apprehended, with most of them receiving death sentences. Madam Sora, Jozef Tobin and Norman Belkant were transported to Damascus, a voyage during which Madam Sora committed suicide. The others were sentenced to death.

These developments allowed the British to begin their campaign against the Ottomans earlier than they had anticipated. General Allenby later admitted:

“We knew the Ottoman’s biggest secrets. That is why we were victorious and have won the war.”

The sudden and unconditional surrender of Germany also meant the surrender of the Ottoman Empire, its ally. The Ottoman Empire no longer existed, and all its Arabian provinces fell under British and French control. The Caliph and Sultan were deposed and granted asylum in Great Britain.

With the breakup of the Ottoman Empire, other Arab countries like Iraq came under British tutelage. Amir Faisal, who had led the Arab Revolt against the Ottoman sultan, was brought in from Mecca by the British to become King of Iraq in 1921. Many Iraqi Jews were appointed to key administrative posts, including that of Economics Minister. Britain retained final authority over domestic and external affairs.

After the victory over the Ottomans, in November 1917, Illuminati and prominent Zionist Lord Arthur James Balfour left for the Unites States where he published the famous Balfour Declaration in the form of a letter to Lord Rothschild. On behalf of the British government, the Jews were promised the founding of their own fatherland in Palestine. 382

The specific ideological principle of Zionism, in which it was claimed that the Jews had a historic right to Palestine and that this country had been practically uninhabited on the eve of colonization, was contradicted by Balfour. He wrote:

“We willingly and rightfully denounce the principle of self determination, because the Jewish issue outside Palestine is a matter of world importance and Zionism is rooted in age-old traditions, current needs and hope for the future, that are much more important than the desires and the loss of rights of the 700,000 Arabs currently populating the old country.”

Winston Churchill declared before the Commission Peel:

“The native population has no more right to the Palestine than a dog has a right to his kennel, even though he may have lived in it for a long time. These people have by no means been done any injustice because a stronger race, or at least a more worldwide race, to use this expression, has taken over their place.” 383

In April 1922, in San Remo, mandate over Palestine was granted to England and two years later the League of Nations officially handed the mandate over Palestine to Great Britain. In the mandate of the League of Nations, with which England had gained dominance over Palestine, the Jewish Agency for Palestine was supposed to take on the representation of the Jewish people. The intention was that this organization would cooperate with the power of the mandate and give advice regarding the founding of a Jewish state. For this task, Theodor Herzl founded the Zionist Organization (later the Zionist World Organization), an international federation of Zionist groups. In the 1930s this organization practically functioned as the government of the future Jewish State. Around that same time the Arab Federation published a plan that anticipated the complete fulfillment of the Balfour-Declaration.

The Plan

- In 1935 the Jews had to own 85% of the country.
- In 1936 they were to have control over all labor in Palestine.
- In 1937 the Arabs were to be reduced to a minority of the population.

Naeim Giklad writes in his book Ben-Gurion’s Scandals: How the Haganah and the Mossad Eliminated Jews :

“Under the leadership and management of David Ben-Gurion, the World Zionist Organization ignored the existence of the Jewish communities of the Islamic countries. He thought about them only after he threw 750,000 Palestinian Arabs off their land that he then appropriated. At that point he realized he needed cheap labor, but even when the Jews of Islamic countries came, Ben-Gurion kept them in tents and used them for propaganda purposes to extract money from the rich Jews. Ben-Gurion made racist statements, referring to these refugees as Avaki-Adam in Hebrew less than human, or sub-human. This was the basis of the relationship between the Ashkenazi Jews and the Jews from Islamic countries. The same treatment persists today; Jews of Islamic countries are considered second-class citizens.” 384

Writing at the end of 1934, Sir Francis Humphreys, Britain’s Ambassador in Baghdad, noted that:
“Zionism has sown dissension between Jews and Arabs. Bitterness has grown up between the two peoples who did not previously exist.”

The Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri el-Said who took directions from London began to create the conditions that would make the lives of Iraqi Jews so miserable they would leave for Israel. Jewish government employees were fired from their jobs; Jewish merchants were denied import/export licenses; and police began to arrest Jews for trivial reasons. On June 1, 1941, 500 Iraqi Jews were killed in the streets of Baghdad in anti-Jewish riots involving the Iraqi army and British Gurkha. The anti-Jewish riots gave the Zionists the pretext to set up a Zionist underground in Iraq. During these years many Iraqi Jews were killed in acts of sabotage against Jewish institutions. Thousands of anti-Jewish leaflets calling on Jews to leave Iraq were distributed and more than 120,000 Iraqi Jews fled to Israel.

Zionist propagandists still maintain that the bombs in Iraq were set off by anti-Jewish Iraqis who wanted Jews out of their country. Naeim Giklad states:

“The terrible truth is that the grenades that killed and maimed Iraqi Jews and damaged their property were thrown by Zionist Jews.”

Wilbur Crane Eveland, a former senior officer in the CIA comes to the same conclusion in his book, Ropes of Sand: America's Failure in the Middle East:

“In attempts to portray the Iraqis as anti-American and to terrorize the Jews, the Zionists planted bombs in the U.S. Information Service library and in synagogues. Soon leaflets began to appear urging Jews to flee to Israel. Although the Iraqi police later provided our embassy with evidence to show that the synagogue and library bombings, as well as the anti-Jewish and anti-American leaflet campaigns, had been the work of an underground Zionist organization, most of the world believed reports that Arab terrorism had motivated the flight of the Iraqi Jews whom the Zionists had rescued really just in order to increase Israel’s Jewish population.”

In truth, the Zionist movement was not concerned with the welfare of Jews who were native to Islamic countries. After the expulsion of more than 750,000 Palestinian Arabs, the expropriation of their lands and the destruction of more than 300 of their villages, Israel acquired millions of dunums of fertile land that awaited Ashkenazi Jewish settlers and farmers from Europe. In 1952, the labor force that helped carry out the government projects consisted of eighty-two percent of the Jews of Middle Eastern origin that were housed in slums (Maabarot). The development of the agricultural infrastructure and rebuilding and expansion of the citrus industry were the most important of these projects. There was a systematic pattern of giving preference to the interests of the class that was already strong, namely the veteran Ashkenazi settlers. While the Israeli government sent European immigrants to solid housing, it sent Jews from Islamic countries to tent encampments where they lived for several years.

One of the most important problems the Rothschilds, their allies and the Zionist movement faced was the fact that a larger part of the Jewish population were not in the least interested in immigrating to Palestine. The United States was the preferred immigration country by most Jews. Many Jews openly rebelled against Zionism and all efforts to convince them were in vain. Many important Jews continue to denounce and criticize Zionism. There is probably nothing more that divides the Jews than Zionism.

A Zionist is not necessarily a Jew, and many are atheists. Many people are not aware of the fact that ninety-five percent of the Zionist leaders are atheists. The Jewish trailblazers of Zionism themselves didn’t attach much value to religion. Most of them didn’t define the Jews as a religious community but rather as an independent race. According to them, the Jewish race differed so much from that of the Europeans that living alongside them was impossible.

The World Zionist Organization started an intensive propaganda campaign in every country with a Jewish community and emphasized that the Chosen People could not live alongside the Europeans. The Jews had to immigrate to Palestine unconditionally and immediately, a summons that was generally ignored by most Jews.

Rabbi Yisroel D. Weiss said in a theological address during the International Conference for Authentic Historical Research and Freedom of Speech in June 2002 in Washington:

“Apart from the Zionists only the Nazis considered the Jews a separate race. And exactly these Nazis have proven the stupidity and senselessness of racism. There was no way to prove that Mrs. Müller or Mr. Meyer was Jewish or Aryan. The only way to find out was by establishing the religious preference of the parents or grandparents.”

Rabbi Weiss also said:
“Zionists assume that the exile of the Jewish people was solely a material matter, caused by military and psychological weakness. Zionism summoned the Jewish people to violently end their exile. And the Jews fought their wars, first against the British and later against the Palestinians. Since the destruction of the temple our people have believed throughout history that the Diaspora is a punishment from God. And no Jew would ever dare claim that the destruction of the temple by the Romans could simply be blamed on the military weakness of the Jews themselves. The temple was mainly lost because the Jews refused to live according to Gods’ religious laws.”

Rabbi Hirsch, a leading Jewish cleric, said the following:

“Zionism wanted to label the Jewish people as a national entity. This is a diversion from the true religion and it therefore didn’t occur to any Jew to conquer the Holy Land with weapons. The Diaspora did happen to be a purely physical matter, but it was mainly caused by a natural spiritual purity, that was caused by the exile. And it will therefore be this same natural spiritual purity that will dissolve the Diaspora and will herald the promised era of peace and worldwide brotherhood. It will consist of the principles of our faith: inner peace, religion and studying the Torah and the good works.”

When Zionism began to expand, it was strongly criticized by the then rabbinic leaders. From Jewish circles in Western Europe and in America developed a strong criticism against Zionism. As expressed by Laurie Magnus:

“Dr. Herzl and those sharing similar notions are traitors of the Jewish history that they do not know well and which they interpreted wrongly.”

The Maharal in Prague was a Czech-Slovak rabbi and a key figure amongst Jewish leaders. He wrote that a Jew would rather give his life than undo the Diaspora by re-conquering the Holy Land.

Organizations of assimilated Jews from all countries at that time started a revolt against Zionism. In Germany and all Western European countries the majority of the religious Jews as well as their rabbis understood Judaism to be a religion, in spite of increasing hatred against Jews, and denounced Zionism. The dominant Viennese rabbi, Dr. Güdemann, wrote in his book Nationaljudentum:

“Ever since the Diaspora Israel has become a purely religious community.”
He considered it a historic aim for the Jews to denounce National Socialist ideas and warned against the efforts to unite the Jews into one nation. He concluded that Judaism had settled all over the world and that Zion remained nothing but a symbol. He gave a human disposition to Messianism by being convinced that the Messianic era would reconcile all countries. According to him, Zion was related to the future of the entire mankind. True Zionism therefore couldn’t be seen separately from the future of mankind. 390

According to devout Jews the ultimate target, the end of their exile, didn’t mean the creation of a political state Israel, but rather the opposite: a worldwide spirituality, brotherhood, harmony and a communal religion. I would like to quote Rabbi Samson Hirsch, a Jewish scholar from the nineteenth century:

“When during the reign of the Roman emperor Hadrian the Bar Kochba revolution desperately failed, it became obvious that the Jewish people always had to remember an important fact: never again should the Jewish people be allowed independently try to achieve a national independence. Their future as a nation unrelentingly lies in Gods providence. It is forbidden for all Jews to unite by means other than those of a spiritual nature.”

Rabbi Maybaum from Berlin and Rabbi Vogelstein from Szczecin published a protest against Zionism on behalf of the society of Jewish Rabbis in Germany. In the introduction they drew attention to the following principal: Jews are no more than a religious community, and the German Jews have the German nationality. They insisted on a communal protest by all German Jews against political Zionism and mobilized all rabbinic teachers and similar professionals in an overt campaign against Zionism. Many prominent German Jews joined this protest.

Ludwieg Geiger, leader of the liberal Jews and the son of renowned literary and cultural historian Abraham Geiger, broached a daring proposal. After sharply rejecting Zionism, he went so far as to request the German government to take away the citizenship of Zionists. 391

Jewish author Isaac Deutscher said:

“Even in Eastern Europe, where Jews used to live in secluded communities in which they developed their own language and culture and who were exposed to unfettered discrimination, Jews considered themselves as citizens of the country they lived in and subsequently connected their future to the future of those countries and not with a Jewish state in Palestine. And at least half of the Jews from Eastern Europe turned themselves deliberately and strongly against this idea.” 392

The Spanish and Portuguese communities disassociated themselves from Zionism. The majority of English Jews, as well, were reluctant toward Zionism. From the very beginning Herzl’s ideas had also met resistance amongst Jewish immigrants. One of the most famous anti-Zionists was Lucien Wolf, a Jewish historian. He saw danger in Zionism because it encouraged anti-Semitism and tried to turn back the revolution of modern Jewish history.

Rabbi Yisroel Dovid Weiss said:

“When one regards the Diaspora as the consequence of a military defeat, than one takes the heart and soul away from the Jewish faith and thus their divine destiny. A divine banishment of punishment, of mourning, of sin and of the miraculous return can only be achieved by the strength of the pure spirit. Once we resolve to change the divine plan of our exile, with it we presume that the essence of the Jewish destiny can be determined by other powers than those of the purely spiritual power. To put it more clearly: if we deny the fact that remuneration and punishment is determined by God, if we therefore not believe that God constantly guards us, and we subsequently accept that the exile was the consequence of a military defeat we are blasphemers!”

It’s not only famous Jewish authors such as Tom Segev or J. G. Burg that regularly struggle with the political Zionist movement; the most orthodox Jews also denounce the state of Israel. In 1947, the then chief rabbi of Jerusalem, Yosef Tsvi Dushinksy sent a letter to the United Nations in which he stated that he spoke on behalf of 60,000 Jews that did not appreciate being integrated into the future state of Israel.

According to most orthodox Jews, Zionist politics put the Jewish people in a bad light. Zionism aims at getting as many Jews as possible to immigrate to Israel from all over the world. According to Rabbi Neuberger they would have to be disappointed:

“Over the past few years hundreds of thousands Israelis and Jews left the Zionist paradise. They realized that Zionist state is no more than a huge ghetto.”
In his book Der Zionismus ist das schlimmste Krebsgeschwür im Judaismus, Rabbi Weiss writes:

“Zionism undermines the religious Jewish foundation, it mainly seduces American Jews into investments in the state of Israel instead of in the country in which they live.”

Rabbi G. J. Neuberger confirms this:

“Never shall I forget what I heard a woman from Oklahoma say: ‘Isn’t nowadays Judaism wonderful? Everything you have to do is spend money!’” Rabbi Weiss wrote: “Judaism and Zionism are anything but the same. A good Jew can’t be a Zionist, and a Zionist can’t be a good Jew.”
Chapter 32

Hitler and the Foundation of the State of Israel

“Although it may sound strange, the state of Israel is indebted to Hitler. Without the decisive impact of Nazism and anti-Semitism the United Nations would never have supported the decision to found a Jewish state in Arab Palestine.” Jewish historian Professor Bruno Blau

The Antichrist will choose Jerusalem as the capital of his global empire. Therefore, the foundation of an Israeli state in Palestine was one of the most important elements of the Illuminati plan. As a “fruit” of the Second World War, this objective could be realized. What influence the Illuminati thought the state of Israel would have, at a global level, and how they managed to realize the foundation are interesting questions. The answers to these questions are relevant because they give us a greater insight into the Illuminati strategy. Before subjecting this strategy to a critical analysis, we must not forget that the Illuminati fanatically waged anti-Semitic campaigns against the Jewish people. In addition to these campaigns, from 1932 onwards, they also called on various sects that had been created by the Illuminati. These sects took an active part in the anti-Semitic campaigns. 393

For instance, the literature of the Jehovah’s Witnesses not only served as one of the causes of the spread of anti-Semitism, it also provided real support of Adolf Hitler’s anti-Semitic policies. The documents that were published during these years often contain anti-Semitic articles. The leader of the Jehovah’s Witnesses, Judge J.F. Rutherford, accused the Jews of boycotting Germany. Usually he used words like “naïve” and “simpletons” in reference to the Jews. That anti-Semitism was an ongoing aspect of Rutherford’s and the Watch Tower Society’s policy for many years is made evident by Enemies, an official Watch Tower publication written by Rutherford and published in 1937. In that book Rutherford shows vicious contempt, not only for Jewish clergymen who were the targets of a general anti-clericalism, but for the Jewish people as a whole. Jewish clergy and organizations are called “Yiddish clergy”, “Yiddish organizations”, and “poor simpletons”. Rutherford specifically says:

“Amongst the Roman Catholic Hierarchy’s instruments that she uses are ultra-selfish men called “Jews”, who look only for personal gain, and who therefore readily yield to and join with the Hierarchy in any unrighteous schemes.”

In the Watchtower’s Declaration of Facts, Rutherford proclaimed:

“We stand squarely for the principles advocated by the government of Germany.”

During a visit to Germany in June 1933, Rutherford wrote a “statement” and personal letter to Hitler.

In the statement Rutherford emphatically agreed with Hitler’s political position with regard to humanity’s oppression by big business, the League of Nations, and the thirty-three billion dollars worth of repair payments the allied had imposed on Germany. He then pointed out that even Jesus Christ was on the side of the Nazis. The letter was a declaration of support from the Jehovah’s Witnesses to the Nazi regime! Shortly before the infamous “Kristallnacht”, the Watchtower Society on July 18, 1938 published an article in a magazine called Trost (Comfort) that was aimed against the Jewish people and that was distributed throughout Germany. After slandering the Jewish people by accusing them of being in league with the devil’s organization, the article ended with the following words:

“The Jews show us how terrible it is to be denied Jehovah’s blessing. They have been cut off from God’s favor and know no rest here [in Germany] either. They will reap what they have sown! But for how long?”

Just like the Nazis, the heavily anti-Semitic Watchtower Society used anti-Jewish expressions in its publications. Rudolf Höss, the commander of concentration camp Auschwitz, had the following to say about it:

“Remarkably enough all Jehovah’s Witnesses were convinced that it was only fair that the Jews should suffer and die, because their ancestors had once betrayed Jehovah.”
As said before, one of the Illuminati’s main problems was that most Jews had no plans of immigrating to Palestine at all. All efforts to persuade them were, in vain and many openly resisted Zionism. In fact, German Jews were known for their patriotism. Most of them had lived in Germany for over a hundred years, and because of the “Jewish decision” of 1812, they had the same political rights as other German citizens. As a result, they felt more German than anything else and did not see themselves as foreigners. This feeling of connectedness not only generated sympathy and a positive attitude towards their country, it also meant there was a great deal of outright hatred towards Zionism.

In his book Die Ungelöste Judenfrage (Berlin 1977), the Jewish writer Isaak Deutscher discusses a peculiar phenomenon:

“Before, during, and even after the rise of Nazism, a majority of the Jews refused to answer the call of Zionism.”

Despite the rise of Nazism, most Jews could not be persuaded to move to Palestine.

If we are to believe the official version of history, Hitler’s takeover of Germany was aimed at speeding up the emigration of Jews, exactly according to the Illuminati plan. To do so, they first had to terminate any Jewish influence in political, economic and cultural circles.

The persecution of the Jews in Germany offered the Illuminati new ways and possibilities for the large-scale immigration of German Jews to Palestine. 395 David Ben Gurion, at the time the Chairman of the Executive Jewish Agency (future Prime Minister of Israel), hoped that the persecution of Jews would strengthen Zionism. 396 The Zionists were happy with the persecution of the Jews because it meant the increase of Jewish immigration to Palestine! 397 In Adolf Hitler, a catalyst had been found. 398

According to Israeli historian and journalist Tom Segev, a few months after Hitler came to power, a high Zionist representative traveled to Berlin to negotiate with the Nazis about the immigration of Jews, and their possessions, to Palestine. 399 The Zionists tried to negotiate the most favorable conditions for the immigration to Palestine. The Nazi authorities, to a large extent, accepted most of the Zionist’s proposals, and as early as May 1933, the first economic treaty was signed, leading to the Ha’avara treaty in that same year. 400
The mutual interests of the Nazi government and the Zionist movement formed the basis for the Ha’avara treaty. The former director of Ha’avara, Werner Feilchenfeld, in 1972 published a brochure in which he wrote that the Ha’avara treaty was enforced from 1933 until 1941.

The Ha’avara treaty allowed German Jews who wanted to immigrate to Palestine, to transfer their money to special accounts of the Warburg-owned Private Bank in Hamburg. These funds were used in Germany to manufacture agricultural machines, construction materials, pumps, sowing machines and other equipment for the future settlements in Palestine. All these products were transported to the Ha’avara society in Palestine (Tel Aviv). The products were then sold, and the proceeds transferred back to the Jewish immigrants when they arrived in Palestine. On a regular basis the products were also divided among the immigrants themselves, in accordance with their assets with the Private Bank.

In this way, the Ha’avara treaty served as a tremendous stimulus for German exports to Palestine. It was a cooperation that fulfilled the Zionist need for Jewish immigrants and capital in the form of durable materials. Germany benefited enormously from this trade agreement, which between 1933 and 1939 yielded the considerable turnover of 105,670,241 Reichsmarks.

The Warburgs played an important role in the Ha’avara agreement. During the first years that the treaty was in force, Max Warburg was responsible for carrying out the Ha’avara treaty. Later, Max Warburg handed this responsibility over to his brother Felix Warburg, who managed to considerably increase Jewish immigration through dividends and loans.

Those who were considering immigrating to Palestine could deposit their funds in advance and, for the time being, continue to live in Germany. They had free access to their money in the form of credits of the Jewish community in Palestine. However, they could also decide to invest their money in Palestine. They could even pay for future health insurance ten years in advance! The Ha’avara treaty also offered people the option of visiting Palestine before finally deciding on whether or not they wanted to immigrate. They would pay for their travel expenses in advance, and received vouchers which they could use in Palestine. As immigration to Palestine became reality, the Private Bank gave advances of 1000 Palestinian pounds to those interested in relocating to Palestine. The allocation of Palestinian money at the time was a huge exception that only applied to German Jews who immigrated to that country. This is emphasized by the Israeli historian Abraham Barkai in his book Vom Boykott zur Entjudung. The Jewish immigrants had to show the amount in Palestinian pounds upon arrival as proof that they could pay for what they needed and would be able to build a new life. The remainder of their money was awaiting them in private accounts set up by the Ha’avara Bank. When they immigrated, the Jews could take their furniture and anything else (i.e. machines and tools) they needed to build a new existence for themselves.

According to Tom Segev, many Jewish immigrants who had been forced to leave their jobs in Germany would continue to receive monthly allowances from German social security.

In addition to the many private cars, complete libraries of both classical and modern literature and valuable pieces of furniture moved to Palestine, the Jews also brought considerable fortunes to their new homeland. According to Jewish historian Edwin Black:

“Especially in the late Thirties, immigrants were allowed to transfer the value of their houses and factories to Palestine.”

He calculated that a total amount of seventy million dollars ended up in Palestine through agreements and international bank transfers. The influx of German capital had an enormous impact on a Palestine that at the time was considered underdeveloped.

Various large industrial enterprises were rebuilt on the spot; among them were the Mekoroth Water Purification Plant and the Lodzia Textiles Plant. According to Edwin Black, the enormous influx of goods and capital as a result of the Ha’avara treaty was an indispensable factor in the growth of the economy and foundation of the state of Israel.

In a brochure from the Ministry for Foreign Affairs published in January 1939, it says that the rebuilding of the Jewish state in Palestine was only possible due to the transfer of Jewish property from Germany through the Ha’avara treat. In the legal publication Haavara: Transfer nach Palästina und Einwanderung Deutscher Juden 1933-1939 (published by the Leo Baeck Institute), commissioned by Dr. Werner Feilchenfeld and carried out by an influential Ha’avara staff member, it is stated:
“The influx of German capital through the trade transactions of the Ha’avara treaty was of great importance to the rebuilding of the country, for the private as well as the public sector. Many new industrial and trade enterprises have been created in Jewish Palestine. Many existing companies that are vitally important to the Israeli economy have also emerged from this. A good example is the Mekoroth Company, which provides the whole of Israel with clean drinking water. Between 1933 and 1940 the production and size of Jewish settlements doubled. This was only made possible through the loans which were granted within the framework of the Ha’avara treaty.”

Despite the favorable circumstances for the German Jews and the future Palestine, resistance against the Ha’avara treaty was great. The dealings that took place behind the scenes are described at length by Edwin Black in his book The Transfer Agreement. Black found it hard to comprehend that there existed a treaty between the Third Reich and the Zionist organization that benefited the state of Israel, and he thought it nearly impossible to explain. Not everything went smoothly in Palestine; the Palestinian entrepreneurs saw their trading power decline because of the monopoly of the Ha’avara organization with regard to the import of German products. Especially noted, was the resistance of the budding Jewish trade and industry to import cheaper and better products from Germany. In the end, the Ha’avara organization responded to this resistance by imposing restrictions on imports, in a bid to protect the market for domestic products (the so-called Tozeret-Haarez protection).

There were various ways clever entrepreneurs could benefit from this treaty, especially through deft navigation. In some cases enterprises would first import their machine parts from Germany, via the Ha’avara treaty, and then use import restriction against domestic products. This had a negative impact on demand for foreign products and a positive one on the Ha’avara organization’s balance of trade.

The main condition governing the Ha’avara treaty with the Nazis was that the Jews would leave for Palestine. It was made very clear to Jews that immigration to Palestine was their only chance of survival. The assets of Jews who preferred to move to neighboring countries were frozen! Those who planned to immigrate to Palestine, however, received all the necessary aid.
The Ministry for Foreign Affairs, including the German consulate in Jerusalem, the Central-Europe Department (Orient) and the Department of Foreign Trade together supported the Zionist policy. The Ministry for Domestic Affairs was responsible for managing the immigration, while the Ministry for Economic Affairs sped up the mass immigration and took care of the Ha’avara treaty and its economic impacts. Expert on American affairs and historian Francis R. Nicosia, in his doctoral thesis for an American university, shed light on the relationship between the Nazi government and the Zionists, as well as on the persecution of the Jews from Hitler’s takeover of power to the outbreak of the Second World War. According to Nicosia, the German government, the SS in particular, supported the immigration of Jews to Palestine by providing practical development aid in a variety of areas. The SS even educated young Jews in special military institutions and from the outset was involved in influencing German Jews. The SS was fully in favor of mass immigration and went as far as putting pressure on the Jews that only saw themselves as German. These Germans were made aware of their Jewish heritage and identity in schools created by Germany and operated by the SS. They did this by annexing many kinds of Jewish socio-cultural institutions. It was only after the Jews had been made fully aware of their Jewish heritage and identity that they would be more willing to immigrate to Palestine.

All measures designed to promote the immigration of German Jews fell under the purview of the SS and the Gestapo, including the special military and schooling institutions. Over time, relationships between the Nazis and the Zionists increased. The Zionists believed that the schooling programs had a positive impact on the immigration of Jews to Palestine, so they designed an extensive network of schooling centers funded and built by the SS. To a large extent the SS itself provided the land on which these centers would be built. These schooling programs were first aimed at young Jews without professions or jobs. It provided them with all the knowledge and skills they would need in Palestine. Throughout the German empire was a huge network of these schooling centers where Zionist teachers prepared Jews for a future life in Palestine. It may sound strange, but at the time it was to the Gestapo that many Jews looked for help if they had been threatened by other civil servants or otherwise felt in danger. When the Jewish Emigration Agency in Berlin suffered great damage during the infamous Kristallnacht in November 1938, it was the SS that did everything it could to get the agency up and running again.
Unlike the anti-Zionists, officers within the SS gave Zionists, liberals and willing Jews preferential treatment. Anti-Zionists were imprisoned and only released if they promised to immigrate to Palestine.

After Hitler annexed Austria in 1938 the Wiener Zentralstelle für Jüdische Auswanderung (Immigration Office for Jews), in Vienna, was headed by Adolf Eichmann. In this capacity Eichmann and his staff met regularly with Zionist leaders such as David Ben Gurion in a wing of the Rothschild palace.

One of the results of the relationship between the Nazis and the Zionists was that officers like Eichmann regularly visited Palestine, where there were local branches of the Nazi party. According to Nicosia it got to a point, in 1937, where the German government, through its Foreign Department, decreed that the Palestinian Nazis were forbidden to spread anti-Semitic propaganda. The anti-Jewish sentiments of the Palestinian Arabs were not encouraged, because this might have had a negative effect on the German immigration policy for the Jews. In addition, it would have caused unrest amongst the future immigrants to Palestine.

After the annexation of Austria, schooling centers were built there as well. Adolf Eichmann supervised the process himself and later joined the Gestapo in fighting illegal immigration. Large groups of immigrants were regularly escorted to Austria by the SS.

In her book Eichmann in Jerusalem: A Report on the Banality of Evil, Hannah Arendt writes that during the Jerusalem Tribunal Eichmann expressed his opinion that he had saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of Jews.

With the Nazis’ permission, the Jewish Betar youth union was able to carry on its activities in Austria. Meetings, summer camps, hiking, sailing and other sports continued as before. In addition, agricultural courses were provided. Members of this youth union were allowed to continue to wear their full uniforms and even distributed leaflets with fascist texts, all in tune with the times. When an SS unit suddenly raided the Betar youth camp, the leader of the group contacted the Gestapo, and was immediately offered retribution. Later, the Gestapo announced that the unit involved had been punished.

From the start the Ha’avara treaty was supported by the Nazis, but from 1935 onwards, criticism of the immigration policy and the execution of the treaty increased. The intelligence service of the SS was afraid that a Jewish state would give the Jews a power base from which to attack the German empire. From 1937 onwards, most of the government and party institutions turned their backs on the Ha’avara treat. However, by personal decree from Hitler, these institutions were reprimanded in 1938. The Ha’avara treaty had to be carried out at all costs! Hitler ignored all advice from his economic experts when he said that the immigration of the Jews was more important than any economic considerations. Dr. Yehuda Bauer estimates that although the Ha’avara treaty was, on one hand, an important financial source for the creation of Israel, on the other it was a loss-making treaty for the German empire. In his book Freikauf von Juden: Verhandlungen zwischen dem nationalsozialistischen Deutschland und jüdischen Repräsentanten von 1933 bis 1945 (Frankfurt am Main 1996) he writes:

“The amounts are impressive and without a doubt have made the construction of the Jewish state possible.”

The Israeli politician and anti-Zionist Uri Averney, in his book Israel ohne Zionisten, argues that during the war Zionist leaders did nothing to help the Jews in Europe. In their view, philanthropic rescue attempts in Europe and even the rescuing of German Jews would only damage the Palestinian state. Considered unwanted human material, most Jews brought only their immigration papers and nothing else to Palestine. The Zionist leaders of the immigration services in Palestine agreed wholeheartedly:

“As far as Palestine is concerned, ninety percent of these Jews are unusable.”

In the Zionist archives in Jerusalem, there is a report of the “rescue committee” that contains a very remarkable consideration:

“In which case should we rescue them? Do we simply rescue anybody who is in need? Or should we turn this into a Zionist action and rescue only those who will be useful in building the country of Israel and Jewry? If all we can rescue are some 10,000 to 50,000 people rather than a million, we should only rescue those who can be used in rebuilding the Jewish nation, despite all the requests and accusations from the rest. It is important that we save young pioneers with a good education, who are able to carry out Zionist work.”

The report speaks of “the best material” in reference to who were considered worthy of rescuing.
In other words, all Zionist leaders adhered to a policy that was un-Jewish. Chaim Weizmann, one of the most important Zionist leaders, had also only considered immigration to Palestine, and nothing more. At the time, he said the following:

“I would rather see German Jews perish than the state of Israel.”

The leaders kept a close eye on Israel’s interests and did not consider it their task to save Jews in Europe. Their task was to build the country of Israel, this according to David Ben Gurion in a message from the Jewish Agency. Three weeks after the Kristallnacht, Ben Gurion declared:

“If I could be sure that it would be possible to save the lives of all Jewish children in Germany by transporting them to England, while only half of them could be saved by transporting them to Palestine, I would choose the latter.”

At a session of the Central Committee on December 7, 1938, David Ben Gurion expressed his opinion that “the human conscience” of many countries would respond to the Kristallnacht, and that they would open their borders to refugees from Germany. He saw this as a threat and warned:

“Zionism is in danger!”

We must not forget that anti-Semitism was beginning to have terrible consequences under the Nazi regime. As conditions for the German Jews deteriorated, the number of requests for immigration to Palestine increased. It was only in 1939, when the British government decided to restrict immigration that the exodus of Jews to Palestine came to a halt. It is a huge scandal that the British chased away various ships containing Jewish refugees close to the Palestinian coast, as a result of which 600 hundred Jews drowned.

For years we were fed stories about the passengers of the immigrant ships Patria and Struma: that they preferred to die in mid-sea, as a protest against the British mandate not allowing them to set foot on the land of Palestine. Unfortunately, this false version of the events of that day is what continues to fuel public opinion.

In the latter half of November 1940, a number of ships carrying thousands of Jewish refugees from Europe arrived, among them the Patria and the Milos. Unfortunately the refugees who got on the ships without being screened by the Jewish Agency were mostly the elderly and children. Although the Agency had 29,000 entry visas it could have used for these immigrants, it decided these Jews did not merit certificates and categorically denied their requests to dock in Palestine. Given the evasive stance of the Jewish Agency, the British began to transfer the passengers of the two ships to another ship, the Patria, which was in Haifa and was to take them to the island of Mauritius. The Jewish Agency felt otherwise and decided to use the lives of the immigrants for a gamble with political achievement as a goal. Haganah activists took explosives into the ship and killed 1,783 people.

Another ship, whose passengers drowned, was the Struma. In early February 1942 the Struma arrived in Istanbul from Europe carrying 769 immigrants. The voyage was organized by Abraham Stoufer. He had raised funds from the local community and used them to hire ships which carried anyone who wanted to escape the Nazi hell. This was different from the Zionist method, which involved screening for suitable immigrants that would be able to work in the settlements. Unfortunately, Stoufer did not belong to the team of Jewish emissaries sent by the Zionist movement to Europe and therefore had no permission from Eichmann to be doing what he did. The Struma was sunk! Was its sinking an unexpected marine accident or was it due to the same deliberate act of terrorism as was the case with the Patria? Whatever the cause of the ship’s sinking, the Zionists took advantage of it to arouse world public opinion, sympathy and support for the opening of Palestine’s doors! According to the second Prime Minister of Israel, Moshe Sharett, “there was no other way.”

What is also remarkable is that it was the United States that tried to do all it could to restrict the exodus of Jews from Germany. The Jewish influence on the U.S., although powerful enough to elect Roosevelt president, was woefully incapable when it came to helping German Jews.

But let us leave the motives of the British, the Americans and the Zionists for a moment. I only want to point to a quote from the book Schuld und Schicksal by the Jewish author J.G. Burg:

“The more unjust the treatment of the Jewish people is, and the more they are persecuted, the better the chances for the Zionists are.”

If it had been up to the Nazi government, many more German Jews would have moved abroad. It was, however, especially the British government and the official Zionist movement that tried to prevent unwanted Jews from moving to British-occupied Palestine.

The Ha’avara treaty continued to function until the middle of the Second World War. Nevertheless, new threads between Nazism and Zionism were woven; the union between the two was never terminated. Professor Yehuda Bauer, Israel’s leading Holocaust researcher, and historian Jad Vaschem in his book Freikauf von Juden? speak of a final meeting between the delegates of Himmler and a representative of the Jewish World Congress, Norbert Masur, in Sweden. This encounter took place in April 1945, shortly before the ultimate fall of the Third Reich.

In his autobiography Staatsmann ohne Staat (Berlin 1970), Dr. Nahum Goldmann, the successor of Professor Chaim Weizmann as leader of the Zionist World Organization, defended the Ha’avara treaty:

“It made it possible for 80,000 German Jews to immigrate to Palestine; they have made remarkable achievements there and were among the creative elements involved in the construction of the country.”

The treaty had been so helpful to Jewish Palestine that after the war it was able to absorb hundreds of thousands of Jews from all over the world and become an independent state. In 1951, Jewish historian Professor Bruno Blau remarked:

“Although it may sound strange, the state of Israel is indebted to Hitler. Without the decisive impact of Nazism and anti-Semitism the United Nations would never have supported the decision to found a Jewish state in Arab Palestine.”

Historian Heiko Hauptmann from Basle added the following:

“First there was the “Shoa”, and then “Auschwitz”, that melted all the Jews, making the foundation of the state of Israel a necessity.”

Even today, many publications and motion pictures emerge claiming the German Jews fled across the border at night against Hitler’s will, leaving all their possessions behind. The truth is that the German government did everything it could to get Jews out of the country. The Jewish exodus from Germany was planned in advance and was carried out under ever-increasing pressure. It was an accurate and premeditated plan. We can only talk about an escape when it concerned the real, original orthodox and Sephardic Jews (the Children of Judea). The bitter irony is, however, that almost all these Jews ended up in concentration camps and very few of them survived this ordeal. The Holocaust was the largest and cruelest genocide in the history of mankind. Six million Jews and tens of thousands of Sinti and Roma died in Nazi concentration and mass destruction camps. An additional four million Poles and hundreds of thousands of other nationals perished in the same way. Historians talk of “death factories”, because in the camps the Germans operated methodically and on a large scale. Those who were liberated from these camps at the end of the war were, and are traumatized for life.

As we have seen, the same powerful circles financed the Zionist Organization and the rise of Nazism, and provided Hitler with the resources he needed. The Illuminati were behind the weakening and ultimate destruction of Europe and the foundation of the state of Israel. Without the Illuminati, Hitler would never have been able to seize power. Today, the ties between Hitler’s rise and reign and these influential Western circles are no longer secret. There are but a few researchers and historians who realize that Hitler was an effective tool in the hands of a small elite who made Hitler’s mission complicated and a well-kept

In the near East, the Second World War created a new political situation. In November 1947, the United Nations decided to divide into a Jewish and an Arab state. However, that was not enough for the Zionists; they wanted to rule the whole of Palestine.

After the world had learned of the persecution of the Jews by the Nazis, Zionism gained supporters. In no small part thanks to compassion towards the Jewish people, the Zionist dream was given shape in 1948 with the formation of the state of Israel. This happened with a mixture of diplomacy and terror. People like the Rothschilds ended up being the fundamentalist Zionist leaders. The Rothschilds also called “the royal family of Jewry” or “Kings of the Jews”, finance, the Israeli parliament (Knesset). Baron Rothschild possesses more power than David, and greater wisdom than Solomon. Baron Rothschild is the true King of Judah!

The Zionists have conquered Palestine with weapons, bombs, grenades and fighter planes. The Illuminati have helped to power and finance both Zionism and Adolf Hitler. They are at the beginning of the current state of Israel! The eventual foundation of an Israeli state in Palestine was a crucial element of the Illuminati program. Today, the foundation is being laid in Israel, making it possible for the world leader they will elect one day to rule the world from Jerusalem.

Conquering the World

The World Bank has been in existence since the end of the Second World War. This bank initially operated under the name International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and it collaborates closely with the equally famous International Monetary Fund (IMF). Because both institutions cannot move an inch without the Rothschilds and their monopoly over the world capital, they are completely dependent on this powerful financial dynasty. It is not surprising that the bankers holding top positions within these institutions are Illuminati.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank are two instruments used by the leaders of the New World Order to destroy countries and then govern these territories as colonies. These territories don’t have their own government, nor their own institutions, budgets and frontiers. These colonies only have their own government on paper, which is under the direct supervision of the IMF. According to the Canadian professor and economist Michel Chossudovsky “Wall Street” rules both the IMF and the World Bank:

“They are governed by bankers and not by sociologists.”

The International Monetary Fund is located in the center of Washington. Exactly across the street from it is the main entrance of its sister organization, the World Bank. Financial leading men of this world founded both financial institutions in 1944 during a conference in the American holiday resort Bretton Woods in New Hampshire.

The IMF started its financial activities on March 1, 1947. The original assignment was to promote international cooperation in the area of monetary politics; make a balanced growth of the world trade possible; promote the stability of exchange rates; assist the bringing about of a multilateral payment system; provide the associated countries with funding against sensible cover in case of difficulties with the payment balance and decrease the duration and nature of too big fluctuations in the international payment balances.

Today the IMF tries to characterize itself as an organization for development assistance. Together with the World Bank, the IMF exercises nearly unlimited power and can put nations up against each other. They can make the average income drop dramatically (far below the level of industrialized countries), and can regulate the spending power and actual wealth of any country as they please. They do the latter through restriction of the money in circulation, or forbidding the country in question to use its own economic profits. Instead, the countries are forced to export their products under the conditions of the competition on the world market. The collapse of legal economic systems form the basis for the development of uprisings, the destabilization of independent states, the collapse of institutions and, in extreme cases, it can lead to war. This will happen at the precise day and time determined by the truly ruling class.

The institutions founded in Bretton Woods are structural predecessors of the globalization of the financial and economic world. From the start they have been nothing other than tools that should ensure the strategic interests of big business in the long run. That isn’t any different today, only now one doesn’t have to reckon with a strong working class because its politics have been completely disoriented and divided. That is why this is reality: every country in which the IMF acts as a crisis manager and is involved in its internal affairs on behalf of the financial rulers of the world, the working class face difficult times.

For example, the World Bank and the IMF are responsible for the collapse of the Albanian banking system, which brought the economy to the edge of an abyss. The chaos that followed helped both American and European multinationals. Western oil groups, such as Occidental, Shell and British Petroleum, had their hearts set on the rich but uncultivated oil reserves of Albania. Investors from the West had their eyes set on the chrome, copper, gold, nickel and platinum supplies of this same country. The Adenauer Foundation lobbied in silence for the German mining groups.

Among the many countries that collapsed through the doings of the World Bank and the IMF, Zambia should also be mentioned. The World Development Movement (WDM), a big development organization from London, states that the reforms that these two organizations pushed on Zambia made 10,000 people lose their jobs, destroyed important industries, caused widespread agitation and increased poverty.
The Indonesian President Soeharto was not loved by the IMF. In his later years he stood up against the Illuminati. That is why Indonesian monetary politics were sabotaged as much as possible. The former leader of the IMF, Camdessus, said in his farewell speech:

“We created the circumstances that forced President Soeharto to resign.”

This means human suffering was created on purpose to realize certain political objectives. The average income per head of the population was reduced to half, poverty was widespread, religious intolerance arose, and a horrible civil war spread over the islands.

In order not to disturb the liberal or Christian conscience of the public at large, the good, social intentions of both institutions are stressed. The World Bank, especially, continuously claims to fight poverty. It is striking, however, that every developing country is poorer after a crisis the IMF and World Bank helped to cause. Ken Watkins, member of the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief (the relief organization Oxfam), is clearly opposed to the IMF and the World Bank:

“They don’t fight poverty; they create poverty.”

To professor Chossudovsky both financial institutions are nothing less than war instruments:

“When a delegation of the IMF visits a country and starts canceling existing social and economic credits as a condition for new credits that means a physical destruction that is comparable to a bombardment. The IMF demands the closure of hospitals, schools and factories, but eventually the result of everything is the complete destruction of a country.”

How does the Illuminati eliminate the resistance of individual countries? First the IMF and the World Bank demand all salaries to be frozen; banks, factories, etc. are ruined. Next all credits and trade with these countries are blocked. Then different nationalist parties are set up. Their followers are trained, armed and prepared for their task as so-called freedom-fighters abroad.

With the help of their immense financial reserves, the Illuminati manage a worldwide financial control system with which they can control the political system of each separate country and the complete world economy. Our elite have bought a huge part of the world with their economic power and placed it under their control. This brutal process of repression is nothing less than an economic world war in the name of globalization. In fact, the process comes down to a couple of international banks and multinationals ruling the world, while the once independent states fulfill nothing more than a kind of administrative position.

With the help of willful politicians, the Illuminati degrade the independent states to unresisting administrative offices that serve the growing multinationals. The era of globalization impoverishes populations, and it is assumed that only twenty percent of the world population eventually will fit within the system as working slaves. National parliaments will act as storytellers that have to keep up the image of democracy, while presidents and chancellors receive their instructions from the Illuminati.

Globalization is a trap for democracy, and countries opposing the New World Order put their independence at risk. All those people and nations with opposition opinions have to be eliminated in order to promote and fulfill this view of globalization.

The Iran-Iraq war

On September 24th of 1980, Iraqi war planes streaked out of the blue towards Iran. Their target was Iran's Kharg Island crude-oil export terminal. The Iraqi bombs not only engulfed Iran's primary oil export facility, they ignited the Iran-Iraq war that would rage for a full eight years. The official US policy on the stance of any United States involvement in this bloody war was that they were neutral. But, they were not at all neutral. The United States supplied both sides with weapons and secret U.S. intelligence support allowed Iran to fight the much better equipped professional Iraqi army to a standstill. Intelligence flowing from the United States gave Iranian generals advanced warning of attacks, battle plans, troop dispositions and vulnerabilities.

Bernard H. Corser describes following in his spectacular book Confessions of a U.S. Intelligence Officer:

“I worked on the Iran-Iraq war in an endless succession of eight hour swing shifts at the National Security Agency’s main complex on Fort Meade, Maryland. I wasn't senior staff. I was just a medium grade, GS-12 engineer at the time. My intercept equipment was part of a satellite uplink that controlled receivers that were located on the other side of the world at an allied intercept base in Cyprus. I would spend about two hours cruising through our frequencies, locating and copying encrypted Iraqi communications. I was never tasked to copy Iranian communications, only Iraqi. Instead of hearing Arabic in my headsets, I would hear my encrypted targets. They sounded somewhat like the computer signal on a telephone line with its noisy screeches and beeps. These intercepts were recorded on tape. After collecting a respectable amount of intercepts, I had to take them downstairs to NSA’s mammoth basement. It was here where we unscrambled the Iraqi signals, turning them into pristine Iraqi voice communications. I had to mount the tape with the encrypted signals on the classified equipment. Set the dials on the decryption gear and played the squeaks, beeps and buzzes into the input of the classified decryption equipment.
Immediately out came clear, pristine Iraqi conversations. These I had to record onto another tape and schlepped the decrypted tape up to the linguists back up on the fourth floor. It was they who made translations and then forwarded the results to the unseen and mysterious, high-ranking masters of American intelligence.

Even though I was playing an important part in desperate battles being waged in foreign deserts on the other side of the world, I had no sense of what was going on. In these battles, it was we, the intercept operators that actually played the key role. I had not yet realized that it was I and a few colleagues, directed by our unseen masters, who determined the outcome of battles and ultimately the final outcome of their entire war. The intelligence that we supplied, quietly determined which of Iraq's military units would die that day. The first realization that I might actually have helped kill people came when I was near exhaustion and interrupted in my job by the inconvenient death of over 12,000 men whom I had been instrumental in killing.

In the middle of one of my shifts, I received a handwritten note, instructing us that we had a new target, frequencies and intercept instructions. Only then, and never before, did I realize what had happened. I was devastated. The Iraqi armored division I had been intercepting was dead, and I had provided the necessary information to kill it. This wasn't the first time that we had a target disappear and were reassigned to a new one. I had never thought that those other units might have been wiped out. But this one was an Iraqi, Republican Guard armored division. It was about as close to an indestructible target as there was. It would remain the highest priority for our interception efforts even if it left the battlefield.

The note's wording contained the key clue. The analysts knew that we operators were desperate for any information about the targets into which we had been pouring our sweat and blood. But they weren't permitted to tell us anything. However, they would sometimes leave generous hints which we would devour and discuss like starving people after bread crumbs.

The handwritten note that I was now reading was one of the most blatant clues from the analysts that we had ever received. It said `Target Terminated! The new target is: ...´ Although the note was written in pencil, the word terminated had been underlined in red.
How many men are there in a division? 12,000? 15,000? I pushed back my chair and stared at my hands. I didn't see any blood -- or did I?

Later, in reviewing the whole escapade, I was amazed that no one among the world's press and leaders even suspected we were involved. Actually, it seems that no one even cared! In retrospect, I realize that we, the intercept operators, didn't even suspect how significant our roles were.” 461

In those days, the day of instant, digital, global transfer of NSA's intercepts was still in the distant future. Today the National Security Agency under control of the Illuminati is spying on targets ranging from the United Nations to foreign governments to global text messages. The NSA has emerged as an electronic omnivore of staggering capabilities, eavesdropping and hacking its way around the world to strip governments and other targets of their secrets, all the while enforcing the utmost secrecy about its own operations. 462

The FBI and the CIA has always been an instrument of the global elite. The Rockefellers were directly involved in the founding of both organizations. This family also controls Interpol, the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) and many other important and powerful organizations.
Chapter 44

The Mysterious Death of Slobodan Milošević

“It has been a slow and cold blooded premeditated murder of the lowest kind.” Vladimir Krsljanin of the Slobodan Milošević Center

Slobodan Milošević was found dead in his prison cell in Scheveningen on March 11, 2006, at 10 a.m. The autopsy was ordered by the public prosecutor’s office. According to the autopsy report of the Dutch Forensic Institute (NFI) the death was caused by a myocardio infarction. The pathologists established two kinds of heart problems that might explain the infarct.

In addition to the autopsy, the public prosecutor’s office also ordered a toxicological investigation, to determine whether or not Milošević had been poisoned. No traces of toxic substances were found. The public prosecutor’s office said:

“A number of the medications that have been prescribed to Mr. Milošević were found in his body, but not in toxic concentrations.”

Milošević was thought to have died of natural causes. The former president was buried in his hometown of Požarevac a week after his death. And that was that. Politicians, the press and the media cloaked themselves in an emphatic silence.

Immediately after his death things were quite different. During the apotheosis of the Yugoslavia tribunal Milošević was portrayed simply and myopically as a Hitler of the first hour who had managed to escape his rightful punishment. Typical of the way he was being portrayed in the media was the comment from CNN correspondent Christiane Amanpour:

“When he came to power, he consolidated his position and from the outset determined what happened on the Balkans. He committed the most serious crimes against humanity that Europe and indeed the world has seen since the Second World War. This went on for the best part of the Nineties. To his enemies and victims he was known as the Butcher of the Balkans.”

Milošević did not fare much better in The New York Times of March 12, 2006. He was a cold-blooded ruler who, during several wars, had been prepared to lash out with a vengeance from Croatia in 1991 to Kosovo in 1999. “In the end, he disturbed the sensitive balance of power in Yugoslavia which he claimed he was defending, and was surprised by the violent destruction of his country.” He was portrayed as a man for whom “the truth could always be manipulated by power.” According to The New York Times, Milošević had reinvented the Croatian Fascists from the Second World War. This is where the authoritative newspaper conveniently loses sight of history. It was the infamous fascist Ustasa that during the Second World War was responsible for the cold-blooded mass murder of 900,000 Serbians and Jews. No mention is made of the fact that the political legacy of this Fascism played a major role in the ideology of emerging Croatian Nationalism and Separatism when Milošević was in power.

Before his death, Slobodan Milošević had been ill for some time. It is remarkable that his heart condition deteriorated since the beginning of the trial in February 2002. As a result, the proceedings were interrupted regularly. Nevertheless, the tribunal argued that there was no cause for concern, because Milošević’s health was checked regularly by the highly qualified medical staff of the Scheveningen prison. No mention was made of the fact that this “staff” consisted of one GP and one nurse. During the first year of his stay in prison, Milošević’s treatment consisted of one aspirin a day. After that, he received medication that made him drowsy.

From the outset, Milošević’s medical treatment was heavily criticized. One of Milošević’s advisors, the Serbian lawyer Zdenko Tomanović, declared that the health of his client was systematically being undermined in The Hague. The Russian physician, Dr Leo Bokeria of the famous and specialized Bakulev Center, told journalists:

“Over the last three years, we have continually urged that Milošević be transferred to a hospital, so that doctors could make a proper diagnosis, but nothing was ever done. Had Milošević been brought to any specialized hospital, like our medical center, he might have lived for years.”

As early as May 2003, a group of thirteen German doctors expressed their concern about Milošević’s health in writing to the Yugoslavia tribunal. The medical suggestions regarding the proceedings were ignored, and no adequate therapy or medications were provided. Later written objections from the same group of doctors were not taken into consideration.

A group of doctors appointed by the tribunal offered the following diagnosis:

“Highly increased blood pressure, secondary damage to various organs and urgent situations during which the high blood pressure may lead to cerebral hemorrhage, cardiac arrest and death.”

Lead prosecutor Carla del Ponte had the following to say about it in the Neuen Zürcher Zeitung:

“Milošević is doing fine as far as his health is concerned. Many people of sixty and older suffer from high blood pressure. We are certainly not neglecting him, and I hope that is not the impression you have.”

A medical investigation into Milošević’s health in 2005 indicated that an “unknown” medication had been found in his blood, medication that neutralized blood pressure, reducing the effects of his officially prescribed medication. An international group of doctors realized that Milošević’s life was at risk. Consequently, Milošević requested that he be treated by Russian specialists. Doctors from the Bakulev Center traveled to The Hague to examine Milošević. They claimed they would be able to treat Milošević successfully if they were allowed to transport him to the Bakulev Center in Russia. On December 12, 2005, Milošević requested that he be allowed to undergo treatment in the Bakulev Center. The tribunal denied the request on the grounds that it had not been submitted in the correct manner. He was told that any request would only be considered if there were guarantees that he would return to The Hague to finish the trial. On January 18, 2006, the Russian government issued the guarantee that Milošević would be returned to The Hague after treatment. Despite the reassurance on the part of the Russian government that he would be available to stand trial, his request was still denied on February 23, 2006. On the next day, Milošević announced that he would appeal this ruling.

Carla del Ponte defended the tribunal’s decision by pointing out that Milošević had access to any treatment he would need in The Hague. He had access to medical care of the highest quality. And almost immediately after Milošević’s demise, Del Ponte declared in the Italian newspaper Republica:

“It is strange, although of course possible, that he died so suddenly without the doctors realizing that his health had badly deteriorated.”

The claim that Milošević died a natural death by heart attack is considered by many to be a lie. Ivica Dašić, chairman of the Serbian Socialist Party (SPS) stated:

“Milošević did not die in The Hague; he was killed in The Hague.”

The Russian general Leonid Ivashov said:

“It was a political death to order.”

According to Nico Varkevisser of the international Slobodan Milošević Freedom Center, the death of the former Serbian leader the result of a cruel and inhumane treatment as defined in Article 16 of the Anti-Torture Treaty:

“The actions of the tribunal, in particular the decision of Justices Patrick Robinson, O-Gon Kwon and Ian Bonomy, offer sufficient grounds for a charge of murder. We will lodge a complaint with the Dutch Justice Department for cruel and inhumane treatment as defined in the Anti-Torture Treaty and manslaughter or murder.”

Targets wrote:

“From the outset, Milošević has been deliberately denied adequate medical treatment, even when the Russian doctors made their case in November 2005 and the Russian government had issued a guarantee that he would return after treatment. The refusal of the judges, on two occasions, in itself is reason enough to charge them with premeditated murder.”

Borislav Milošević said:

“One might argue that the tribunal has killed my brother.”

Slobodan’s widow, Mira Marković, shared her brother-in-law’s opinion.

The headlines in the Serbian newspapers all agreed:

“The Hague killed Milošević.”

They all blamed the tribunal for his death.

As mentioned earlier, the autopsy of Milošević’s body was carried out by the Dutch Forensics Institute (NFI). The autopsy was performed in the presence of Serbian minister Rasim Ljajić, who said:
“My presence at the autopsy is intended to dispel any speculations concerning the death of Milošević.”

However, his presence had the opposite effect, since it was common knowledge that the two men had been sworn enemies. Milošević’s next of kin were suspicious, and they insisted that an independent autopsy be carried out outside of the Netherlands under their supervision. This request was ignored.

Suicide was not ruled out as a possible cause of death. With the end of the court case in sight, Milošević may have been ready to commit such an act of desperation. Carla del Ponte said:

“It is possible that Milošević committed suicide, as a final act of pride, as a sign of contempt towards the Yugoslavia tribunal.” Del Ponte pointed out “that it was not the first time that one of the accused preferred death to a conviction.”

Six days prior to Milošević’s death, the Serb Milan Babić was found dead in his prison cell. His death was also ruled a suicide, and here too there were no indications that he had indeed taken his own life. All the usual security precautions had been taken: Babić’s cell was checked every thirty minutes. Nevertheless, he was found dead in his cell the next morning. The cause of death remains a mystery on which the authorities refused to comment.

In a news program by Dutch broadcasting company NOS, Heikelina Verrijn Stuart from Amnesty International, who had been a frequent observer of the trial, argued that Milošević’s death had been the direct result of the medication that had been found in his blood.

“We know for certain that this is what caused his death. This was by no means a natural death.”

Verrijn Stuart had also spoken to someone close to Milošević.

“The statements from this person indicate that Milošević had secretly taken the medication that countered the effects of his heart medication.”

One of Carla del Ponte’s advisors hurriedly added that Milošević had caused problems before with regard to medication:

“At that time, he refused to take them.”

Rainer Rupp said:
“This suicide is tremendously inventive. First he shot himself in the back three times, and then he hanged himself. It wasn’t that long ago that similar descriptions were found in the police files of local sheriffs in the south of the United States. This statement reminds me of the position of the “independent” Dutch toxicologist Donald Uges, who made a similar statement regarding the “suicide” of the Yugoslavian former president. According to Uges, Milošević had managed to smuggle illegal medication into his cell in the maximum security facility to damage his own health, in an attempt to secure a one-way trip to Moscow.”

Toxicologist Donald Uges claimed that he examined Milošević’s blood a few months before Milošević’s death, because doctors wondered why the medications they had prescribed to Milošević to treat his high blood pressure were not working. In January 2006, Uges found Rifampicine, a strong medicine for tuberculosis and leprosy, in Milošević’s blood. This was supposed to have countered the effects of the medication Milošević took to reduce his blood pressure. According to Uges, the medication stimulated Milošević’s liver, which neutralized the effects of the other medications. Uges then claimed that Milošević had taken antibiotics that had not been prescribed and that had damaged his heart. The toxicologist said that he suspected Milošević did all this to try and force the court to let him go to Russia for treatment.

“First he did not take his medication. Then he was forced to take them under supervision. But his blood pressure still did not fall,” Uges said to the AP press agency.

“A sophisticated medication is something nobody would have suspected. It gave his supporters a reason to protest that the Dutch doctors had no idea how to treat him.”

He went on to add:

“I do not expect murder. Nor did he die as a result of the Rifampicine. All the medication was meant to accomplish was to lure him to Moscow, where he would be freed. In Moscow, Milošević would stop taking the medication, he would suddenly recover, and the Netherlands would be ridiculed.”

These statements by Donald Uges were ceased by the global press to give the relatives and supporters of Milošević, who were suspicious of what had happened, a bad name. Every effort was made to undermine Milošević’s credibility and the statements by his lawyer concerning the fact that he was poisoned. It was argued that Milošević risked his own life by damaging his health, in an attempt to escape justice. However, Donald Uges had been appointed by the Court of Justice as a toxicologist and not as a detective. Finding traces in a person’s blood is one thing, but knowing exactly how it got there is quite another matter. It is “impossible” for Donald Uges, a world famous professor in the field of biochemical analysis, to declare that Milošević deliberately did not take his prescribed medication. How could he know that? 474

After his arrival in the Netherlands, Slobodan Milošević declared that he had no suicidal tendencies. He emphasized that, if anything ever were to happen to him, it could never have been a suicide attempt. 475

A few weeks before his death he said:

“I did not suffer this long for my cause to harm myself.”

More and more, people speculated about death by poisoning of the former president, and not without reason! In 2002, it became clear that Milošević had been given the wrong medication that, like Rifampicine, increased his blood pressure. On November 23, 2002, NRC Handelsblad reported:

“In the Scheveningen prison, Slobodan Milošević has been given the wrong medication, as a result of which his blood pressure suddenly rose tremendously. That is the reason why the trial of the former Yugoslav president was suspended in early November of 2002. A spokesperson of the tribunal denies that mistakes have been made. He did not want to address the matter further.”

This means that even at that point, Milošević’s high blood pressure was not dealt with adequately, even though it was clear that something was wrong. At the end of August 2004, something truly remarkable happened when Milošević was given his hot dinner. There was great consternation when it turned out that someone else had been given Milošević’s dinner. On the tribunal hearing of September 1, 2004, Milošević mentioned this incident. On that day, Milošević’s defense was being discussed. The tribunal was planning to deny Milošević the right to defend himself on grounds of incompetence. This would effectively silence him. Milošević was told to transfer his defense to Mr. Simon Kay. 476 Milošević protested vehemently to this course of events, and the relevant witnesses threatened to boycott the proceedings. This would have jeopardized the entire court case, and the tribunal was forced to back down. 477
During the court hearings, Milošević referred to his doctors, who had stated that he had been capable of defending himself throughout the three years of the court proceedings.

Milošević said:

“This means that for three years my doctors have considered me in sufficiently good health and physical condition to defend myself. And then something remarkable happens. Suddenly, an “independent” doctor from Belgium, the country where NATO’s headquarters are located, claims that my health makes it impossible for me to defend myself, and my own doctors here unanimously agree with that assessment.”

Milošević then urged a detailed medical examination by doctors from Russia, Serbia and Greece. These doctors were ready to begin such an examination. Milošević then argued that his health precluded him from defending his own case was a ploy designed to deny him the opportunity to tell the truth:

“I see this as a manipulation to deny me the opportunity to tell the truth. That is the essence of this story. The prosecutor, Mr. Geoffrey Nice, reinforces this argument by appointing a lawyer on the grounds that I am allegedly too involved and not independent enough. However, I feel that the opposition has shown itself to be somewhat too dependent in this matter.”

Milošević, with his usual politeness, once again emphasized the fact that he would never relinquish the right to defend himself, and also addressed the curious course of events during his detention:

“I urge you to remember: I will never give up my right to defend myself, nor will I allow this right to be curtailed.”

The following statement by Milošević is a literal translation of the transcript of the tribunal:

“You may reach your own conclusions. However, know that I am taking medications that have been prescribed by your doctors, your staff. I am not certain as to what is happening here, but I can have the entire prison staff testify as to what happened when my dinner was switched with that of the other person on the other side of the corridor. There was quite a commotion to ensure that the right meal ended up in the right place, even though the meals were apparently identical. I made no issue of it. I did not know what was going on. However, I would ask you to be so kind as to take note of the fact that for three years in a row doctors, have declared that I am in good health, and that now, after this incident, the same doctors suddenly declare that I am no longer healthy. I have my suspicions, which may or may not be justified, but there is evidence to support them.”

Slobodan Milošević was then silenced when the judges ordered his microphone turned off. The alarming matter was never investigated!

Milošević increasingly suffered from an intense pressure behind his eyes and ears. When James Bissett, the Canadian ambassador to former Yugoslavia (1990-1992), visited Milošević in Scheveningen, Milošević suddenly turned red and reached for his head. He was troubled by a loud tone inside his head that made it seem as though he were speaking into a bucket. Milošević said that, despite the fact that his blood pressure was under control, he constantly suffered from those constant tones and echoes in his head.

Rather than giving him the necessary treatment, the tribunal used his weak health to force him to give up defending himself. It had been clear for some time that the tribunal made many efforts to undermine his health, in an attempt to force him to hand over his defense to a lawyer. They did this by providing him bad medical treatment and deliberately wearing him out to cause his symptoms to surface. He was forced, on countless occasions, to wait on a wooden bench, allegedly because there was no way to transport him.

The “amici curiae” (friends of the court), who had to ensure that the trial was conducted in a fair manner argued in favor of suspending the proceedings for one year. During that period, Milošević would be able to regain his strength. Lead prosecutor Carla del Ponte was livid when she heard about it. She claimed that Milošević received all the medical attention he required in Scheveningen prison.

On March 10, 2006, preparations were made to present the next witness: Monir Bulatovec, the former president of Montenegro. On this occasion, Milošević once again voiced his concerns to his lawyer Zdenko Tomanović, telling him he was afraid that people were trying to poison him. During his five year stay in Scheveningen, Milošević had never taken any kind of antibiotics, nor had he ever suffered from an infectious disease. However, the medical report of January 12th 2006, which Milošević laid his hands on two months later, showed that a medicine had been found in his blood that is normally used to treat tuberculosis and leprosy. As mentioned earlier, this medication effectively neutralized the effects of the medicine Milošević took to treat his blood pressure and heart problems. If Milošević had taken this medication himself, and it was known that he took it on January 12, why did the authorities fail to intervene? And why was he not informed about the Rifampicin in his blood prior to March 7? Normally Milošević received all reports concerning his health condition immediately!

If Milošević had taken Rifampicin deliberately, why did he speak about it in public? It was Milošević himself who, through his lawyer, spoke about it in public and who informed the Russian government. In his letter to the Russian government, in which he asked for protection, he wrote that the tribunal’s refusal to let him go to Russia to be treated was motivated by fear that the Russian doctors would discover that there was Rifampicin in his blood.

Milošević was not informed of the results of his blood tests until two months after they took place. Verrij Stuart:

“It is a great mystery why a medical report of January 12, 2006 was not presented before March 7 to the lawyers and to Milošević himself.”

It is safe to assume that Milošević was quite shocked when he finally read the results of his blood tests on March 7. Eye witnesses saw a dramatic deterioration:

“When he took his walk, Milošević had to lean against the wall, and he went to the bathroom every few minutes.” 480

Why was nothing done? According to Verrijn Stuart, after March 7th, monitoring of Milošević’s health was not intensified.

What is also remarkable is the late hour at which Milošević’s body was discovered. From a press conference by Carla del Ponte it became clear that the regular checks (every thirty minutes) were not carried out on the night Milošević died! 481 Nor apparently was there any video surveillance! Naturally, at the press conference questions were asked as to why the routine checks were not carried out on that particular night. Del Ponte answered:

“I am not responsible for what happens in the prison.”

At the very least, the Yugoslavian tribunal is guilty of gross negligence, if not downright manslaughter. Its failure to monitor the prisoner, whose body was not discovered until 10 a.m., would result in a complaint against the tribunal, according to Serbian media and the German newspaper Die Welt. There is no doubt that the tribunal and Washington, which pulls the strings behind the scenes, are responsible for Milošević’s death.

Certain things Milošević said on the day before he died indicate that he was extremely worried. As mentioned earlier, he wrote a letter to the Russian Foreign Minister the day before he died, asking for help. He accused his jailers of attempting to drug him into silence. Why did Milošević need to be silenced?

James Gow declared as early as 2004 in a television interview with Channel Four:

“It would be better if Milošević were to die in the dock during the trial. If the proceedings are allowed to reach their conclusion there is a serious possibility that he will be convicted of nothing more than a minor offence.”

Gow was being interviewed as an “expert on war crimes” and advisor of the court in The Hague.

It is true that the case of the Yugoslavian tribunal was in poor shape. Had that not been the case, the media would certainly have reported it. Diana Johnstone, the erstwhile publisher of In These Times and former press secretary of the Greens in the European Parliament, said:

“In the beginning, one could be sure that the media would report the show trial against the Butcher of the Balkans. However, the media soon failed to mention the relevant and solid defense of Milošević during his own trial. Ever since, the trial has virtually taken place behind closed doors. And there are reasons for that.”

Ralph Hartmann, the former German ambassador to Yugoslavia, stated:

“The trial against the former president of Yugoslavia, which was announced as the “mother of all trials” by NATO, has become a secret trial. The reasons for this may be clear to anyone who has read Milošević’s opening statement, which was published in numerous newspapers, in which he puts the irrefutable evidence and sensational facts concerning the major role played by the United States, Germany and other NATO countries in the destruction of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia on the table. People may distort or ignore the truth; they can never conquer it.”

It became increasingly clear that the charges were not worth the paper they were written on. Slobodan Milošević had no reason to take his own life.
“He has been murdered,” according to his Dutch advisor and lawyer N.M.P. Steijnen. It was not he, but the prosecutors of the tribunal who were being driven into a corner. There was a clear motive for murder. Although it is true that Milošević was seriously ill, he was very optimistic about the fact that the trial was developing in his favor. He was convinced he would come out as the winner!

Vukašin Andrić, a doctor who examined Milošević in November 2005, said:

“The tribunal wanted to murder Milošević because his death would make it impossible to get at the real truth. The leaders of the New World Order wanted to get rid of him.”

On March 9, Milorad Vučelić, a member of the Serbian Socialist Party, spoke with Milošević over the phone:

“He was excited and pleased about the way his defense went.”

Vučelić concludes:

“There is no possible doubt that the tribunal in The Hague slowly assassinated Milošević.”

For years Klaus Hartmann had been aware of the danger of a “biological solution” the Yugoslavia tribunal in The Hague would be prepared to resort to in order to silence Milošević. 482 Živadin Jovanović, the former Foreign Minister of Yugoslavia, made the following statement regarding this issue:

“The Yugoslavia tribunal is responsible for the death of President Slobodan Milošević.”

Needless to say, Milošević’s death was very convenient for the prosecutors. In a period of five years, they had been unable to prove that Milošević was responsible for a genocide carried out by the Serbian army. The prosecution’s case was in bad shape. On February 24, 2006, De Volkskrant wrote:

“No conclusive evidence against Slobodan Milošević.”

On February 28, 2004, NRC Handelsblad reported:

“The case against Milošević is falling apart.”

Time and again, witnesses for the prosecution were driven into a corner by Milošević’s questions. In addition, their testimonies were not of the kind Carla del Ponte wanted to hear. The former chief of the Serbian State Security, Radomir Rade Marković, when cross-examined by Milošević, stated that he had been promised a reduced sentence and a new identity in exchange for an incriminating testimony against Milošević. He was told there would be “consequences” if he failed to do so (tribunal proceedings, July 24-27, 2002).

During the proceedings of February 19-21, 2003, as part of his testimony, Dragan Vasiljković quoted a document he received from the prosecutors, containing various promises in exchange for his incriminating testimony against Milošević (tribunal proceedings, February 19-21, 2003).

Also, suddenly all kinds of, very dubious, evidence emerged. Testimonies that no impartial judge would ever have accepted were accepted as evidence. One witness, for example, declared that he had been shot with a machine gun, and to support his testimony he held up a shirt full of bullet holes and blood. Milošević then asked him about his wounds and requested to see the scars. The man responded that he had not been injured, and that Allah had spared him to allow him to testify against Milošević. Rather than striking the man’s testimony from the court’s logs, the court accepted it as proof against Milošević!

Milošević produced one witness after another, who together tore apart the myth of a conspiracy to create a Great Serbia. Reports in the media were scarce when it came to Milošević’s witnesses, and they failed to report on the repeated decisions by the court to strike testimony from the records.

The Boomerang Effect

On August 25, 2005, Geoffrey Nice was forced to admit that Milošević was no longer being accused of having tried to create a Great Serbia by force. As such, this effectively destroyed the foundation of the charges against him. After all, these charges had been based on, and connected by, the central accusation that Milošević, as the leader of a criminal organization, had done everything he had done in order to create a Great Serbia. The tribunal was painfully aware that they had no case against him. The chances of reaching a verdict that would satisfy public opinion become increasingly slender.

The Dutch lawyer N.M.P. Steijnen stated:
“However, the chaos soon became even bigger. The accusations now turned on his Western accusers like a boomerang. What the tribunal feared were the revelations from Milošević and the people he called to the witness stand concerning the role of the Western world in dismantling the Yugoslav Federation, the evidence that would be presented by him with regard to the systematic lies propagated by the West concerning the alleged attempts to create a Great Serbia, and the crimes committed by NATO in its aggressive war against Yugoslavia and Serbia, which he would bring to light. For instance, Milošević demonstrated, based on the testimony from predominantly Western witnesses, that there had been no humanitarian emergency in Kosovo on the eve of NATO’s war on Yugoslavia in 1999. It was not Milošević’s case that was in poor shape, but the tribunal itself.”

In a press release Steijnen wrote: “For years, the prosecutors had brought in hundreds of witnesses, in an endless row of 466 sessions, producing more than 5000 documents in their case against him, and they still failed to present a well-founded case. The lack of written evidence, the deals between the prosecution and defendants who were willing to testify against Milošević, none of these benefited the trial. “Tribunal worshippers” disguised as reporters have managed to cover up the fact that Milošević, based on witness testimony, has caused havoc among what was left of the charges.”

Things only got worse for the tribunal when it was Milošević’s turn to defend himself. He called to the stand important witnesses that presented Carla del Ponte with serious problems, especially in light of the fact that most of her witnesses presented vague testimony. It was with the gravest concerns that the tribunal awaited this moment.

Things became truly exciting when Slobodan Milošević announced at the end of February 2006 that he intended to call Bill Clinton to the stand. Apparently he wanted to show that the United States had waged an illegal war against Yugoslavia and that civilian targets had been attacked on purpose. Crimes against humanity! This plan was unacceptable not only to NATO but also because it threatened to destroy the Yugoslavia tribunal!

James Bisset, the Canadian ambassador to former Yugoslavia (1990-1992) said:

“I was always skeptical about the tribunal, because I am convinced that it is an instrument that is designed to cover up the fatal blunders of the United States and its allies in the tragedy in the Balkans. The tribunal’s purpose is to hold Milošević and the Serbian people responsible for the all-out violence that hit this area in the 1990s.”

The Russian general Leonid Ivashov stated:

“Slobodan Milošević was the only man who was in a position to testify about the role of the United States in the bloody disintegration of Yugoslavia in the Nineties, in full and in great detail. And that is precisely what he fought for during his trial for war crimes and genocide.”

According to Ivashov, a failure to secure a conviction in the case against Milošević would not only have far-reaching consequences for the Yugoslavian tribunal, but also for the condemnation of the aggression of NATO and its Allies. Ivashov is still convinced that this is the reason Milošević was murdered.

Milošević was found dead in his prison cell just when his defense was gathering steam and he had begun building a solid case. He was too busy to contemplate taking his own life. He was very concerned about his health. But above all, he was motivated by a desire to tell what really happened in the Balkans. He had no reason whatsoever to kill himself, but the tribunal, which took its orders from the United States and its allies, had a clear motive to kill him. The tribunal was about to backfire in a serious way; it threatened to damage NATO, the very organization that had organized and funded the tribunal. Was Milošević silenced before he could expose the crimes of the United States and its NATO allies?

Closer inspection of the main causes of the crisis in the Balkans shows that the largest part of the responsibility for the destruction of Yugoslavia lies with the United States, Germany and other NATO allies. Every decision made by these allies was politically motivated and resulted in an escalation of the war and an increase in the number of conflicts among the population of Yugoslavia.

A few years after the disintegration of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) demanded that wages be frozen. Because prices continued to increase, however, this resulted in a dramatic reduction in average income. Under the supervision of the World Bank, more than half of the Yugoslav banks were ruined in 1989 and 1990. According to official statistics, more than 1100 companies went bankrupt in that period, resulting in 625,000 workers losing their jobs. However, the World Bank was not yet satisfied. In September 1990, a record number of 2435 companies went bankrupt, and 1.3 million people became unemployed. Within two years, two-thirds of the entire nation’s jobs had been sacrificed. Then, without any warning, all aid, credits and loans from the IMF and the World Bank were suspended. The fatal combination of measures that was forced on Yugoslavia had its origin in twenty-three articles that had been included in the United States law 1191 on November 5, in Foreign Operation Law 101/513. This contains regulations and stipulations regarding the economic destruction of enemy governments. As a result of this law, the federal government of Yugoslavia was no longer able to pay the interest on its foreign debts. Also, the nation’s industrial sector no longer had access to the raw material it needed. According to The New York Times of November 18, 1990, at that same moment a secret CIA document came into the open. That document predicted that Yugoslavia would collapse within eighteen months. In 1991, the European Council of Ministers followed the path laid out by the United States by intervening in the internal affairs of Yugoslavia through its own political demands and an economic intervention. As a result of these economic sanctions, the Yugoslav economy quickly fell apart.

During the Kosovo war, Lord Gilbert, the British Defense minister, in a remarkable statement admitted that NATO deliberately pushed for a war with Yugoslavia. 484 To this it needs to be added that, years earlier, after the Maastricht summit, it became clear in what way the French President Mitterrand and John Major, the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, had agreed to the dissolution of Yugoslavia. 485

Slobodan Milošević was convinced of the need for a transition towards a market economy and a multi-party Democracy. 486 The transformation of Serbia towards a Democratic civilian state took place under his leadership. However, throughout that process he adhered to Yugoslavia’s principle values: independence, freedom and social justice. And he turned his back on international capital when he used IMF loans to pay teachers and military personnel wages that had long been overdue.

Milošević gave several speeches in which he described a group of dubious internationals that were deliberately creating chaos in the Balkans in order to take the next step en route to the New World Order. In earlier times, Milošević had been the darling of the Rockefellers and their cronies when he carried out the economic reforms and privatizations of state companies that the IMF had imposed. As soon as he stopped listening to them, the leaders of the New World Order turned their backs on him. The Illuminati give orders and demand obedience, and anyone who is brave enough to resist them is in for a merciless treatment. In this sense, the actions against Yugoslavia were, in every way, representative of the nature of the mighty men who hide in the shadows. The cruel war against Yugoslavia is a clear warning to all countries in the world that want to remain independent! Slobodan Milošević can be considered the first political prisoner in the so-called “globalization” of capitalist ambitions. As a symbol of the resistance against the New World Order, he had to be condemned in a mock trial designed to approve NATO’s war crimes, and he had to serve as an example to the “unwilling” dissidents who refuse to serve the New World Order.

Enforcing the free market and conquering important oil routes were not the only reasons NATO went to war against Yugoslavia. NATO also wanted to show the world how important a global army was for world peace, and how effective such an army can be against a so-called aggressor. NATO and the military-industrial complex thus swindled their way to a new “legitimization”, and they used the conflict to test their logistics, their new communication systems and their reconnaissance technology in a “live” conflict. This aggressive military extension to foreign policy should serve as a warning to all potential areas of conflict. The Caucasus and Central Asia will be NATO’s future areas of operation. 487 Long time ago, under the name GUUAM (Georgia, Ukraine, Uzbekistan, Azerbeizhan and Moldavia), a joint “Eurasian battalion” has been created, designed to be deployed in so-called “peace missions” in the region. The planned buffer zone just “happens” to be situated in an area through which Russian pipelines transport oil and gas to the West. NATO is used to fight uncooperative governments. Let the reader be warned: new conflicts and wars are already being prepared.

“You may deceive all the people part of the time, and part of the people all the time, but not all the people all the time.” - Abraham Lincoln

On September 11, 2001, the United States had to endure the most severe attacks in its history. Shortly before working hours started in the World Trade Center (WTC) buildings two so-called terrorist-hijacked passenger airplanes intentionally crashed into the Twin Towers. Because the attacks took place just before regular working hours, only 3000 of the 50,000 people that used to work in the WTC were killed. CNN camera crews were allegedly there to film a fire drill. When they heard a plane, they coincidently pointed their cameras to the sky, not on the plane, but exactly on the place where the planes would crash several seconds later. CNN under direction of Chief Walter Isaacson arrived at the site so quickly that they could live-broadcast the second crash.

Later, CNN showed a footage shot by a so-called amateur just happened to shoot the first crash. The man used his camera after he heard the humming of a plain engine. Strangely he did not point his camera on the plane. Like the CNN crew, he aimed his camera on the Northern Tower of the WTC, perfectly catching the crash on film. What amateur would possibly react to the sound of a plane engine? An amateur with the gift of foresight, allowing him to zoom in on the exact location of the crash? What a coincidence! Or was it? The American professor specializing in media, Joan Deppa said:

“The staged it like a television-show ment for all of us to see.”

With a perfect sense of timing, the perpetrators made sure that their ultimate horror-scripted deed would be broadcast all over the world. There were exactly eighteen minutes between the first and the second attack. Then the second-hijacked plane crashed into the Southern Tower of the WTC, turning the building into a blazing inferno. After the first attack on the WTC in 1993, all power, telephone and other lines were safely secured and buried deep beneath the building. Yet the attack caused a complete power outage and subsequent failure of telephone, fax, e-mail and comparable lines of communication throughout the entire area around the WTC!

The two 110-story towers collapsed within only two hours of attack and were completely destroyed in almost identical ways. About the same time the Southern Tower collapsed, the nearby WTC-6 collapsed after an explosion.
After the collapse of both Towers, panic began to stir amongst the population and all bridges and tunnels to Manhattan were closed off. Exactly six full hours after the attack, at 16:30, without any apparent reason, a fire broke out in WTC-
7. Although this Tower was hardly damaged by the attacks, one hour later it suddenly collapsed as well. The next day the same thing happened with WTC-3.
The concrete construction of both Towers had completely turned to dust.

The official statement regarding the cause of the collapse of the Twin Towers was that the temperature of the airplanes’ fuel had risen to over 1000 degrees Celsius, allegedly causing a softening of the steel in the concrete. However, burnt hydrocarbons like kerosene can reach, under optimal conditions that a steel asbestos construction like the WTC does not offer, a maximum temperature of 800 degrees Celsius. Steel does not melt when it is exposed to a temperature below 1300 degrees Celsius. An architect of the WTC declared in a TV interview in 1998 that the building was constructed in such a way that the building, in case of fire, would be able to resist a temperature of 2000 degrees Celsius. Lee Robertson was responsible for the Tower statistics. He said:

“The buildings were constructed in a way that they could even resist the impact of a jumbo jet, a plane with more fuel on board as the two “death planes” combined.”

In an interview with the Jerusalem Post , a couple of minutes after the collapse of the first WTC Tower, Aaron Swirski, one of the WTC’s architects, stated that the Towers were designed to resist a plane crash. He said he was stunned to see the Towers collapse, because the Towers were constructed in a tubular construction that was specially designed to keep the entire building standing straight after a big blow to its structure.

The explosion in 1993 that heavily damaged the foundations of the WTC had, thanks to this building concept, not caused the buildings to collapse. Targets said on January 1, 2002, that from interviews with survivors of the WTC attacks it seemed that the New York Transit Authority had assured people leaving the WTC Tower first hit that everything was safe. A woman that fled from the 105th story said that she saw many of these people returning to their offices after hearing this reassuring news. In Time Magazine a witness said that they should have known that something was about to happen because there had already been daily evacuation exercises for a week. Some press photos from after the crash show office employees descending the stairs while firemen hurried their way up. The firemen knew that there was no risk involved for them. That is why they entered the building without fear. It is proven fact that the first group of firemen led by Orio Palmer and Ronald Bucca made it to the 78th floor, the place where the plane entered the building. They did not report anything about a fire of 1300 degrees Celsius melting the steel construction neither did they detect a possible risk of collapse. This is supported by the fact that they called for reinforcements. Several minutes later the Tower collapsed!

The Towers broke far below the place of impact. The official statement, which is somewhat of a paradox, was that kerosene had dripped to several floors below before combusting. Experts believe that both Towers did not collapse because of the impact of the planes, but because of explosives detonated a while later. Although several witnesses and journalists heard explosions in the lower floors of the building right before the collapse, the media in the United States did not report anything about this. Moreover, multiple survivors that escaped from the Towers separately reported in several European television interviews about hearing explosions. Steve Evans said to the BBC:

“There was an explosion. At first I did not think it was an explosion, but it shook the entire foundation of the building! And then, when we got outside, a second explosion took place, followed by some more. We are completely astonished by the sheer size of this disaster, caused by the explosion.”

A businessman, who came storming out of the WTC looking like a dust cloud told Danish television station DR-TV1 during a live broadcast:

“We were completely thrown off our feet by a huge explosion on the eight floor.”

The German Channel SAT1 also transmitted live coverage of interviews with people that had just escaped the Towers. One of them was Tom Canaban, who was interrupted and taken somewhere else by two FBI agents. A European opinion magazine, Facts, is one of a few magazines that published the hypothesis about the explosions on one of the lower floors. Several reporters said that they had observed the explosions just minutes before the WTC collapsed. Several firemen also heard the explosion. Fireman Louie Cacchiolo told Time Magazine on September 24:

“I brought my firemen to the elevator on the twenty-fourth floor, so that we could evacuate the people from there. During our last attempt a bomb exploded.”

A German woman working in a nearby building later told CNN that after she had climbed onto the roof to see what was happening, she clearly heard several explosions seconds before the Southern Tower collapsed. A journalist declared that shortly before the collapse of the Towers, she saw a fireball. The newspaper Free Press published a story about a man that had seen a series of flashes coming from between the tenth and fifteenth floors followed by some banging sounds. Not long after that the building collapsed. The eyewitness spoke of six flashes the Twin Towers were supported by six main construction pillars.

It is of importance that, when we closely compare the collapse of both Towers, we point out that this happened very similar, to how buildings are professionally destroyed by construction companies. The Towers did not collapse in a straight way. The buildings broke, as already stated, quite far below the actual point of impact. The kerosene of the crashed planes could have never been the cause of the very calculated straight collapse of the building. This was caused by explosions planned in advance. According to the experts a collapse as a result of a weakened structure should have caused the building to crumble in an asymmetrical way. Building destruction experts think that there is nothing more difficult than “falling” a building, because it has the tendency to fall sideways, like a tree. To prevent this from happening, explosives are placed in several strategic key points. With the exact calculated explosive power the building can implode, which means that the building collapses in a very controlled way, without risking damage to the surrounding buildings. Both Towers imploded in such a way. Explosives experts feel it is absolutely impossible that both skyscrapers collapsed in such a “controlled” way by such random acts of jets crashing into them.

Several experts have stated that such implosions could not have happened without explosives, especially since all the concrete turned to fine dust. Van Romero, director of the testing center of the “Research Center for Energetic-Material” affiliated with the “New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology” stated:

“Explosives were detonated inside the Twin Towers.” 501

Romero is a respected physicist and an expert in the field of explosive charges. According to Romero, the collapse of both Towers was far too methodical to have been coincidentally caused by plane crashes. He assures:

“There must have been explosives inside these buildings. Only an explosion from the inside could destroy a building in such a way.” 502

Both Towers of the WTC have a concrete mass of 425,000 cubic meters and were completely pulverized. All that was left was a pile of rubble with the rest of the building hanging over half of New York for several days as a thick cloud of dust. The pulverization of concrete demands an extremely high-powered explosion. Normally, according to experts, it takes at least 140 tons of explosives to come close to this effect.

Facts

The speed with which the buildings collapsed was the same speed with which an object would free-fall off the roof of buildings; it took only ten seconds. If we would believe the official statement, that the building fell down floor after floor, then a deceleration should have occurred, and the building should have fallen at a much slower rate. The floors had to have been already pulverized, before being hit by falling parts. The free fall of both Towers indicates the use of explosives.

When the Northern Tower collapsed, rubble and debris were blasted away in an almost horizontal way. Clouds of dust appeared very uniformly from the windows, one floor below the part that collapsed. This also indicates the use of explosives. Concrete does not become pulverized after the collapse of structures. This can only be achieved with the use of explosives. The concrete was already pulverized before it hit the ground.

Five days after the attacks, a NASA satellite took heat-sensor images of “Ground Zero”. These recordings showed a temperature of 727 degrees Celsius and 747 degrees Celsius under the Southern Tower and under the WTC-7. 503 These temperatures can only have been caused by C4 explosives. The heat could not escape, because the entire building was on top of it. For months there was smoke coming out of the rubble. Peter Taley, director of a company that removed the rubble from Ground Zero and Mark Lasan, director of Controlled Demolition, have declared that molten steel was found in the basements of the WTC. This is only possible with high temperatures caused by C4 explosives. Some experts are mostly convinced that micro nukes were used in each of the Twin Towers also, in addition to strategically placed Termite/HE cutters. The elevated tritium levels are as impossible to ignore as aluminum, molybdenum, boron, barium, vanadium, sulphur, etcetera.

If indeed explosives, and not the planes, caused the collapse of the Towers, then this should be detectable in the rubble at Ground Zero. However, such an inspection did not take place. In the United States the Energetic Materials Research and Testing Center is always called upon when a collapse or a disaster has happened. A surprised director, Dan Lopez, said that his firm was not asked to perform such an inspection at the site of the disaster in New York.

Important remnants of steel were removed and transported as soon as possible. Those that gave the orders were already working before any investigating commission could start! Recordings of the terrain were confiscated and some photographers were even arrested. In April 2002 almost all of the evidence, especially that of the disposal of the WTC remnants, were destroyed. With this method the United States government acted against legal regulations. William A. Manning, chief editor of Fire Magazine, the American technical journal for firemen, called this publicly “a destruction of important burden of proof.”

The Scientific Committee of the House of Deputies made public that the research was hindered because some evidentially crucial parts of the steel construction were missing even before the first investigators could set foot on Ground Zero. As the first “scrap disposal company”, Controlled Demolition Inc. arrived at the rubble of the WTC. This company from Baltimore is specialized in the destruction of large structures. It is the same firm that also disposed of the remains of the Murrah building in Oklahoma City. They prevented independent experts from forming hard conclusions that would not correspond with the official statements about the attacks, with the goal being to prevent independent experts from proving that the now-executed Timothy McVeigh had blown up the building and that inside the building there must have been multiple bombs. Who did this?
That was also a point of contention for the WTC disaster. Recently, the concerned company Controlled Demolition appeared in the news for an alleged part in a party-sponsored scandal. According to the American Free Press the New York police criticized Controlled Demolition Inc. for their lack of transparency in certain actions. Several parts of the WTC’s steel construction were not transported to the designated scrap dumps where experts could investigate them. They were instead transported to China to be remelted in Shanghai.

Evidence suggests that there indeed were explosives, so immediately the question arises: why did this happen, and who was responsible? It is well-known that terrorists sometimes use distractions (the planes in this case) to disguise a far more lethal blow somewhere else (the bombs). In this case the terrorists wanted to assure themselves that the buildings would collapse.

But why the perfect implosion? If the goal had been to reach the largest amount of victims possible, wouldn’t it have been more logical to let the buildings fall sideways, hitting other buildings in the process?

World Trade Center 7

The WTC-7 (also known as the Salomon Brothers Building) stood at a distance of 100 meters from the Northern Tower. Not so long before 9/11 the twenty-third floor was renovated and turned into a bombproof command center (OEM bunker). Also this structure had its own water and air supply and could resist a wind force of 160 miles per hour. WTC-7 was used by the CIA, the Department of Defense and the Secret Service.

WTC-7 collapsed at 5:20 p.m., about six and a half hours after the collapse of the second Tower. The National Institute for Standards and Technology (NITS) claimed that the failure of a single column near ground level led first to a vertical progression of failures, causing the collapse of the East Penthouse, followed by a horizontal progression of failures leading to the collapse of all of the building’s twenty-seven core columns, ending in a total collapse. In other words, NITS asserts that WTC-7 collapsed like a house of cards.\(^5^{04}\)

According to the official report of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), that was included in the 9/11 research report, there is no apparent reason for the events concerning WTC-7:
“The reason for the collapse of the building remains a mystery.” FEMA’s report blamed the collapse of WTC-7 primarily on fires, though it was inconclusive.

If you believe the official story that WTC-7 collapsed from fires, it would be the first case in history in which fires induced the total collapse of a steel frame building. Shouldn’t that have been newsworthy, given its implications for building safety and rescue and firefighting operations? Incredibly, it is difficult to find any mention of WTC-7 in newspapers, magazines or broadcast media reports about the September eleventh attack.

As mentioned earlier, around 5:20 p.m., WTC-7 collapsed unexpectedly. Unexpected that is for everyone, except for a soldier with a foreign accent who warned a TV crew near WTC-7:

“The building is going to collapse, no recording,” putting his hand over the camera lens.

Not more than twenty-five minutes before the collapse, a BBC live broadcast reported it. During a live connection with New York, reporter Jane Standley reported again that the WTC-7 had collapsed. While a fifteen-minute analysis was taking place, in the background behind her the building is clearly visible and standing untouched. Five minutes before the actual collapse, the broadcast was disconnected. Someone must have found out that WTC-7 was still there, and wanted to prevent the viewer from watching the actual collapse happen live. Apparently the script of the events was already written. However, some news stations were too eager to report it. They staged it like a television-show. Five years later, in reaction to the events, the BBC World Customer Relations stated:

“The notion that the BBC has been part of any conspiracy is patently ludicrous. We reported the situation as accurately as we could, based on the best information available. We cannot be categorical about the exact timing of events that day. This is the first time it has been brought to our attention, and it was more than five years ago. If in the chaos and confusion of that day our correspondent reported that the building had collapsed before it had done so, it would have been a genuine error.”

The evacuation of the area surrounding WTC-7 started sometime around 4:00 p.m. and was completed only a few minutes before the 5:20 collapse. The warnings of the collapse, which are recalled in dozens of accounts by emergency responders, show a striking consistency of conviction that the collapse would occur.

Nowadays it is no longer a question why the building collapsed. Larry Silverstein, the owner of WTC-7 committed the following in the PBS documentary America Rebuilds:

“I remember getting a call from the fire department commander, telling me that they were not sure they were going to be able to contain the fire. And I said, we’ve had such terrible loss of life; maybe the smartest thing to do is pull it. And they made that decision to pull, and we watched the building collapse.”

There can be little doubt as to what context in which the word “pull” was used by Silverstein. The word “pull” is industry jargon for taking a building down with explosives.

Buildings do fall vertically, like WTC-7, only when destroyed by controlled demolition. The controlled demolition of large structures is a well developed art and science. Removing a tall building from an urban landscape without damaging adjacent structures, a considerable engineering feat, is a task that only a handful of controlled demolition companies specialize in. Danny Jowenko, one of the world’s foremost demolition experts made no bones about what he saw when shown a video of WTC-7 coming down;

“It was the finest controlled demo, ever performed. It was exquisite. The first-time termite cutting charges were used!”

To prepare a building for a controlled demolition, several weeks, sometimes even months, of preparation are needed. This type of preparation is impossible in eight and a half hours, thus proving that the explosives had been there long before the attacks took place. Moreover the New York Fire Department has no staff specialized in the demolition of buildings by explosives. This was clearly the work of professionals. We can assume that the WTC-7 was intentionally blown up and that the explosives were placed quite some time before September 11. That’s why we can assume too, that both WTC Towers were not destroyed by so-called “terrorist attacks”.

Different explosives and ignition devices were used in the demolition of the Twin Towers. Video recordings clearly show that the explosives were detonated separately, most likely with a remote control. This was necessary because a possible sideward collapse, destroying the Wall Street stock market for example, had to be prevented. On the video footage it is clearly visible that the collapse of the Southern Tower is controlled and managed.

WTC-7 was in a straight line with both Flight 011 and Flight 175 that flew in the Northern and Southern Towers. More and more people are convinced that the command center on the twenty-third floor was used to guide both planes during the operation. From here, the Twin Towers were probably blown up with a remote control. The building was reinforced and renovated earlier to protect the building against debris coming from the collapsing buildings. By destroying WTC-7 all possible evidence was lost in one blow.

The Pentagon

Officially it is said that a half-hour after the terror attacks on the Twin Towers, a third Boeing 757 (Flight 77) crashed into the Pentagon. Thousands of people should have noticed the plane. Sadly, no one sighted this Boeing, nor is there a recording of the plane. Flight 77 had strangely disappeared off all civil and military radar screens quite soon after takeoff, when an hour later it suddenly appeared above Washington. How a plane can stay undetected for an hour in American air space remains a mystery and should make one wonder.

It’s reported that the plane showed on the radar that the pilot, upon arrival in Washington, flew around the Pentagon without even being bothered. Then, the pilot flew the plane downwards in a very controlled, deep spiral movement, and dropped the plane in two minutes from 7000 feet before crashing it into the Pentagon meters above ground level. What this would have meant was that this ace pilot, completely neglecting the existence of the law of inertia, stopped the plane in mid-air, then dropped straight down like a brick, before regaining full control and crashing it at high speed straight into the lower two floors of the Pentagon. How did this pilot manage to shut down the computer motherboard that, according the manufacturer, cannot be tampered with? The motherboard was designed to prevent free fall. Why did the pilot first fly around the Pentagon? Why didn’t he just crash the plane into the Pentagon? Why did he choose exactly the part of the building that was undergoing renovations?

The fourteen-meter high street lanterns near the Pentagon were not damaged by the diving plane. Nor was any damage done to the perfectly manicured lawn that was directly adjacent to the building. It seems that unnecessary damage to the building had to be prevented. From recordings taken immediately after the attack, it shows that the façade of the building stood still before a part of it collapsed just a while later. A five-meter-diameter hole and a reasonably small fire were the only indicators of the disaster. The most recent data shows that 123 people lost their lives in the Pentagon that day, all necessary casualties for the cause.

The Pentagon is not a high building. Experts are confused by how the bold pilot was able to pull off the stunt of flying a three-story-high plane into only the lower two floors of the Pentagon. Upon comparing the size of the Boeing to that of the size of the place of impact, one sees that the place of impact is three times smaller than the plane’s span! The surprisingly small hole in the building’s façade should consequently have caused a large part of the plane to remain outside of the building. However, after the crash there was no trace whatsoever of the plane. There was not even debris present from damage to a building that should have had parts of the plane, including its wings, lying on the lawn in front of it. From this plane, that flew unnoticed over what is probably the most guarded piece of space on American soil, no black box recordings or radar detection, nor passenger lists or signs of possible baggage or corpses were found.

The Pentagon publicized five pictures of video recordings. The images show a sort of white-colored explosive fire on the ground level and on the first floor. Later, the ceilings on one side of the higher-situated levels collapsed with the inner structure remaining intact. A passenger plane at full speed crashing into a building should have caused an entirely different effect. Why does the U.S. government publicize just five pictures of a video recording, and not pictures of an actual plane? And regarding the video recording, why wasn’t the entire tape publicized? The five pictures that were made public do not show a plane. However there is a bit of smoke in the back of the picture that could indicate the presence of a flying object. It is hard to see the flying object because of a small pole present in the front of the picture. The Pentagon stated that the smoke was coming from a Boeing 757. This is impossible, because the white signs of condensation of water behind a plane are only visible when at great height or with extreme low temperatures (about minus 40-degrees Celsius). White signs are not visible at low altitude. The fuel gases of plane engines cause an increase in the amount of water vapor and particles of soot “behind” the plane. The extreme cold at great heights causes the air to contain only small bits of soot particles. The extra vapor from the plane’s engines cause the formation of ice crystal clouds that an observer on the ground would interpret as white cloud stripes. These “stripes” usually form behind the plane, because the heat of the fuel gases prevents the shaping of clouds close to the engines.

The flying object that hit the Pentagon was probably a rocket. As opposed to an airplane, a low flying rocket will leave small white smoke clouds when flying in warm air closer to ground level as opposed to the minus 40-degree Celsius weather that Boeings require. It is important to point out that directly after the impact, it was the Pentagon staff and not the police or the fire department that collected evidence off the lawn. Whatever they collected must have had details about the actual events of what happened. Moreover, the fire inside the Pentagon was extinguished with water, which is peculiar because burning kerosene is never extinguished with water! There was simply no plane!

Everybody that believes the official statement regarding the Pentagon attack should ask himself how the pilot was able to find Washington and the Pentagon without assistance from air traffic control. Additionally, they should ask themselves how Flight 77 was able to crash into the Pentagon, it being the most defended building in the world. It is impossible that a plane could fly unauthorized and, most importantly, unnoticed into it. This plane, based on the power of America and its intelligence agencies, could have been intercepted long before. An interesting fact is that the entire area surrounding the Pentagon is covered with programmed anti-air invasion rockets. All planes without a cleared military frequency entering this particular air space are shot down immediately.

Knowing this, we should then ask if, though highly unlikely, Flight 77 did fly undetected and unaided to the Pentagon, who shut down its air-defense system? The answer to this is quite simple: It was those that needed to justify and finance the “War on Terror”. It was select members of the American leadership. They cooperated, with the world elite, in the attacks on 9/11.

What did happen to Flight 77 is unknown. There is no direct evidence, but rumor has it that it ended up at a military base in Ohio. Both its passengers and crew were led to an area where bombs ended their lives in a gruesome way. The bodies were transported to a morgue in Dover, Delaware, where, the bodies of the victims of the Pentagon attack were delivered simultaneously. The people in Dover would never notice that the victims did not arrive from the same location. Whatever happened, the additional bodies were definitely not from the Pentagon. After doing an autopsy on the bodies of the victims of the alleged attack on the Pentagon, American pathologist Thomas R. Olmsted stated:
President Bush Saw the First Crash before Nine O’clock

On 9/11, George W. Bush had an appointment with schoolchildren from the Emma E. Booker primary school in Florida. When the first plane crashed into the first Tower at 8:45, he knew about it while in his limo en route to the school. During a press conference in California, Bush stated that he “had seen on television the first plane attacking the Tower.” Despite this disastrous event, he still went to his appointment and chose not to cancel in response to the country’s national disaster. On the official website of the White House were several interviews with President Bush asking him what he experienced the moment he heard about the attacks. On December 4, he said:

“I was still waiting to enter the classroom when I saw a plane hitting the Tower [probably the television was on]. Because I am a pilot myself, I noticed that it was an awful pilot. I thought it was a terrible accident.”

So, all Bush thought was that the crash was accidental, caused by an awful pilot. As a matter of fact, the sky above New York is a no-fly zone, making it impossible for a passenger flight to crash into the Towers. Bush’s statement is quite weak.

In Florida, Bush quietly continued his visit. He was welcomed and escorted to the classroom where he listened to the stories with children. How long did all of this take? It must have been ten to fifteen minutes. This means that what Bush saw on the television in his limo could not have been much longer than three to eight minutes after the first attack. But there was no footage of the attacks shown by any TV station during that period of time. What did Bush see? Was he watching an internal live broadcast in his presidential limousine?

In the Sarasota Herald Tribune of September 12, 2001, it was written that Bush had hardly sat down in the classroom, filled with second graders listening to the story about a goat, when his secretary, Andrew Card, whispered the news about the second plane flying into the WTC in his ear. He didn’t move a muscle, and kept on listening to the children. Would you, if you were the president of a country, be able to not move a muscle, and continue listening to schoolchildren when you had just heard such terribly shocking news? Why did Bush not act surprised or shocked when he allegedly heard about the attacks for the first time, and in front of a recording camera? An experienced chief of police that had examined the footage of this event said that in his opinion “he must have already known what had happened!” While Bush was sitting in that classroom, Americans were being butchered! It is remarkable that it took about half an hour before Bush informed the press about the tragedy.

As mentioned earlier, this book will try to provide information and critically encourage you to rethink the events of 9/11. A study of his reaction and lack of action shows that Bush was in no hurry to get back to Washington. For the larger part of the day, the president was nowhere to be seen on 9/11. In an underground bunker on a naval base in Louisiana, a short message from him was recorded. Several hours later, Bush was flown to the headquarters of the Strategic Air Command in Nebraska. There he had a meeting with several “big shots” from the American financial and economic world, including several representatives of a company that held office in the higher floors of the Southern Tower of the WTC. These big shots landed, just before the 9/11 attacks in New York, at the Offutt Airforce Base in Omaha, Nebraska, to take part in a charity event. Among them was billionaire Warren Buffet, one of the largest stock traders in the world! As mentioned, the chief commander of the U.S. army, President Bush, had also secretly been present at this base. Now the question arises: Why would several important people from the economic and financial world (some of whom hold office in the WTC) take part in a charity event held at a highly secured military base on the morning of the worst infringement on American security? It is unacceptable that America and the world seem complacent with the answer: “purely coincidental”.

Additionally, it has to be said that shortly before the attacks, an unexplainable wave of speculative stock trading took place on the American Stock Exchange. An unidentified group of people wagered money on an “imminent crisis” before the attacks. It is important to know that on the stock exchange there was fierce speculation on the devaluation of the airline companies United and American Airlines, interestingly the companies involved in the events of 9/11. What never made it to the press was that friends close to George Bush sold all their shares in these companies. Shortly before the attacks, the entire stock capitals of airline, tourist, insurance and financial enterprises that held offices in the WTC were sold. Also, several five-year bonds, with each bond valued at five billion dollars, were bought. The Wall Street Journal of October 2, 2002, reports:

“Bonds with a five-year term are the best way of investing in case of a worldwide crisis, especially when this crisis concerns the U.S. The securities’ attractiveness is based upon their certainty and the government’s guarantee, and is especially preferred when investors want to avoid more risky investments like shares. The value of the bonds has skyrocketed since 9/11.”

Who were these unidentified individuals that waged large sums of money on an approaching crisis? A well-informed banker assured that these were members of the Federal Reserve Bank:

“Directly or indirectly, the Federal Reserve Bank immediately bought stocks.”

As previously mentioned the Federal Reserve Bank, in which the Warburgs, Rockefellers and Rothschilds have interests, has never been under the control of the U.S. government. The bank is actually a privately owned enterprise that even disposes of the U.S. gold reserve.

The Rockefellers owned the WTC from its construction. Is it purely a coincidence that on July 23, 2001, seven weeks before the attacks, it was sold? Bought by Larry Silverstein, the Towers were immediately insured against terrorist attacks, an incredibly expensive insurance because such an attack was considered very rare.

On 9/11 George W. Bush did returned to Washington after 19:00, almost ten hours after the attacks. This decision received a lot of criticism. Karl Rove, the head of the White House Office of Strategic Initiatives informed the press about why Mr. Bush did not return earlier; stating that the plane that crashed into the Pentagon could possibly have been targeting the White House. Also, the administration feared the possibility that the presidential plane, Air Force One, was also in danger.

In the afternoon of September 12, “The Associated Press” and “Reuters” publicized the possibility of a mole in the White House. The New York Times stated that an anonymous caller, announcing an attack on the presidential plane Air Force One, had used several secret code words that indicated he possessed secret government information. The White House spokesman, Ari Fleischer, said:

“We are talking about a believable spy in the White House, not about a vague suspect.”

Karl Rove confirmed that the terrorists knew ultra classified codes and safety regulations of the White House! 512

William Safire, columnist with The New York Times, and a former advisor to Richard Nixon, pointed out an important question in his column:

“How did the terrorists get the encrypted information and the decoder, which enabled them to penetrate the White House? Knowledge about the decoding, the place of residence of the President and secret emergency scenarios indicates that the terrorists must have had informants inside the FBI or the CIA.” 513

Whether or not the question from William Safire led to the government admitting two weeks later that there had been no such phone call threatening attack on the presidential estates, we will never know. The fact that high members of staff make up stories in times of crisis to protect the president’s image is of major political importance. When the White House spreads false information twenty-four hours after the attacks, confusing the opinions of the world and the American people, how can we ever believe the other statements about the 9/11 attacks? The story that was spread on September 12 by Karl Rove, Ari Fleischer and several other members of the White House staff makes one wonder about the danger of such actions, that may be even more dangerous than Bush’s lack of action on 9/11.

The government lied to the American people and to the rest of the world. She either lied on September 12 when the government fabricated the story about threat to Air Force One, or she lied two weeks later when the statement was recalled. If there in fact was a phone call and it indeed was a threat, then we can conclude that the terrorists must have had contact with some official institution in the American administration. Bush’s behavior at the school in Florida makes you wonder about something else; did the Bush administration already know about the attacks before 9/11?

Unusually Empty Planes
Just as significant as the fact that few people were in the WTC, is the fact that there were very few people in the hijacked planes.

- light AA 077 : 289 seats, 64 passengers (three-quarters empty)
- Flight AA 011 : 351 seats, 92 passengers (almost three-quarters empty)
- Flight UA 175 : 351 seats, 65 passengers (four-fifths empty)
- Flight UA 093 : 289 seats, 45 passengers (four-fifths empty)

Was it just a coincidence that all four planes were just as equally understaffed? Did American Airlines (AA) and United Airlines (UA) always fly with this few people? If so, then they would have gone bankrupt long before that fateful day! Normally, it never happens that a plane is empty by seventy-five to eighty percent! Flights that have less than fifty percent of their capacity filled with passengers are usually cancelled or combined with other flights, because no airline company can afford such a loss of income. For the attacks, Boeing planes with big, full tanks (45,000 liters kerosene per plane) were necessary.

Moreover, the planes had to be almost completely empty to prevent the terrorists from being overcome by other passengers. Which terrorist organization manages to hijack planes with a maximum amount of fuel, intended for long-distance flights and a minimal number of people (passengers and crew) on board?

The Intelligence Services

The U.S. has the most advanced intelligence network in the world. The gathering of information and the surveillance of telecommunication is trusted to the CIA, the FBI, the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Defense Signals Intercept Organization. This entire network is financed by a foundation which has an estimated annual budget of thirty billion dollars. Officially, it is said that neither the CIA nor its rivals in the Pentagon with their spies and informants, nor the FBI with its anti-terror specialists, knew anything about the preparations of the terrorists. Also, it is improbable that the National Security Agency (NSA) and the secret service, which checks all faxes, telephone and email messages, would not have stumbled upon such disturbing information as what took place on 9/11. Not one single U.S. security service agency had any idea about the planned attacks against America. Also, neither the espionage satellites nor the special espionage planes managed to catch a single alarming signal. Ted Gunderson, a retired head of the FBI in Los Angeles, stated to the American Free Press:

“It is impossible that the secret services did not know anything about the planned terrorist attacks. Our secret services and the Mossad must have known about it.”

Terrorism expert Mike Yardley said:

The attacks must have had a preparation time of about three years. Did the intelligence services intentionally miss the tedious planning of these events? Were the American secret services aware of the planned attacks? Was it a gigantic slip up or a carefully planned and intended slip up?

It is very remarkable that the Bush administration informed the public within hours after the attacks that the wanted Arab millionaire Osama bin Laden, leader of terrorist group al-Qaeda, was responsible for the attacks. According to government spokesmen, everything indicated this, and the media announced that they had found undeniable evidence supporting this claim. Directly after the attacks, American investigators alerted their German colleagues that the trails of the main suspects led to the Federal Republic, especially to Hamburg. Supposedly, Germany was a base of operations for Islamic terrorists. John Ashcroft declared in Washington on October 23,

German security experts were astonished about the speed with which the FBI and the Bundeskriminalamt (BKA) presented the suspects and their conspirators. An insider declared:

“It is as if the Americans had already possessed all the information about the perpetrators for a long time.”

The Danish magazine Ekstra Bladet stated on October 23, 2001, that the editorial staff had an FBI list with 370 names of alleged terrorists on it. The list contained numerous details such as aliases, addresses, telephone numbers and e-mail addresses. When the editorial staff handed the list to Wayne Madsen, a former NSA agent, he said that the FBI could have never made such a list that quickly after 9/11, stating that the people on the list must have already been examined for a long time by the FBI. With the information that is now available, the allegations of the Bush administration that the attacks were unexpected and unpredictable and that no government official was aware of impending attack on American soil is no longer credible. The intelligence agencies had several serious warnings that indicated a possible attack on the U.S. Several agents of the FBI, CIA and other intelligence communities now admit that they pointed out to the Bush administration the possibility of a terrorist attack that was planned to take place “in a short period of time.” The main targets would be buildings in Washington D.C. and New York and would take place around September 2001. Vice-President Dick Cheney, the government official responsible for counter-terrorism, received multiple warnings from the FBI. Some of these agents reported that Cheney hardly reacted to their warnings and chose not to take any action. In the summer of 2001 John Ashcroft said that the head of the FBI, Thomas Pickard, told him about imminent threats, which he eventually stopped wanting to hear anything about anymore. On August 2001, when Bush was on a holiday at his ranch in Texas, information was given to him about a possible terrorist threat. This information concluded that the alleged targets were in New York and Washington D.C. and that the possible modes of attack would be by hijacked airplanes. The White House kept that statement from August 6 a secret for two years, because they believed it to be very confidential information and publicizing it could be a danger to the U.S. Two years later security advisor to the president Condoleezza Rice claimed that the document contained nothing more than a “historical review”, and that it was not a message that could have given the government the opportunity to prevent the attacks from happening. If that was the case, then why was it necessary to keep the information a secret?

On October 8, 2002, the important and well-respected English newspaper the London Telegraph publicized information that the IRA possessed secret recordings of conversations between President Bush and Prime Minister Tony Blair. In these recordings Bush gave away that he already knew about the attacks before 9/11. This information was confirmed by the security sources. David Trimble, Prime minister to Northern Ireland and chairman of the Ulster Unionists said:

Witnesses close to the Bush administration declared that between January and July, 2001, Tenet handed over at least forty researched cases of possible terrorist threats. Bush did not react on these repeated warnings concerning possible attacks. Instead, he made evidence disappear and manipulated the official reporting. Agents of the FBI and the CIA couldn’t do anything about this, because the Bush administration and especially the Department of Justice did not permit them to do so. George W. Bush and his administration constantly frustrated the investigations. They caused disturbances to many well-intended attempts to prevent these attacks. This made it a lot easier for the perpetrators to execute their plans because the suspects were not hindered in any way.

All of the suspected 9/11 terrorists were on a list of wanted potential terrorists prior to 9/11. Despite the fact that they were not allowed into the U.S., they managed to enter and leave the country on numerous occasions unhindered. It was even possible that they could, without using any aliases, enter military terrains. Rainer Rupp, who worked several years at the Economic Directorate of the NATO in Brussels, wrote in the daily newspaper Junge Welt of October 19 that in a phone call with a high ranking officer of the Pentagon, the officer confirmed that several terrorists that were active on 9/11 were trained on American military bases like Forts Bragg and Benning. Officially, it is admitted that five suspects had training in one of the high-security facilities during the Nineties.

How is it possible that terrorists were trained in such camps, and for what purpose? It is also remarkable that former trainees of these camps often get appointed as officers or as members of staff for the CIA or military intelligence services.

There are some firm reasons to assume that the “puppeteers” behind the U.S. government helped finance the terrorists. The most important questions that arose after 9/11 were: Was it only negligence of the Bush administration, or was there a clear decision to allow the terrorists to continue their horrific plans? Did the government officials help with the planning of these terrible acts, and were they supported by George W. Bush and his close staff? And was all this intended to base as a reason for a planned war in Central Asia and the Middle East?

The Air Defense Systems
When the first plane crashed into the WTC, it was clear that the U.S. was in an unusual situation. The entire country was in state of emergency. This should have led to an increased alert of both the air defense and national defense systems. These systems are activated daily and constantly modified and updated in order to be able to react threats. On September 11 they were shut down despite the serious nature of the situation. The entire air defense system was simply shut down. This could only have happened when some high-ranking staff members worked together to shut down the system. Such actions should have been reason enough for termination of employment of those responsible, and that’s exactly what would have happened had such actions would not been supported by the highest members of American authority.

Routinely checked and maintained safety systems cannot easily be shut down without someone noticing. How failure of such emergency systems could occur and go unnoticed is unfathomable. Also, considering the catastrophic nature of the attacks, the highest ranking military officers would have been alarmed. Additionally, if the shutting down of the air defense system of the most powerful nation in the world had truly been the work of lower-level employees, these individuals would have been arrested immediately. The sabotage of such a strict hierarchically controlled and routinely updated defense system would not have been possible without the cooperation of high-ranking officers. These officers certainly include the likes of President George W. Bush, Vice President Dick Cheney, Minister of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Air Force General Richard Myers. Michael Magrelow, an expert on the Russian secret service and the vice-chairman of the Commission Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federate Counsel said on September 14, before the Russian television channel NTW:

“The combination of the hijacking of the planes by super pilots, plus a simultaneous shut-down of the air defense system, plus the extremely accurate attack on the buildings, looks more like a well-planned conspiracy than like a simple terrorist act.”

Never discussed or solved was the mystery of how the terrorists were able to disable the catastrophe-proof black boxes and voice recorders of the hijacked planes. Moreover, it is claimed that the hijackers were able to overpower both crew and passengers without any one of them being able to send out a distress call to the aviation authorities. Even more remarkable is that not a single pilot was able to use the control stick to send distress code 7700 to the authorities at ground level. The pilots did not type the four-digit code because the transponders of all the planes were shut down. How is this possible? Were the hijackers behind the controls all along? If so, they must have been informed about the rather complicated and exact procedures that are unique to each airline.

Stanley Hilton, former chief of staff to Republican senator Bob Dole, is not only a political scientist but also successful and well-renowned defense and prosecution attorney. He has known Donald Rumsfeld, Paul Wolfowitz and others for decades, and according to him:

“I attended the same university as Rumsfeld and Wolfowitz in the sixties, we studied together at the University of Chicago, I know them personally.”

After the 9/11 attacks, Hilton represented a group of 400 people in a case against George W. Bush, Condoleezza Rice, Cheney and Rumsfeld. In his accusation Hilton accused Bush of national treason and mass murder, claiming that Bush and his puppets Rice, Cheney, Rumsfeld and Tenet did not only allow and support the operation, but that they also helped plan it.

An essential issue in Hilton’s accusation is the several day-long exercises, coined “war games” that were held by NORAD simulating several forms of aerial attacks by hijacked planes. These “war games” were, coincidentally, also held on 9/11, which caused a lot of confusion. On the day of the attacks the “vigilant guardian” simulated an attack on the American air-defense system. Stanley Hilton had documents and witness testimonies under oath from former FBI agents and informants that prepared these “war games”.

During the two months prior to September 11, 2001, thirty-five of these “war games” were prepared, with five of them taking place on September 11 at the exact time and day that the real-life version was taking place! An agent from the Disaster Control Service admitted, on tape, that he was already present on the night of September 10, to prepare himself for the game. According to Hilton soldiers, NORAD employees, FBI and the civil aviation controllers were all part of the “war games”. The real attacks were mistaken for the “war games” by all the air defense services. It was the “war games” that shut down the entire air defense system!

In an interview on September 10, 2004, Hilton stated:

“Documents that were investigated by the Security Counsel showed that the “war games” were changed into the real thing.”
Investigator and author Mike Ruppert claimed in his book Crossing the Rubicon, that Vice-President Dick Cheney led war game Tripod II, an exercise in Manhattan. Allegedly Cheney was present himself and in control of the entire 9/11 operation. According to Ruppert, Cheney was responsible for shutting down the defense mechanisms of the United States.

All Fingers Point to the Islam

It is questionable that the so-called terrorists made so many crucial mistakes. They left numerous traces, like the credit cards with which they paid for the tickets, a copy of the Koran and a video in Arab with the title How do I Fly a Plane? How could these mistakes, considering the shown professionalism and care with which they acted, ever happen? These obvious mistakes do not fit the pattern of their alleged actions. Professional terrorists just don’t make such mistakes!

Moreover, the alleged commander of the terrorists left farewell letters, addressed to families, in a car. Why were these letters not mailed? All this indicates that these traces were manipulated. The FBI released information that the lead suspect, Mohammad Atta, had lost a suitcase during his flight from Boston to Portland, which led to him missing Flight 11 (the plane that hit the North Tower). In his suitcase they found airline company uniforms, a video about commercial airplanes, a farewell letter and a will. Where was he supposed to watch this movie when his luggage would have been stored in the cargo compartment? What possible use could the packed uniforms have since he would not have had access to them once he was on the plane? Why did he not leave a farewell letter at home or mail it to his family? The WTC attacks would certainly have caused the letter to be destroyed; therefore writing it would have been useless, yet he still did so. Why would he write a farewell letter and will that he knew nobody was going to be able to read? At the beginning of this hand-written and highly questionable letter wrote:

It is very strange that a very religious Muslim would include himself and his family in such a prayer. Logically, right after the word “God”, he should have mentioned the prophet “Mohammed”. “The time of pleasure and idleness has ended ,” Atta’s letter continued. Pleasure and idleness are considered sinful deeds by radical Muslims. Is it possible that those who prepared to die for their faith had sinned against this very faith? Why would Atta encourage his comrades to recite the Morning Prayer, and why does he start citing parts of it? Shouldn’t it be expected that strict Muslims are able to pray on their own initiative, and that they should already know this prayer by heart? It is equally likely to expect an active Christian to be able to recite the Lord’s Prayer by heart. Atta’s document continued with “Obey God and his messenger, and do not struggle amongst yourselves when you feel yourself weakening. Everybody hates death and is afraid dying.”

Very strange that a Muslim fundamentalist would fear death; he is taught not to fear death. For him death is the beginning of a new life in paradise. He considers it to be an honor to die for Allah, and looks forward to it. The weird letter written by Mohamed Atta, released by the CIA, mystified every Muslim in the world! Atta’s father swears that his son has never had any interest in religion; he never wore a beard, which is obligatory for the very religious Taliban. On the contrary, according to the gossip magazines, Atta often visited prostitutes, drank alcohol, and enjoyed life to the fullest. This creates a dichotomy of Atta, on one side deeply religious and willing to sacrifice his live for God, and on the other a man that was completely detached from religion.

Everybody that flies regularly knows that suitcases sometimes get misplaced. When the suitcase with the uniforms and the farewell letter was missing after it was examined, why Atta wasn’t arrested before the attacks. Didn’t the attackers think of that? Why did they even have any suitcases, when they had intentions to use the plane as a bomb? And above all, for such a large act of terrorism why did they not use fake names or fake I.D.s, considering Atta was already under FBI surveillance? The simplest precautionary action on the part of the “terrorists” would be to have used fake I.D.s. Allegedly, the terrorists used credit cards to rent a car in which they left a copy of the Koran. Why did they not take the Koran with them aboard the plane? Wasn’t their attack an attack motivated by religion?

Sometime later, a manual was published that allegedly was written by Atta. The manual claimed that groups of Sunnite-Shi’ite background were the culprits of the attack. However, Osama bin Laden has a Wahhabi background, and the Wahhabi would never call on the Sunnites because the Wahhabis have been hostile to Sunnites for over 300 years. Wahhabis consider Sunnites to be apostates who strayed off the right path of Islam, and thus deserve to be killed in the name of Allah.

Terrorist attacks carried out by terrorist organizations usually result in the group claiming responsibility and declaring its ideologies. Such groups include the RAF, guerrilla fighters and rebels and suicide bombers in the Middle East. For September 11 however, America’s secret service agencies never identified one specific perpetrator or group. This was because no one individual or group claimed responsibility for the attacks. The perpetrators seemed to prefer to remain unknown, still they were so careless as to leave a car with a Koran and an Arab flight manual at the Boston airport, even though they did not intend returning. All this fits the behavior to someone, or some people, who wanted to leave a fake trail.

On September 13, the media reported that in the rubble of the WTC a passport was found that had belonged to one of the terrorists. The plane’s black boxes did not survive the heat, but this passport had survived the crash, fire and collapse of a 110-story building! When the exploding planes had caused steel to melt, and human bodies burned to ash, could a passport made of mere paper escape such an inferno? Even more miraculous was the “discovery” that this passport belonged to one of the terrorists!

According to an official statement from the American government, the black boxes belonging to the planes that crashed into the WTC were never found. Firefighters Mike Bellone and Nicholas DeMasi claimed the opposite:

“We handed over three of the four black boxes to the FBI. These agents told us to keep it quiet.”

Mike Bellone believes:

“The only reason that I can imagine why they are trying to conceal the truth is that the government knows they are responsible for the entire [events of September 11], and that the evidence can be found in these black boxes.”

Why did the terrorists book national flights under their own names? Weren’t they afraid that they might be caught before completing their task? They were after all closely monitored terrorists whose every waking minute was being monitored and recorded by American intelligence.
How could it be that in such a professionally planned and executed operation, the perpetrators left such dumb traces of evidence? The “leaving” behind of this evidence served only one purpose, and that was to portray Islam as a religion that instigates terrorism, and make Muslims the enemy. Former German minister Andreas von Bülow stated:

“This idea of Islam as the new enemy comes directly from Brzezinski and Huntington, two ideologists of the American secret services and foreign policy.”

The suicide attacks on the Towers demand extraordinary skills. The American government announced that the terrorists acquired these skills from flight simulation, and courses in flight schools in Florida. Of course the latter claim does not ring true, because why would the terrorists attempting to attack a country take flight courses in the same country they’re planning to attack? Wouldn’t it have been easier and safer to take such lessons at home in Afghanistan?

The owner of the flight school, Huffman Aviation, in Florida was Dutchman Rudi Dekker. According to police records, Dekker was prosecuted for fraud and money laundering in the Netherlands. He started the flight school at around the same time that the terrorists came to town and started their training. It is remarkable that Rudi Dekker was permitted to hand out the much-desired immigration form 1-20M to the pilots. This form makes it easier for foreign students to get a visa to the U.S. to start an internship or study there.

The sister company to Huffman Aviation, Britannia Aviation, also received special attention from the American government and was protected against investigation by the local Venice police, who had been warned not to bother either company. Britannia Aviation was located in one of Dekker’s hangars at the Venice airport. It was a company without any active assets, staff or historical records. Its capital barely netted 750 U.S. dollars. Moreover, although the company lacked a valid license from the aviation authority FAA it still could operate by permission of the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA). It is a fact that Britannia Aviation has completed successful plane checks for Caribe Air, an aviation company based in the Caribbean and controlled by the CIA. Why did the DEA give Britannia Aviation, where the terrorists completed their training, the special privileges that protected them from the law and police departments? The company not only has ties to the CIA, it is suspected of smuggling drugs, worth billions of dollars, into the U.S. It is also known that some pilots, who once supplied the terrorists in Nicaragua with weapons, operated from the same airfield as the terrorists did some twenty years ago. Is this just coincidence?

In the eight weeks after the attacks, there were more than 1000 suspected individuals and alleged witnesses put in custody. But only a few days after the hijackers left from Boston to set course to the WTC in New York, the green light was given by the American government for a Lear jet charter service to transport several members of Saudi royalty from the U.S. to Saudi Arabia. The plane left from a private hangar near Raytheon Airport Services, an important enterprise that used to have strong ties with the secret service. The owner of this Lear jet was Wally Hilliard, the only supplier of Lear charters in the southwestern part of Florida. Rudi Dekker is a partner of Hilliard’s enterprise, and is even supported financially by Wally Hilliard. This evidence reinforces the existing suspicion that during the activities and the training of the alleged terrorists, there were very close ties between these companies and the CIA. What conclusion you come to regarding this information is up to you.

In an interview with “CNN” on September 15, Egyptian President Hosni Moebarak criticized the public’s guessing regarding the terrorist pilot training:

“Some of the pilots allegedly got their flight training in Florida. Many people learn how to fly and have a license to fly. That doesn’t mean that they are all able to commit such an action. I speak as a former pilot, I know about these things, and I even flew large machines, even warplanes. I know very well that something like that is certainly not simple.”

After clocking several hours learning how to fly small Cessnas, the al-Qaeda pilots were apparently prepared enough to control hundreds of instruments and devices in the cockpit, including shutting down the auto-pilot and transponders. In addition to these skills, they were able to fly two Boeings directly off the radars of both the civil and military aviation authorities and into two buildings.

It is also important to acknowledge that the terrorists used GPS (Global Positioning System) in a way known only to military personnel, a feat practically impossible for a civilian pilot. Without any help, they correctly navigated to New York and upon arrival lowered the planes in such a way that the Towers were directly in front of them. They then shut down the onboard computer that is, according to its manufacturer, impossible to be tampered with in any way, even with the use of special tools.
Finally, these men then flew, at a speed of 220 meters per second and with deadly accuracy, precisely into the middle of the Towers this is quite a stunning feat, because the width of each Tower was sixty-four meters wide, slightly wider than the length of the Boeing 767. As the recordings of a coincidentally present amateur cameraman show, the pilots that hit the Southern Tower were the most impressive because they managed to plunge their plane and themselves, after a curve, even more precisely into the target.

It is because of the complexity of the plane that civil aviation pilots fly as co-pilots for years before being trusted to fly their own airplanes. The unalterable safety-on-board computers of such planes are also programmed to prevent steep dives and sharp turns. The faster a plane moves more active these safety features become.

Shanksville

The most remarkable achievement of that doomsday was done by the “pilots” of a fourth hijacked plane (Flight UA93) that crashed near Shanksville, Pennsylvania. This plane was hijacked at the same time as the WTC-plane hijackings. The only trace the crashed Boeing near Shanksville left was that of a small hole in a field. And like the crash at the Pentagon, there were no photographs showing debris or parts from the crashed plane. The only “evidence” was the crater formed by the crashed plane. Also, as with the other crashes, there were no traces of victims or baggage. Furthermore, there were no fires, only the six-meter-wide crater of felled trees. Several eyewitnesses declared on the Fox News channel that there was no debris at the crash site. Also, the Hollywood movie Flight 93 made regarding the last hours of the passengers of Flight 93, showed an ending in which there was no plane crash. The mayor of Shanksville, Ernie Stull, told a German TV station in March 2003:

“There was nothing [at the alleged site of the crash] that looked like a plane.”

Somerset County Coroner Wallace Miller said that it looked like the passengers of the plane were let out at some other location rather than crashed.

Official Pennsylvania state police representatives reported that fragments of the plane were found twelve kilometers away from the crash site. Reuters also reported that on September 13 fragments of the plane had fallen from the sky. Of course, this is not possible for a crashed plane. Debris only gets scattered at such a wide range if a plane explodes first in the air before crashing. Was flight UA93 shot down? Local media reports from various residents and inhabitants near that area spoke of a second airplane. These reports were confirmed when CNN aired radar images showing two planes flying closely together near that vicinity.

Actually, no one from the several traffic Towers in Pennsylvania witnessed the crash of Flight 93 on the radar, probably because on September 11, 2001, all traffic Towers in the area were evacuated. Somerset County air traffic controllers raised a false alarm of a plane at a height of 6000 feet and a distance of twelve miles that was allegedly heading for John P. Murtha Airport. Moreover, it is strange that there was a difference between the official crash time of 10:03:11 and the moment that Seismic Records from the Lamont Doherty Earth Observatory at Columbia University recorded a shock at 10:06:05.

Officially and as depicted in the movie Flight 93 it is claimed that there were several people that called loved ones from the plane. In total, there were ten passengers and two crew members that were alleged to have made telephone contact with family and loved ones while in the air, using their mobile phones during the hijacking. However, in 2001 it was not yet possible to use mobile phones to call someone from above 8000 feet! On July 15, 2004 American Airlines performed a test with a plane that had a so-called “cell station”, making it possible for passengers to make telephone calls with someone on the ground. This new system did not exist in 2001. That means that the phone calls that had allegedly taken place during the hijacking were fake. Particularly odd was that most of the calls that were recorded from Flight 93 were short and without answers or responses to questions from the people on the ground that these passengers were calling.

The cockpit voice recorder from Flight 93 was found after the crash, and the loved ones of the victims were allowed to listen to the tape, but only after agreeing to a written and signed statement obligating them never to speak of what they heard. Also, they were not allowed to make any notes. The last three minutes of the recordings have never been played for the families, and the FBI has never given a statement as to why the last minutes of the recordings weren’t shared with the grieving family members. Where the dead bodies of the passengers ended up is, as with the passengers of Flight 77, unknown.

Finally, it is interesting to note that Flight 93 does not show up in the database of the Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS). Even more remarkable is that just one day before the attacks, three different planes simultaneously were sighted, at different airfields, with the same registration number as Flight 93, 591 UA. Mayor White declared on September 11, 2001, at Hopkins Airport:

“The plane was identified as Flight 93. This plane was moved to a remote part of the airfield, subsequent to that some people left the plane.”

Passengers Check

The leader of the terrorists made the impossible possible by supplying his people with nail scissors and Stanley knives that were undetected by the highly sensitive metal detectors of the Transportation Services Agency (TSA) passenger check! These box cutters must have looked frightening or intimidating enough to render these passengers, who outnumbered the terrorists, completely powerless to their assailants. It is not only unlikely that those onboard the flights were overpowered by such insignificant weapons, it is also impossible that all the terrorists made it through the metal detectors undetected. Interesting enough, none of the said weapons survived the crash. The passenger checks at American airports were, before 9/11, very strict and effective in making sure that no one could pass the gates into the plane without the valid paperwork. Despite these extreme safety measures a group of nineteen terrorists succeeded in getting through, at two different airports, without a problem, ending up in four different planes. As it seems, al-Qaeda possesses huge organizational talent, because none of these nineteen terrorists needed a ticket or a boarding pass. At CNN you can read that none of the names of the terrorists are on the official passenger lists, and that none of them went through the official TSA check-in facilities. There are also impossibilities concerning the timing; a publicized picture of Atta shows him standing at a control post of an airfield. According to other reports, at that same time Atta was sighted at a completely different location. According to a different version he had seven minutes left to check in. In an interview with the Berlin Tagesspiegel (January 13, 2002) former minister Andres von Bülow stated:

“If this Atta was the most important man of this operation, then it is quite strange that he took the risk of taking a flight to Boston just before. If this flight had had only several minutes of delay, he wouldn’t have been able to board the plane they planned to hijack. Why would a clever perpetrator, make such a tight schedule?”
It is also remarkable that the American Immigration Service (INS) had let Mohammed Atta enter the U.S. three times with an expired (2000) tourist’s visa in 2001. Moreover, Atta was on the American list of potential terrorists since 1986. Nonetheless, Atta could enter and leave the U.S. without any problems, despite the fact that he was traveling under his own name. He traveled to Europe several times, and even though he was on the “watch list” of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, he had no problem whatsoever with U.S. custody or immigration services while entering the U.S. In April 2001 he was ticketed by the police for driving without a license, for which he failed to make a court appearance, resulting in a warrant for his arrest. Atta managed to slip through the cracks, because the warrant was simply not executed, even though he was jailed twice after the issued warrant, for driving under the influence of alcohol. Similar events also occurred with the other suspected terrorists; although the U.S. government was closely monitoring them, there was no action taken to apprehend them. Perhaps they were allowed to slip through the crack, because of their continued contacts with key people. For example, Mohammed Atta had extensive e-mail contact with current and former staff of American weapons manufacturers. These correspondences were collected from a file that Atta kept with email addresses.

Not one of the so-called perpetrators used an alias during the twenty months prior to 9/11 that they were living in the U.S. They rented apartments and cars, used credit cards and driver’s licenses all under their own names. Very strange is the fact that two of the perpetrators, Al Hamzi and Al Midhar, lived for several months, with an FBI spy in San Diego. \(^{517}\) The ease with which members of the al-Qaeda network traveled in and out of the U.S. is to be blamed on the American visa express program. According to Michael Springmann, the 1987-1989 head of the visa department of the U.S. consulate in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, he received multiple requests from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to grant visas to people that would normally not be able to receive one:

There was increasing hesitation about the credibility of the declarations concerning the terror attacks that the U.S. government gave. Representatives of the Saudi government doubted the validity of the list of nineteen suspected terrorists. Two days after the attacks, it became certain that at least two of the suspected terrorists could not have been on board the planes. In some cases, there was a rumor that the attackers had been Saudi traffic pilots and that one of them was even interviewed by CNN when he should have been dead. Prince Mit’eb bin Abdullah bin Abdul-Aziz commander of the Saudi National Guard said:

“Many innocent people, especially Saudis were accused. Later it seemed that the accused were absolutely not guilty. Many of the initial suicide killers are alive and live here or elsewhere.”

Robert Fisk wrote in The Independent:

“The CIA’s list of Arab suicide-hijackers included three men who were, and still are, very much alive and living in the Middle East.” 518

More than eight of the alleged terrorists reported to have been on those planes have reported themselves to the authorities of their respective countries or to one of the American consulates. They have denied being on any of the crashed planes and of being terrorists, and deny any ties with the attacks on 9/11. Many American politicians eagerly wanted to blame foreigners, but this has become impossible with new facts. For example, some passengers of the hijacked planes reported in their cell phone conversations about what was unfolding without mentioning that the hijackers had foreign accents. Because the passengers probably did not see any reason to describe the perpetrators, this could mean that the hijackers were perceived by the passengers as being no different than themselves. This also supports the theory that the hijackers were not Arab-looking. The hijackers must have looked American or European.

It seemed that the entire 9/11 operation was prepared by people who had the freedom to move throughout the country while remaining above suspicion. These attacks could never have taken place without the help of some high government insiders. The American scientist and politician Lyndon LaRouche is convinced that the entire operation was planned inside the U.S.:

“The idea, that this was an international terrorist action is complete nonsense, and it is very dangerous to look for a false enemy, ignoring the true enemy. The most important thing is to acknowledge who is the enemy. The enemy, the command structure, is to be found in the U.S. The guilty one is not at all an Arab country. The entire operation would have been impossible without the cooperation of the highest American authorities.”

“The perpetrators were most certainly trained in the U.S. This very delicate operation required hundreds of men, months of training, and a solid preparation. This could only take place with the permission of a disloyal and criminal group in the U.S. military, and intelligence services. The operation was so elaborate that a single terrorist group could have never pulled it off, because it would take months of training, and an extensive logistical support.”

The act of terror on September 11 was coordinated on several levels and executed flawlessly. Moreover, a clear and detailed plan was necessary to successfully execute the task. There must have been several alternative plans in place. This makes the organization even more complex, leading us to conclude that this was a military aerial action. The organization and preparation of the attacks must have been checked in several ways by the Secret Services because it was necessary that the right conditions be met. That is why a lot of experts feel that inside the government, the Secret Services and the U.S. military and some other people were informed about what was about to happen.

As mentioned earlier, after 9/11, Stanley Hilton, former chief of staff to republican senator Bob Dole, represented 400 people in a class-action lawsuit against George W. Bush, Condoleezza Rice, Dick Cheney and Donald Rumsfeld. Hilton stated:

“We posses some very indicting documents and eyewitness reports, which show that Bush allowed the attacks on 9/11 to happen in order to gain a political advantage, and to be able to execute a deceitful plan in the Middle East. The perpetrators were secret agents of the U.S. They were double agents that were paid by the FBI and the CIA. These double agents were checked by the FBI and received their training at the military base of the Pensacola Naval Air Station; recordings of these events exist.”

Cyclops

Stanley Hilton also stated:

“The hijacked planes were not controlled by pilots but by a technology that is already some decades old: it is called “Global Hawk”. It is technologically possible to take over the control of an airplane, and subsequently fly it by remote control. The theory about this remote control is not speculation. It is widely known that this technology exists. It was designed by Northrop Grumman to aid the Global Hawk, an automatic military system of the U.S."

According to Stanley Hilton a system with the name “Cyclops” was used. A chip was installed inside the nose of the hijacked planes that made it possible to control the planes from the ground. This chip deactivates the control of the pilot, and flies the plane in the desired direction. To leave nothing up to chance, it has to be said that the Boeing 757 and 767 that were used in the attacks were completely prepared and equipped to be remote-controlled. Maybe, this explains why the transponders of the planes were shut down, and the pilots could not make contact or give out distress signals to the aerial authorities (FAA). Also, it might explain the fate of Flight UA93. During the flight to Washington, something must have gone terribly wrong. Maybe the pilot succeeded in regaining manual control over the airplane, or maybe the remote control wirings short-circuited. Following the plane’s failure, it was shot down by a U.S. fighter plane, ensuring the death of the pilots. Otherwise, had they lived, the pilots would have talked about what went wrong, how they had suddenly lost control of the plane, how the plane did not respond to their control and computerized commands and how the plane was smoothly controlled on a specifically set path, but not by them.

How a plane can be crashed intentionally, without a bomb or hijackers on board, was shown in the American movie The Lone Gunmen. With the help of a remote guidance system and secretly installed technology, it was easy. In this movie the “good guys” prevail because they managed to hack into the computer system and “manually override” it, even though it was controlled by the Secret Service. This allowed the pilot of the Atlantic National Flight 265 from Boston (departure time 1850, gate 34) to pull up the nose of the plane, preventing a near crash into the World Trade Center (WTC). Yes, the World Trade Center.

Insight Information

However impossible it may seem to believe, certain people in the U.S. seemed to have known about the attacks before 9/11. Many people that worked in the WTC did not show up to work that day. The CIA disposed of a secret office in the WTC and not one member of its staff members died. CNN also had an office on the 110 floor of the Northern Tower but never mentioned this in any of its nonstop reporting; neither did CNN speak of any staff members amongst the victims of 9/11. Apparently, there was no one present at 9:00 in the CNN office inside the WTC; no secretary, news editor, cameraman, newsman or even a cleaning lady. How probable is that? How come CNN reporters were transmitting their broadcasts immediately after the attacks from a neighboring building?

Actually, there were no high-ranking members of other organizations that died that day. None of the managers came to work that day. A high-ranking staff member of a certain bank received an order, on September 10, to take all important documents home with him and to take a day off the next day. On that day, 9/11/01, it all became clear to him.521

The mayor of San Francisco at the time, Willy Brown, had booked a flight to New York that morning. The San Francisco Chronicle reported, on September 12, that the mayor had received a phone call from, according to him, a security-service employee warning him not to fly. Newsweek reported that the day before the attacks, a group of top-ranking officials from the Pentagon had cancelled a planned trip out of “safety and precaution”, for the morning of September 11. Nafeez M. Ahmed wrote in his book The War on Freedom about these series of flight cancellations by the American leadership:

“It was clear that high-ranking members of the Pentagon were informed about not only the danger but also the exact time of the attacks, allowing them to take precautionary measures. In short, it can be concluded that the people in the higher positions of the U.S. administration were informed that something was about to happen and that they took the threat very seriously.”522

Three years after the attacks Stanley Hilton claimed, in a September 10 interview that some people that were working in the WTC got a phone call from relatives that were employed in the navy the evening before 9/11, begging them not to go to work the next day.

A telephone call that an American marine made to his parents shortly before the attacks is also quite strange. The soldier called from an airplane-carrier on which he worked and warned his parents that a large object would hit one of the cities on the American east coast, and that his commanding officer had received the order to change course and navigate to the east coast. His parents didn’t believe him and thought that he had seen a movie on television and was confusing reality with fiction.

A former volunteer of the 1st battalion 118th infantry corps of the South Carolina National Guard said:

“My unit enlisted for an exercise in July 2001. We were suddenly told that all the activities scheduled for the next two months were cancelled, allowing us to prepare ourselves for a mobilization exercise that would take place in September 2001. Then for two weekends we practiced, and after that we gathered in August just to become fit enough for the exercise. By late August we were ready for it. All our vehicles were standing by, and our gear was in top shape. The only thing we had to wait for was a phone call telling us to go.”

Units of the American emergency control service, FEMA, were also present in New York the day before the attacks. An employee of FEMA, Tom Kennedy, said on September 11 to CBS reporter Dan Rather:

“We arrived late in the evening [the evening before the attacks], and we could get to work right the next day!”

Someone must have had a premonition!

Some important companies must have seen these same omens as well, because on September 10, a memo was sent to Goldman Sachs in Tokyo, underlining the importance of staying clear of American public buildings the next day. The Israeli magazine Yadiot Ahranot reported that the prime minister of Israel, Ariel Sharon, was scheduled to give a speech in east New York for a charity event on September 11. The Israeli security service, Shabak, advised him to cancel the trip. For what reason would Shabak sternly advise its prime minister not to travel?

Whether the crimes of September 11 will ever be solved completely is uncertain, because not only were the people who carried out the attacks killed, but a host of others involved in the preparation leading up to the event will doubtlessly be killed as well. The assassination orders will, undoubtedly, be given by those whose interest it is to keep secret the true identity of the culprits behind the September 11 attacks. There is not a country on the planet that benefited from the attacks in New York. What the events of September 11, 2001, did, however, was to open the door for the execution of the plans that have to lead to a New World Order.
Anthrax

The collective conscience of the human race, especially the part that lives in the U.S., has been deeply traumatized since 9/11. The people were subjected to trauma-based mind control, and every scientist that’s an expert in this field knows that a traumatized mind is easy prey for manipulation. In the aftermath of trauma, mind manipulation begins, and a population can be manipulated, on purpose, into seeing certain events without a certain amount of objectivity.

In Trenton, New Jersey, letters addressed to NBC news anchor Tom Brokaw and to the New York Post were handed over to authorities on September 18, 2001. These letters were said to contain traces of anthrax. After September 18 there were more reports of anthrax-related cases, such as the letter delivered to the offices of Florida U.S. senator Tom Daschle.

Both the White House and media suggested that Osama bin Laden was behind the letters, and the U.S. government even claimed to have traced the letters and the clues they offered all the way back to Baghdad. Their conclusion: Iraq was apparently behind these Anthrax attacks.

In the magazine Al Ahram, which is closely-associated with the Egyptian government, the frontpage article of October 24 reported that the Anthrax hysteria was part of psychological warfare of some high-placed Americans intent on creating worldwide support for Bush’s military plans. The lead article underlines that evidence linking Islamic extremists to the Anthrax attacks was yet to be found. Scott Ritter, a U.N. weapons inspector employed in Iraq (1991-1998) contradicted American implication of Iraqi involvement in the Anthrax scare. In an interview with The Boston Globe he declared:

“The fear that Saddam Hussein is behind the attacks is exclusively based on rumors and speculation. If you objectively look at the case, you will notice that it is bogus.”

In the London Guardian he commented:

“The biological weapons program of Iraq was destroyed, deconstructed or left behind during the several unannounced weapons inspections. There is no valid evidence that proves that Iraq had anything to do with the Anthrax attacks.”
The best supporting evidence to Ritter’s rejection of America’s allegations was the fact that the genetic and molecular compositions of the Anthrax strain mailed to Rather, Daschle and the New York Post were completely different from the composition of those used in the Iraqi weapons production.

Later, it was determined that the Anthrax used was a very specific and refined version of the bacteria. Such a refinement could have only taken been produced in a military lab. According to information from Iowa State University, it was far more plausible that the particular Anthrax strain used in the mailings were produced in an American military lab. The American scientific magazine The New Scientist wrote an article based on information collected from American bio-weapons specialists:

“The bacteria that were used for the anthrax attacks in the U.S. belonged to a specific group. It is known that the U.S. used [this particular strain] itself in the sixties for the production of Anthrax.” This strain resembles a group of anthrax dubbed “Ames”. In 1980 this bacterial strain was isolated in a sick cow by the National Veterinary Laboratory and brought to a high-security laboratory for further research. The true origin of the Anthrax strain, allegedly designed by Iraq and Osama bin Laden, was clearly in the U.S.

It now seems that the particular strain of bacteria came originally from the Chemical Warfare Laboratory of the American army in Fort Detrick near Frederick, Maryland. Nafeez M. Ahmed writes in his book The War on Freedom:

“So far, traces were found in five laboratories that exactly match the material found in the Anthrax letters. All five laboratories stated that they had the same military laboratory as their source of the material. This laboratory is the medical research institute of the American army for infectious diseases (U.S. Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Disease) in Fort Detrick. Informants from all across the judicial system confirmed that the suspicion, about possible ties with the CIA could very well be true. Further, there is evidence that the Secret Services were already notified about the identity of the perpetrators of the Anthrax attacks, but that pressure from high-ranking governmental officials prevented the arrest of these suspected perpetrators.”

Jochen Schild, editor-in-chief of the Greenpeace-Magazine, declared in an interview with Hannes Kleber:
“Information that we received from a very reliable source supports the assumption that the Anthrax, sent in the U.S., could have only originated from a lab in the U.S. Based upon the composition of the bacteria, and especially the composite silica, it clearly shows that it originated in an American laboratory. In other countries, other composites are used. That is all I can say at this moment, because we have to protect our sources. Actually, we posses three independent sources, there’s nothing left to be desired. Who would you like to hear as the fourth source, President Bush maybe? We have investigated this case for weeks. When three different sources confirm the same, it’s a clear case to us.”

“Judicial Watch” a public interest group that investigates and prosecutes government corruption and abuse, said in a remarkable article: “In October 2001, press reports revealed that White House staff had been on a regimen of the powerful antibiotic Cipro since the September 11 terrorist attacks. Judicial Watch is aggressively pursuing the disclosure of the facts and the decision for White House staff, and President Bush as well, to begin taking Cipro nearly a month before Anthrax was detected on Capitol Hill.”

Cipro is an antibiotic drug that is very effective against Anthrax, and high-ranking members of the American government were taking it one month before the mailings. The American government fiercely tried to keep this fact from the press. Of course, that the entire staff, including the president himself, were using medicines to protect them against anthrax a month before the first actual Anthrax attack can be called, at the very least, interesting, because nobody would take such a strong antibiotic without a reason.

The Invasion and Conquest of Iraq

We are not aiming at stability in Iraq, Iran, and Syria or even in Saudi Arabia. We want movement. Our means is creative devastation, whether it is our own society or foreign countries.” Michael Ledeen, confidant to George Bush

The “Tavistock Institute for Human Relations” in London is not only the mother of all think tanks, it is also the world’s premier top secret “mind control institute”. There is hardly any aspect of life in Europe and the United States into which Tavistock’s tentacles have not reached. This includes every level (both local and federal) of government, industry, trade, education and the political institutions of the nations. Every mental and psychological aspect of any Western nation is analyzed, recorded, profiled and stored in computer memory banks. One of Tavistock’s psychological techniques is what is known as “profiling”. This can be applied to individuals, small or large groups of people, masses or organizations of all sizes. The Tavistock Institute proved over and over again that when a large group is successfully profiled, it can be subjected to “inner directional conditioning” in just about every aspect of social and political life. Without Tavistock, there would have been no Bolshevik Revolution, no First and Second World War, Korea, Vietnam, Serbia or Iraq wars.

On the 16 of May 2001 Bush received a secret design for his future energy policy from Vice-President Cheney. Under Cheney orders, a detailed overview of the worldwide oil reserves and a summary of all foreign oil concerns dealing with Iraq had been secretly prepared. Furthermore, the plan contained a summary of all the political and military options for the U.S. on how to obtain a larger influence on Iraq, a country with the second largest oil reserves in the world. The Ministry of Trade, managed by Don Evans, provided Cheney with a map of Iraq on which all the known and suspected oil fields in the country were carefully marked. Evans, former CEO of one of the largest American oil concerns, marked the map with “blocks”, a marking technique customary within the oil community. Some markings, according to the legend on the map, indicated “gigantic oil fields”, suspected to contain at least five billion barrels of oil. Most of these blocks could be found in the vicinity of the northern Iraqi city of Kirkuk, which is east of Baghdad and northwest of the southern Iraqi port of Basra. The map also showed exactly where all oil pipelines in Kirkuk, Turkey and Syria were located. The oil refineries associated with each identified oil site that might need to be divided were also mapped. The American attack on Afghanistan and war preparations against Iraq had been planned long before 9/11.

Former exchequer Paul O’Neill disclosed that the Bush administration, immediately after its commencement on January 30 2001, held high-security discussions about a possible invasion and conquest of Iraq. O’Neill is convinced that the war against Iraq had already been decided on before the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, and that the Bush administration only used these events as an excuse to carry out its plans. In an interview with Time Magazine O’Neill declared that the downfall of Saddam Hussein had already been the top item on the agenda of the first meeting of the National Security Council, in which O’Neill himself took part. He said:

“For the beginning we had collected evidence against Hussein and looked for a chance to get rid of him.”

“Iraq is the key to the reformation of the whole region,” Condoleezza Rice, security advisor to Bush, assured. CIA chief George Tenet said at the meeting:

“We have a problem with sixty countries.”

George W. Bush responded:

“In that case we will teach them a lesson one by one.”

The only thing lacking was a valid excuse to attack. Two days later, on 1
February, 2001, the second meeting took place. On the agenda this time was a secret CIA message regarding Iraq and a political-military plan for the crisis that would evolve in the country after the planned fall of Saddam Hussein. Donald Rumsfeld said:

“Sanctions are all very well, but what we really need to consider is the departure of Saddam. Imagine what the region would look like when a regime would come to power that would maintain a good relationship with us.”

From day one O’Neill had collected all kinds of memos with titles such as Plan for a Post-Saddam Iraq and Foreign Candidates for Iraq Oil Concessions. These were documents that reviewed how Iraq was to be governed under U.S. supervision or which countries and oil companies were to get a share in the looting of the second largest oil reserves in the world. Bush said:

“Think of a way to execute this.”

How does one convince one’s own people, the allies and the whole world of the inevitability of a war against Iraq? Iraq emphatically stated that it played no part whatsoever in the terrorist attacks and was, in fact, hostile against terrorist organization al-Qaeda and its leader Osama bin Laden. Still, Bush, Cheney, Rumsfeld and other top American politicians still embraced 9/11 as a motive to attack Iraq. Nowadays hardly anyone believes in the existence of an obvious connection between the Islamic fundamentalist terror group and the worldly, nationalist regime of the Iraq Baath party. These two parties have been archenemies for decades, with Saddam and bin Laden publicly taking personal shots against each other. The consistently unsupported claims that an alliance between al-Qaeda and Iraq existed was nothing more than a desperate attempt to link Saddam Hussein with the terror attacks of September 11. There has never been any convincing proof to the claim that Hussein formed a threat to the U.S. or that the war against Iraq was a justified response of self defense, as claimed by American representatives.

The 9/11 attacks aside, the attack on Iraq was also justified by the U.S. with accusations of Iraq’s use of chemical weapons and possession of “weapons of mass destruction” (WMD). The matter of the WMDs was never researched objectively and, prior to the commencement of the war, became the central focus of the Bush administration war propaganda.

Bush and British Prime Minister Tony Blair, let their citizens, the United Nations and the rest of the world a fear-based propaganda of falsified and exaggerated scenarios of doom if their troops were not allowed to invade Iraq. As mentioned earlier in this book, the influential newspaper The London Telegraph on October 8 published the information that the IRA had in its possession a transcript from the recordings of several secret calls between Bush and Blair. In these phone calls Bush not only revealed prior knowledge of the 9/11 attacks, but also his intentions regarding a war in Iraq. In these talks Bush claimed he was having problems starting the war, as investigation by the intelligence agencies revealed that Iraq did not pose a military threat. In this same context Bush and Blair discussed the issue with oil, with Bush emphasizing that the oil reserves in Saudi Arabia were much smaller than those in Iraq. Iraq had become extremely important for the Bush Empire, because it had just won an important case against oil company Exact, and Bush’s oil company Benzol wanted a chance at the Texaco-territory in Iraq.

From the transcriptions, it also emerged that Bush was afraid that a living Hussein could act as a witness against his father, George Bush senior, in regards to his role during the Iraq-Iran war and because components of the poison gas used in the war were from the American company LaFarge. Bush had been one of the company owners, and Hillary Clinton was CEO during that time. Any possible dispersion of this information was made impossible by a “D-Notice” from very high political circles, meaning that if any of this information was ever revealed, it would be claimed that this information was based only on falsification.

Once again it is important to emphasize that the entire conflict in Iraq was deliberately kept out of international human and civil rights conventions. The declaration of war against Iraq on March 20, 2003, by the Bush administration contradicts civil rights regulations.
Chapter 52

Undermining the Faith in Christianity

“A nation of well-informed men who have been taught to know and prize the rights which God has given them cannot be enslaved.” - Benjamin Franklin

It’s no secret that Illuminati members support many destructive religious sects and have even formed other sects since the nineteenth century. Without a doubt, there are close ties between the Illuminati and the destructive sects. Everyone who occupies himself thorough research with this theme will, sooner or later, run up against the clans of the Rothschilds, Warburgs and Rockefellers. It’s publicly known that these families have provided considerable amounts of money to stimulate the spreading of many destructive sects. Many of these sects only function thanks to continual, enormous financial injections. One of the groups’ main purposes is to undermine the Christian faith.

It’s all the same to the devil and his demons what kind of sect or wrong track someone supports or follows. The main purpose will always remain to keep people as far away as possible from the true faith. The Jehovah’s Witnesses, the Mormons and many others were mainly called into existence to sow discord and divert people from true Christianity. Furthermore, together they represent an influential economic power with millions of followers throughout the entire world, and with that they aim for financial and spiritual independence for every individual.

In 1970 the Rockefellers drew up a scheme to replace the Christian churches in Latin America with movements like the Hare Krishna (a religion created in the USA). The Rockefellers spent large amounts of money to support the spread of Hare Krishna. Also, Chase Manhattan Bank, belonging to the Rockefellers, donated a lot of money to support the spread of Mormonism! 543
The well-known movements of the Associated Bible Students (predecessors of the Jehovah’s Witnesses) were called into existence with the money of the Rothschilds, in an effort to promote Zionism. Initially, their assignment was to make the restructuring of Palestine known, and to make it more attractive to the Jewish people. 544

Chase Manhattan Bank also loaned a large amount of money to a Korean of Japanese origin, Sun Myung Moon, and leader of the Unification Church (the Moonies). Reverend Moon is a globalist whose “church” aimed to bring Christianity under the control of the Illuminati. He claimed that his Unification Church was to be considered the final unifying piece of Christianity. He regarded himself as the final Messiah, who was going to redeem the “failure” of Jesus Christ. Everyone who becomes a member of the Unification Church belongs to Moon’s “true family”. It’s remarkable that everyone who becomes a member will be given to eat bonbons filled with the blood and sperm of Reverend Moon. 545 The eating of blood and sperm are clear marks of satanic influences.

In the field of religion, the Moon sect is just a marginal problem. Reverend Moon is at the head of an organization that occupies itself with political machinations in the highest field. Unfortunately, personalities like the American Presidents Nixon, Reagan, Bush, Clinton and George W. Bush have collaborated with the Moon sect. Elsewhere in the world, the Moon sect has connections with politicians, journalists and others. Examples of such connections include former NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns, who was adviser of Moon’s “security council” for eight years. According to the anti-Fascist working group KAFKA, there are all sorts of contacts with Right Populist parties like the Vlaams Blok, the Front National of Le Pen and, in the Netherlands, the Centrum-Democraten. In the past, this last party received subsidies from Moon. 546

The connections between Moon’s sect and the American CIA are remarkable. The contacts go as far back as the Sixties, when the CIA in South Korea built the Korean Central Intelligence Agency (KCIA). Membership to the Unification Church of Moon is accepted as an extra recommendation to obtain a post with the South Korean Secret Service. 547

The connections between the CIA and the Moon sect became very clear after the Bolivian military coup that took place on July 17, 1980. After the coup, it came to light that the CIA was behind the coup as representatives of Moon’s Confederation of the Associations for the Unification of the Societies of Americas (CAUSA). The leader of the Moon sect in Bolivia was the CIA agent Thomas Ward, whose substitute was the Vietnam veteran William Selich. The third man in the CIA team in the Moon sect was Paul Porry, who also tried to organize an armed church in Brazil.

It’s known that the Moon sect also played an important part in the secret war of the CIA against Nicaragua. After the U.S. Congress declined financial aid to the Contras, The Washington Times, the most important newspaper in the press emporium of the Moon sect, announced that they would raise fourteen million dollars in fundraising. The coordinator of this fundraising event was former United Nations representative Jean Jordan Kirkpatrick.

Sects, multinationals and pharmaceutical companies have all been the instruments behind the worldwide agitating Church of Scientology over the past few decades. Experts continually give warning against this powerful “religious community”, which spreads its tentacles from the background throughout the entire world. American writer Frank Hills claimed that Scientology is after conquering the world by whatever means necessary.

What do we really know about the Church of Scientology? Its center is a multi-billion-dollar empire that is situated in Clearwater, Florida, with the main headquarters in Los Angeles, California. The outward manifestation of the Church is unmistakably one of a tightly regulated and hierarchically-built organization. Although the Los Angeles headquarters determine the Church’s policies, the executions of such policies are relegated to regional, national and local authorities. And even that is surrounded by a web of regulations and control mechanisms. The Church of Scientology is the brainchild of Lafayette Ron Hubbard, an American born in 1911 in Tilden, Nebraska. The scarce facts about his life make it impossible to sketch his portrait in definite terms. What is certain about him is that during his short term at George Washington University, Hubbard did not receive any specialized training. It is also known that he practiced numerous professions. Unknown, however, is how his interest in the functioning of the human mind arose. According to Hubbard it was because he got in touch with the Eastern way of thinking during his younger days.

The cornerstone of The Church of Scientology is based on Hubbards’ book, Dianetics: The Modern Science of Mental Health (1950). In this book he describes a method that will give people full mental health. In addition to solving problems and reaching daily goals, the ways of Scientology promise gradual growth to lasting happiness. Those that apply themselves to fathoming the possibility of the impossible will eventually reach full awareness and realization of their dreams. The culmination of these conditions of awareness implies an experience of total freedom, in which the individual would be able to control the physical universe of matter, energy, space and time to reach full omniscience over their lives. The awareness of life and death and of its relationship to the universe will become clear because of that full omniscience.

According to Alejandro Frigerio, Scientology expert and professor of sociology at the Catholic University of Buenos Aires, Scientology teaches:

“A human being consists of three parts: the body, little more than a machine; the intellect split up into an analytical and a reactive part, that calculates and contains little more than a collection of images; and the thetan, life itself, the soul that breathes new life into the body. The point is that the thetan is above both the body and the intellect. However, what are the limits? How high can he eventually climb? It is the search for the answer to these questions that Scientology started, and the gate to the complete realization of spiritual potential opened itself.” 553

Approximately four million people worldwide study Scientology. The movement especially aims at bringing the mental legacy of Hubbard out into the broad cultural circles of its members. Movie stars like John Travolta, Tom Cruise and Kirstie Alley are main contributors to the Church of Scientology. Tom Cruise and his then-wife, Nicole Kidman included the teachings of Hubbard in the movie Eyes Wide Shut , which also included the satanic practices of the Freemasonry. John Travolta showed his commitment in one of his movies by dedicating it to the spiritualistic science of the Church of Scientology.

Frank Hills mentions in his book Eine welt des Bösen (A World of Evil) that Scientology has at its disposal its own secret service, which takes action against critics. According to Hills the movement even has a budget for attacks against opponents of Scientology. Hubbard’s code of honor is:

Scientology even threatens its opponents publicly:

“He who criticizes us will wish he never talked about us.” 554
In Germany, Renate Hartwig is a bitter opponent of Scientology and claims:

“The Scientology movement has members and sympathizers everywhere; in political parties, in government positions, in courts of law and with the police. Scientology is absolutely not a free-floating, innocent fringe group of fools! This pseudo-sect makes rabid profits and captivates more and more people. People don’t realize it until after they have joined the Scientology Church: suddenly they lose their job or go bankrupt or end up in a mental crisis, et cetera. I don’t wish on our country that it wakes up in the morning and discovers what it means to be clear. Clear Germany is the publicly declared purpose of the Scientology movement, which means as much as “Take over the power.” Whoever sneers about this has to go and talk to people to whom this assumption of power is already a fact. My charge reads in short: the Scientology movement is a movement which is tolerated by the state and can’t be legally charged; it consists of the terror of the media, prominent individuals, artists and politicians.”

There is concrete evidence for a connection between the founder of Scientology and secret occult lodges. Robert Anton Wilson, co-author of the book Neuropolitics (1977) by Timothy Leary, declared that Hubbard’s system is, for the larger part, derived from Aleister Crowley:

“Hubbard was a member of Crowley’s Ordo Templi Orientis in the Forties, and there he learned a lot, including some teachings that he implemented into his book Dianetics. Following Crowley’s death, Hubbard took over the leadership of the Ordo Templi Orientis.”

Frank Hills writes about that:

“In 1944 Hubbard was initiated by Aleister Crowley in the Ordo Templi Orientis. After Aleister Crowley’s death the home base of the Ordo Templi Orientis was with the Church of Scientology.”

The Mormon Church in Salt Lake City, Utah, is also called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Joseph Smith junior, founder of the Mormons, joined Freemasonry early on in his life. He was formerly initiated into the town of Sigh on March 15, 1842. The next day he was admitted to the thirty-third Degree of the Scottish Rite. Since then, the Mormon Church has developed itself into a secret brotherhood that shares the same symbols as Freemasonry. Also for the Mormons, as with the Freemasons, the same horrible punishments imposed on those that betray the sect are applied. In the Mormon temples, one can clearly find the same symbols as those used by Freemasonry: the triangle, the protractor, the circle, etc. In the name of true Christianity Joseph Smith introduced the pagan mysteries of Freemasonry in his “Church”!

Upon further research one finds that the Mormon movement has always meddled in witchcraft and magic. Many former witches that switched to Mormonism have recognized the many similarities with the Church’s initiation rituals and other practices. Dr. Reed Durham was president of the Mormon History Association and declared, in 1974, that Joseph Smith junior was guilty of the most secret, occult and esoteric science that exists. Dr. Durham got hold of a magical Freemason medallion (Jupiter Talisman) once belonging to Joseph Smith. Smith was obsessed with this medallion. He worked his entire life with this medallion and wore it when he died as a martyr. The Talisman was used to call upon the intelligence of “heaven” and to support its bearer in all his deeds. The Smith family is still in possession of some magical objects, amongst which are three magical parchments, a Freemasonry medallion, another talisman, a magical pouch, a magical pocketbook and a healing amulet.

A guest of the Smith family, in 1830, resulted in the following commentary:

“We heard Joseph Smith senior tell that he believed firmly in witchcraft and supernatural powers. He has initiated his entire family in this religion.”

The highest Druid in the United States gave his pupil, William Schnoebelen, advice to join the Mormon Church and take part in the temple rituals if he wanted to reach the highest grade of white magic.

Satanism is prevalent within the Mormon Church. Glenn L. Pace, Second Counsellor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Mormon Church wrote, in a secret letter, that the Mormons had been accused of satanic ritual abuse. This ritual abuse took place in several churches and temples. Mentions of ritual abuse came from Utah, Idaho, Mexico, California and other places.

The roots of the Mormons lie closer to Satanism than they do to Christianity! One of the most important satanic rituals is the “sealing”. Everything in this religion is sealed. When one thoroughly studies the many cultures and religions that practice satanic rituals, it will be impossible for him not to recognize Satanism in Mormon practices. Just like with Satanism, Mormons are “sealed” with each other during “temple” marriages. In past times, Mormon men were sealed with several women in one marriage. These sealings strongly resemble the ones within witchcraft. With witchcraft, sealing is referred to as “manifesto”. A family member of Joseph Smith junior was a victim of satanic ritual abuse himself and admitted that the Smith family descends from a satanic bloodline.

The first tracing of Mormon existence dates back approximately 200 years, when the first immigrants settled in New England. The Smiths, the Goddards, the Richards, the Youngs and the Kimballs all belonged to one family. These families played an important role in setting the foundation of Mormonism. They were the center of the early Mormon Church and moved together from Connecticut to Vermont and eventually settled in Palmyra (near New York). They were related to each other and claimed they are descent of one of the Israelite tribes. During their stay in Vermont, members of these families founded a religious brotherhood, which was called the Fraternity of Rodmen. This brotherhood strived for “the true religion” that would rule over the American continent. Oddly enough, this fact has never been connected with the earlier Mormons.

The Mormons have the largest computer in the world, which is situated in a large underground nuclear air-raid shelter in Salt Lake City. This computer not only contains the complete genealogy of Mormons, but also includes the genealogies of most of earth’s inhabitants. No trouble was spared into looking through municipal files for the genealogy of every one of us. Most of the documentation that exists is photographed and systematically filed in this computer. In reality, all this information is needed for the creation of the New World Order.

Behind the scenes, close relations between the sects include lawyers collaborating and informing each other on legal disputes in which the sect is involved. In the French magazine Le Point a sizable chain of clearly outlined and documented relationships between the sects was demonstrated. In the magazine, a meeting between representatives of different sects active in France and other countries was described. The subject of this meeting was the founding of a common offensive organ, with powerful leadership that will be responsible for suppressing and financially ruining all those who want to unmask and speak out against destructive sects and cults. In October 1992 that organ was called into being. This “cartel” of sects was named Firephim, the French abbreviation for Federation of Religious and Philosophical of Minorities. The President of Firephim is Mrs. Gounord of the Scientology Church, the treasurer is the French leader of the Moon sect, Bernard Mitjaville, and general secretary is the Raelian, Jacques Aizac. The following sects are part of this group: Scientology, the Unification Church (the Moonies), the Raelians (a UFO/sex cult), Celtic Druids, some satanic sects, Transcendent Meditation, the Memphis and Misraîm rites of Freemasonry, Wicca Occidental, former Children of God, Baha’i and the Jehovah’s Witnesses. 562

John Perkins, Peter Joseph, Jordan Maxwell, David Icke and other so called "New World Order Experts" also seek to trash Christ and Christianity in an effort to promote their own messianic claims and unfortunately many people who are open to the truth of knowing that there is more than meets the eye in the way the world is being run, are unknowingly being led into a world of trans-humanism whilst believing that the truth movements they are following, are doing a great deed in exposing the new world order.

Example:

Peter Joseph’s Zeitgeist: The Movie - The Greatest Story Ever Sold is one of the most popular and influential Internet films to appear in recent years. Tragically, it has effectively deceived many undiscerning people who have been mesmerized by its fast pace and have accepted it prima facie, without carefully examining the film’s claims. Sadly, the net effect has turned countless people away from Christ by using a pack of devilish lies.

One of the astonishing ironies about the Zeitgeist movement is that it came under the guise of exposing pagan beliefs, globalism and the one world government only to end up leading people away from the truth of God’s word and into the occult and trans-humanist movement.

Zeitgeist presents a long debunked theory that claims early Christians created a “Christ myth” that is loosely based on an alleged amalgamation of ideas that were borrowed from various pagan religions. However, serious scholars, long ago, refuted the ideas promulgated in Zeitgeist. To its own detriment, Zeitgeist quotes plenty of biased occult sources and very few, if any, primary sources.

Zeitgeist takes its name from the German word which means “time spirit” and means “the spirit of the age,” which ironically sum up the very “spirit of the antichrist” that is prophesied to delude the world at the end of the age (1 John 4:1-4).
Zeitgeist begins with the voice of Jordan Maxwell, who is billed as one of Zeitgeist’s main “authorities” and whose bizarre views are brought to the fore throughout the film. Incidentally, Jordan Maxwell has managed to gain quite an audience despite his ludicrous claim that he was brought to planet earth by a group of aliens and that he will be presented to the world as an occult Messiah.

The primary evidence for the success of the global elites mind control operation is the fact that the thinking, belief systems, morality, behavior and religious beliefs of the average people have radically changed in just a few short decades. The elites have perfected social engineering to such an extent that they have now indoctrinated several generations into being antiChristian in their belief systems. The stealthy nature of their strategy has developed politicians at the highest level who are programmed like Manchurian candidates with synthetic personalities and they have developed Machurian actors and entertainers as well.

Eliminating Christianity from the Curriculum

One of the biggest threats to Christianity is the New Age Movement. The New Age Movement consists of a couple of well-organized international organizations. In the era of globalization and radical free trade, New Age has to contribute to creating a whole new form of society. All old values, moralities and standards, like faith in the Scriptures, the love for the motherland and trust in the family, have to disappear and make room for a soulless world community.

Under the disguise of the elimination of religion, the Illuminati have revived the Mystery religions within our schools. Illuminati foundations spend a lot of money on educational programs to proclaim a New Age way of thinking. In schools everywhere children are being indoctrinated with antiChristian New Age philosophies. Teachers have been instructed to teach the New Order’s Spiritual systems of Gnosticism, Humanism and New Age in the school systems for much longer than people realize. Textbooks are being written to promote controllable slaves who have a global view and a syncretic secular or gnostic New Age outlook.

Many of the modern educational ideas taught in schools today are not even recognized by the general public as being occult. People get very defensive when one explains that psychology, which is considered a science, is based on the occult direction that Freud and Jung gave. Jung is openly recognized by occultists, such as the Rosicrucians, as having been an illumined mind. Jung was into astrology and got his information from a “spirit guide” (demon).
In 1980 Senator Peter Hoagland of Nebraska said the following on a radio broadcast:

“People who believe in the Scriptures do not have the right to indoctrinate their children in their religious beliefs, because we, the State, prepare them for the year 2000, when America will be part of one global world society, and their children would simply not fit in.”

The strategy of the Illuminati can be clearly recognized in this attempt, and that is to liberate man from all religious, parental and familial ties!

Witnessing Apocalyptic Signs

The ruling Illuminati families are building deep secret underground cities to create safe and secret places for themselves. Besides vast tracts of land in sparsely populated regions, the ocean has become a grand place to locate these secret bases. They can be found in both the Pacific and Atlantic Ocean. One underwater base is situated to the east of the island Gran Canaria (Canary Islands), and was built during the Second World War by the Nazis.

A number of underground sites are openly admitted by our governments. These are the known, so-called military bases. But instead of being U.S. government projects, many of the levels on these bases actually belong to the Illuminati.

What are some of these bases like?

These places have elevators going miles down into the earth, super-fast trains connecting the different sites and warehouses of stock piled materials. Some even have facilities for growing food. Spokes link areas to other areas. Entrances are concealed with hi-tech camouflage and quick shutting entrances.

These bases are designed so the elite could survive a worldwide epidemic, or a natural disaster like an asteroid hit, reversal of the earth's pole, a galactic dust cloud, or a nuclear war which they allow us to endure while they live in safety. Whatever disaster they see coming, they are prepared.
Chapter 54

The End

In 2012 Mayan apocalypse panic spread. Doomsday-mongers predicted a cataclysmic end to the history of our planet. Popular Conspiracy author David Icke did not believe in the Mayan date of December 21. In his Newsletter (December 2012) he said:

“Personally, I think the end of the world is on January 27th 2013 because the Mayans had a different letter system to the later western model.”

Like all the Doomsday-mongers, David Icke was mistaken. The world is still intact and we are still here.

Nonetheless, the near future threatens us with very dark clouds on its horizon.

How can one approach the future with a feeling of security? Is there any hope left?

This book let us look into a mirror: Our behaviors, our fears, our lack of solidarity, our culture of lies and of course our materialism. It describes the development of men in societies that cannot be bothered to think for themselves, and the inevitable outcome of their actions, or lack thereof.

If you choose not to look into the mirror, you blame someone else. Blaming someone else for our own stupidity is much more pleasant. Back to the television with a can of beer. Stop moaning. Get up early in the morning, stuck in traffic, work, stuck in traffic again; television, beer and back to sleep; day in and day out. And do not forget the supermarket on Saturday.

How far does all this have to go? Could we forget about the couch, the beer and the television for just a second? We need to start using our brains quickly, or it will be too late. If we do nothing, we will end up in a modern version of the dark ages.
This book was not written for people who like the subject of conspiracy theories and believe we should rise up in revolution against our government.

One Illuminati Protocol mentions the following:

Nothing is more dangerous than personal energy; when it is backed by intelligence, it is more powerful than the millions of people among which we have brought discord.

We appear to be in possession of enough personal energy and intelligence to be feared!

No matter how much money you have, you will never control the minds of all people. People who let profit prevail over human dignity, will always lose when they are up against the masses, once the masses abandon their fear and refuse to accept the way things are going.

This requires the recognition of human dignity.

The elite, long ago anticipated this moment of choice, and ensured the building of a balanced society is woven into Western constitutions and the philosophy it has engendered.

Laws, and in this case constitutions, deal with natural processes. If used correctly, the law serves as a reference point for our actions: The aspiration to create a (natural) socio-economic balance. In other words, universal matters. The law and the (monetary) number system complement each other.

Constitutions refer to ones classic and social fundamental rights. These are rights one can invoke, such as the right to adequate food, clothing and shelter. People whose intention it is to create a dictatorship have no interest in these rights.

Unfortunately, this is something we have failed to understand and this is reflected in the way we live our lives. While most were glued to the television screens, these constitutional rights were put aside, leaving the Free Market to take over.

The effects are seen in societal nonsense and lawlessness: Everything and everyone is up for sale. Living under the rule of lies, thinking we all will be rich, caring less about the law or each other.

Global dictatorship is a choice, just like freedom is a choice. Freedom can only be carried by people who can take responsibility for their actions. Dictatorship fills the void that is created by passive behavior, a reluctance to take responsibility in the absence of natural leadership.

If we do not want to live in a dictatorship, we can turn to our constitution for legitimacy. Our right to self-determination is embedded in the constitution, but it is our responsibility to make use of the constitution for our wellbeing.

“All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.” - Universal Declaration of Human Rights (U.N. Article 1.10 December 1948)

THE FOLLOWING IS WRITTEN TO EVERYONE NO MATTER WHO YOU ARE OR WHAT YOUR RELIGIOUS PERSUASION

The New World Order is designed to unleash the demons from hell! The Illuminati mind-controlled followers are well programmed with Armageddon programming to create hell on earth. Good thing true believers still have the option of a heavenly hope!

Among others this book is written for those who accept the reality that true peace can only come from the coming Prince of Peace who will put an end to this demonic plot to enslave the world in a system that will guarantee eternal damnation for those who are unable to prevent being deceived.

Without the certainty of faith in God, accepting a devilish conspiracy can be extremely frightening. Instead of being afraid, righteous believers can rejoice in God.

Do you believe in the existence of God? Or do you think that God is a product of superstition, tradition and human fantasy?

Whoever tries to convince his fellow humans of God’s goodness continually faces the sad fact that many people don’t seem interested.

Recognizing the truth behind world history is important, and is in no way frightening; on the contrary, it is liberating because someone who believes in God can assume that a special grace is granted to him.
Two kinds of knowledge - why God cannot be found

In today's society, everything has to be measured or scientifically explained. Among others, this has led to a world view in which God has no place. From our primary school days onward, we are taught to observe the world with our five senses. Our eyes see, our ears hear, our noses smell, our tongues taste and our skin feels. The senses are the gateway to our brain and they allow us to gather knowledge that is stored in our brain.

Scientists focus on sensory observations and tend to exclude everything that cannot be observed. That is why they have repeatedly claimed that they have examined everything with regard to physics, chemistry and biology but were unable to discover God. In line with this, religious people are often considered naive. Sensory knowledge has “successfully” eliminated the existence of God.

And yet, all of us have to admit that our senses are inadequate to answer many questions in life. What is the source of light, life and gravity? There are numerous questions that cannot be sufficiently answered with the use of our senses. We can only observe creation with hindsight and use tests and research to see how beautifully everything is made. In that sense, science cannot but follow the facts.

Once man has reached the boundaries of sensory knowledge, he philosophizes or guesses. An example of this is Darwin, who, while on the Galapagos Islands (a group of small islands situated in close proximity that have different flora and fauna due to the cold gulf streams), noticed various species of finches that all belong to the same family. On one island more food was available to birds with short, blunt beaks, while, on another island, a small pointy beak was needed to gain access to food. Darwin used his senses to observe that the finches on different islands had different beaks.

Things started going wrong when he began philosophizing and argued that this phenomenon proves the existence of evolution, as a result of which man evolved from apes. But what exactly did he see? A finch was still a finch, even if the beaks were different. That was not proof of the existence of evolution, because creation theory also agrees that animals can adapt to different circumstances. The idea that all species of dogs, from the Chihuahua to the Great Dane, have originated from a common ancestor, does not pose a problem for people who believe the world was created. They were dogs long ago and that is what they still are today.

So philosophy can lead us to the wrong conclusions, especially when it is designed to support something of which we are already convinced.

To answer the many questions, we need more knowledge, in addition to our sensory knowledge. We can call this revelation knowledge. Try imagining that there is a God who designed and created the Earth and everything on it. That he created the Earth for man to inhabit and that he created man in His own image. God is a Spiritual Being, which means He cannot be observed through our senses. He also created man in His likeness, as a spiritual being with a body. The soul, which is subject to the mind, gave man his personality and his mind gave him the ability to reason.

What we call the subconscious is nothing more than the human mind, the actual person. Would it not be the most natural thing in the world for God to want to communicate with man and to allow man to communicate with Him? That is why he descended to our level. With His Mind, God sought contact with the human mind. Some of the men who responded to this contact with faith by surrendering to God's will and dominion were used to write down the Divine message. God's word turned into a communication tool that a humanity that had succumbed to sin was able to understand using its senses, by reading it. That is why we can call the Bible a rational message from God that contains the things we really need and that allows us to find Him.

People are religious by nature and have a natural hunger for God. From a creationist perspective, this makes perfect sense, because He created man as a spiritual being. The desire for the supernatural can be obscured by a scientific approach, but that does not change the fact that each and every one of us is looking for God. To find God, the Bible is the appropriate book that tells us the reason behind creation, its origin, the source of life and light. That is why sensory knowledge without revelation is meaningless.

Sensory knowledge is transferred to the brain, where it is cataloged and stored for later use. It has been said of Thomas Edison that he experimented over three thousand times before he actually invented the light bulb. The same applies to virtually all technological inventions, such as the radio and the computer, that were only developed after a myriad of sensory experiments. The knowledge of man is not innate, but has to be acquired through observations and experiments. It is only in retrospect that the how and why are added, which means they are nothing more than a description of what has been scientifically observed. Our senses are not always reliable. They can be affected by accidents, indifference, and mental exhaustion. In addition, memories of sensory observations can be revised as time goes by. Its limitations are known and taken into account. The human mind is insatiable and when the limits of knowledge through sensory experiments and observations are reached, guesswork and speculation commence. Then theories are developed about what cannot be observed via the senses.

Charles Darwin's theory of evolution was the result of a lack of knowledge about the why of creation, the origin of matter, of light and of gravity. Because Darwin refused to accept revelation knowledge, he resorted to sensory knowledge, which would not allow him to find God and made it impossible for him to believe in God. What we see here is a vicious circle of rationalizations as a result of the refusal to accept revelation knowledge. Darwin's senses were able to observe God's work and the design of His creation, but he was unable to find the Architect. He was unable to locate the life in the plants and animals he dissected, and yet he had to admit there was life. He could not see thoughts, and yet he believed in them. He could not see the human brain at work, but he knew that it functioned. He was unable to see God and therefore denied His existence.

The observation of mankind had suddenly become inconsistent. Darwin started guessing and theorizing and gave us his masterpiece of speculation: the theory of evolution. He had reached a point where revelation knowledge was indispensable, and by refusing it, he entered the darkness of sensory dependence. By refusing to believe in God and the Bible, he forced himself to find a solution to the origin of the universe and ended up speculating.

The Bible takes a unique place among the books in the world, which distinguishes it from all other books by its revelation of God to mankind. By virtue of this authority, the Bible demands obedience from man, because it claims to be above man. The Bible is not a scientific account, but it is the father of all science, because it has inspired all subsequent educational systems, charities and mechanical, chemical and biological discoveries. The greatest scientific discoveries ever made had their beginnings in Christian countries. As God was the Creator of everything, man, who was created in His image, is capable of creating great things in the world of mechanics, architecture and industry.
When sensory knowledge is lacking, the Bible gives guidance. This book is the revelation of the origin of the world and life itself. It is also the revelation of sin, its origin and man's redemption from its power and dominion. Above all, the Bible is the revelation of the Man of Galilee, who died for our sins and proved he was truly the Son of God by His resurrection. It reveals to us a perfect salvation on legal grounds and shows us how to become a new creation through faith in the work accomplished by Jesus Christ. And finally, it reveals to us how we can obtain eternal life, how this world will end and be followed by a new Heaven and a new Earth in which everything will be restored. The denial and dismissal of this revelation knowledge is the darkest stain on modern thinking.

Nobody has ever seen an atom, and yet, modern science is convinced it exists. Nobody has ever observed an electron, and yet, people have looked for it for years. Images without sound are meaningless to a blind person. A radio turned on full volume means nothing to a deaf person. In the same way, spiritual things mean nothing to an individual who lets themself be guided by sensory knowledge. Sensory guidance will suppress his spiritual nature and keep him a prisoner, without the chance of further development. Like a child locked in a classroom without books and without a teacher.

Spiritual development takes place through contact with the Father-God of the Bible, through His revelation. The mind is renewed to allow it to know and understand the will of God in that revelation. By feeding himself with that revelation, his heart will be able to communicate with God, and his life will become aligned to His will.

Just as sensory development is stimulated by reading appropriate literature, man's mind develops itself by reading and contemplating God's revelation in the Bible, which was given unto us as spiritual nourishment. God can reveal Himself to us, because we are of the same kind (created in His image), allowing Him to work in our mind with His Spirit and sharing His nature with us. Now we can have contact with God, speak with Him and experience happiness, no matter what the circumstances are.

The God of the Bible is a God of faith, which is why men and women of all ages, being His creatures, have possessed a natural faith that originates in the human mind. God demands faith from people because he cannot communicate on a sensory level. It is the human mind that can establish this contact. Faith is not a product of the senses but of the human mind. God demands faith, not only from the mind but also from our hearts. The Bible states that we need to love God with all our hearts, souls and minds. He addresses the human spirit, because the human rationality cannot love. Our spirit needs to dominate our mind, like our mind dominates our body. It is only then that we can love God with all our minds.

“Experience is the best teacher” and “Seeing is believing” are slogans from sensory knowledge. To those of us who only possess sensory knowledge, revelation knowledge appears incredible and impossible. The desire of the human mind for God shows and expresses itself in different ways. When that desire remains unanswered, our inner unrest can look elsewhere for satisfaction. Alcohol, drugs, sex, violence or other kicks can provide temporary satisfaction but will never be able to offer the peace and happiness that God's Spirit can give us.

Everyone has to accept that spiritual hunger is as real as physical or intellectual hunger. The revelation knowledge of our Creator in the Bible is above all intended as an answer to the deepest need of the human mind, to stop the hunger in the human mind. Jesus knew that when we said that man cannot live by bread alone but by the word of God. The miracles Jesus performed on Earth in the realm of the senses were designed to prove to people of that realm that he was the Son of God.

It is hard to fathom by people who possess sensory knowledge that revelation or faith comes from a higher source. People, who are used to work hard to achieve their worldly goals, are driven by sensory knowledge. Revelation knowledge shows us that we can achieve our goals through mercy based on faith. This is the hardest step for anyone to take: the fact that mercy and eternal life cannot be obtained through hard work but through accepting that Jesus was crucified for our sins, punished on our behalf and was resurrected from the dead. Our quest for independence does not accept the idea of a God telling us how to live.

The notion that Jesus came back to life is hard to understand in a sensory world. Our senses do not allow us to believe in miracles. We want to see, hear, smell, touch and taste before we accept anything, because these are things that do not lend themselves to rational thought. Ask yourself whether you can see love? You will need to admit that you can only see the effects of love. Love cannot be seen, because it originates in our soul. And yet, nobody will deny the existence of love. The same is true with hate and with our thoughts. We cannot perceive them with our sense, and yet we believe they are real.

Our imagination cannot be understood from a sensory perspective, and yet it allows us to do great things. We cannot see the wind or gravity, and yet we can see their consequences. Similarly, we cannot see our conscience, but we can feel its effects. We conclude that there are few higher things in life that we can observe with our senses. We can see their consequences, but we cannot grasp their reality. That is why sensory knowledge finds it so hard to grasp the concept of faith. There is no physical transformation, and yet the thoughts and actions of the faithful are changed in a way that is hard to explain.

It has been said before, God is a Spiritual Being, and so is man. They belong to the same order of existence. Our spirit is our true being. Our senses are but servants of who we really are, as is our capacity for rational thought. Man is not his body. We can lose arms and legs in an accident or be born without them. And yet, nobody will deny we are still human. The human spirit that lives in the body determines our personality, and the physical quality of our bodies has nothing to do with that. It is the human spirit that allows us to come into contact with God.

Science is nothing more than a pile of ordered facts that have been discovered through our senses, a false god of our educational system. Centuries ago, people made sensory idols from wood, stone or metal because they longed for God. Man still longs for God, but instead of creating idols from wood, stone or metal, he fashions them from sensory knowledge. He still worships the works of his own hands. As long as he refuses to let the revelation of God enter into his life he has no other choice.

Science does not explain the why of creation, nor does it tell us why mankind was created. Science cannot discover the human spirit or find life, because its knowledge is limited to what the senses bring to the brain. Science cannot answer the questions as to why there is life or where mankind is headed. It can only make educated guesses. Science does not answer the ancient hunger for God, nor can it explain why man believes in life after death. Modern science is the blind spawn of our senses.

It is a telling fact that a person is only called a philosopher once she he tries to discover something that cannot be interpreted by the senses. G. Hegel’s theory about the non-existence of God, called “absolute idealism” was formulated because he was unable to find God. The limitations of his sensory knowledge drove him to deny the existence of God.
Sensory knowledge is useless when it discusses God, the spirit and the beginning of all things. It is unable to see that both God and man are spiritual beings, and yet it recognizes man's hunger for God. This hunger has led to a multitude of religions based on sensory knowledge, starting with idolatry and ending with philosophy, all in a search for the supernatural. The senses cannot see or register the workings of the spirit. That leads people to the conclusion that God does not have a personality, but rather a brainless, thoughtless universal power. This impersonal god is called love, goodness or perfection.

Philosophy then persuades people to doubt the reality of Satan and sin. To get rid of the reality of sin, they openly declare that there is no God, no sin and no judgment. It is an attempt to attain spiritual peace while bypassing Christ's offering. By denying sin, people try to rid themselves of the Christ who died so we could be saved and thereby denying any and all dependency on a higher power.

Saint Paul's letters reveal what God wants to give us in His Son Jesus Christ, the complete redemption from the burdens of our sins. His resurrection has freed us from the power of Satan and made us a part of His family. He resides in us through the presence of the Holy Ghost. And finally, when life on Earth will come to an end, He offers us a place in His Father's heaven.

The limits of sensory knowledge are becoming more evident. Its theories and speculations are wanting:

- Denial of the origin of creation leads to a myriad of theories to fill in the blanks left open by our sensory knowledge, because without a Creator, everything must have created itself;

- The origin of life cannot be explained through sensory knowledge and Darwin's theories must in due course be replaced by other theories to cover the inability of science to offer a satisfactory explanation;

- The origin of complex movements in the universe cannot be explained by the Big Bang theory because there is simply too much diversity in their movement;

- Sensory knowledge does not know the origins of sin and simply denies it, which in turn leads to even greater depravity of understanding.

Jesus said to the Samaritan woman, 'God is Spirit and those who worship Him, have to worship in spirit and truth.' Man could not worship in spirit if he himself was not a spiritual being. It is hard for us to accept that spiritual things are just as real as physical things. We accept that God is a Spirit, but have never fully grasped what that means. A spirit has a personality but not necessarily a physical body. Most can imagine that angels and demons are spirit beings. Often artwork portrays the spiritual in physical form we can identify with, such as Cupid, the winged Roman mythological god of desire with his bow and two kinds of arrows. But most of us cannot imagine how man can also be spiritual. We cannot see our spirit anymore than we can see our mind. We cannot see the power responsible for ebb and flow, and yet we see what it does.

God is Spirit, and as a spirit, He created matter. We know that he is not only a spirit but a spirit of Love. We also know that he created the universe through the Word. He spoke and it came into being. We know that man is a spirit and belongs to the same order as God, that he exists forever and that he can live in a body. He is able to partake of God's nature and his highest level of being is realized through contact with God. God longed for him, loved him and wished to give him His own nature.

We now know that spiritual things are just as real as physical things and that man's greatest powers are spiritual in nature, because man is a spirit. Love and hate, hope and faith are spiritual powers. They are the powers that rule this world. After the fall from grace, man fell from the spiritual realm down to the physical. When he was forced to leave God's presence, he was dependent on his senses, which then became the source of all his knowledge. The knowledge man possesses today came to him through the five channels of the senses that are in contact with the physical reality, but he will be unable to find God using only his senses.

God, who is Spirit, can only reveal Himself to spiritual beings. He can show Himself to our spirit through the Word of the Bible. We hear someone read the Word of God or read it for ourselves. That which is read must be seen and absorbed by our mind and in some inexplicable way it affects our spirit. It fills a need. Listening to what the Bible has to tell us changes our spirit. That change is known as rebirth. Before we are reborn, our spirit is in line with our old spirit. Once our spirit has been remade through the presence of the Holy Ghost, our mind and spirit become aligned. We understand God in our spirit the way we understand the physical world with our senses. Now we know that we can approach God, meet Him and speak to Him in prayer.
Scientists can be experts in both sensory knowledge and revelation knowledge. For people limited only by sensory knowledge, it has always been difficult to accept spiritual things. That is because we live in the realm of the physical body. Sensory knowledge cannot find God and would not recognize God if it found Him. Spiritual knowledge is created by the miracle of Holy Ghost, God's Spirit that He has promised to everyone who is reborn. The spiritual does not negate the physical, rather it completes it.

Above, we have been able to read that most of the progress of sensory knowledge lies within the realm of theories, speculation and experiments. The spiritual scientist does not occupy himself with theories; he rather sticks to the facts. The spiritual scientist knows that God exists; he has found Him and knows Him. He knows how everything was created, why man was created and, thus, what the source and purpose of life is. He has discovered that man is a spiritual being, just like God, and that he exists eternally. Mankind was created to live with God forever. When he manages to rid himself of the consequences of the Fall, man, who belongs to God's order of being, can receive God's nature.

It is a sad fact that the spirit of man has received so little attention. Immense amounts of money are spent on developing the mind and the body, but no institution has ever dedicated itself to the education and development of the human spirit. The spirit is the part of the human body that will live forever. Before the Fall, the spirit ruled the body and the senses provided the mind with all its knowledge.

In contrast to rational knowledge, wisdom comes through the human spirit. The ability to use knowledge wisely comes from the source of all wisdom, God through the human spirit. Lack of faith is largely the product of the senses. Faith cannot be acquired through our rational abilities, no matter how hard we try. Faith is born in the human spirit. Other qualities that are born in the human spirit are love, fear, courage, happiness and peace. It is through the power of the human spirit that mankind has created civilization.

The human spirit is aware of its orphaned state and sensory man tries to fill the void through materialism, alcohol, drugs or sex. Jesus came to answer the call of the spirit. To that end, the four gospels were written from sensory knowledge. To call the unbelievers to faith, the writers report the sayings and miracles of Jesus, they saw His capture and conviction as an innocent man, and they saw Him die and be placed in a grave. They also saw Him after He was resurrected and were physically able to touch His wounds. By eating something, He proved that it was His physical body that had been resurrected. For forty days, they saw Him appear in several occasions and finally they saw Him being carried up to the Heavens from the Mount of Olives. These are all facts that were written down and confirmed by witnesses. After testifying about these wonders all of his followers were put to death. Would they have testified to things that never actually happened? Would they all have been willing to proclaim these truths knowing well its consequences?

After the facts are presented in the Gospels, the New Testament contains books that show the revelation of the spirit. Holy Ghost was poured out over those who believed in Jesus, the Christ. After his radical conversion, the apostle Paul was given revelation knowledge. He was freed from the slavery of sin that had imprisoned man since the Fall. This was the wondrous phenomenon of rebirth. Paul accepted Jesus Christ as his Redeemer and Lord, and God made him a new creation, filled with Holy Ghost, allowing him to take on God's nature.

You can also experience Paul's miracle if you choose. After your conversion, your mind, which is dominated by the senses, will be renewed by the Word of God, to align it with your renewed spirit. Your spirit will be filled with Holy Ghost, which will control your thinking and rule your personality. This rebirth will give your filled spirit its proper place. You will no longer live through sensory knowledge but through the Word of God. The words of Jesus, “Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeded out of the mouth of God,” will become a reality. You will read and contemplate what the Bible has to say to you. To develop your faith, you will seek the company of fellow believers that can help you grow in your faith. The miracle of faith will happen within you and even when you read parts of the Bible that mean little to your mind, they will still nourish your spirit. As a result, you will be strong and powerful in your spiritual life.

I wish you much success in your quest for God. One thing is certain: He will let you find Him if you really look for Him.

About the Author

Robin de Ruiter has been publishing since the Eighties and is one of the most translated Dutch authors. His books have appeared in over 100 countries. He is well-known internationally, for years, for his exceptional ability to explore. He has an unequalled understanding of geopolitics and an exceptional intellectual library of factual knowledge. His direct international connections and knowledge of languages, he speaks seven foreign languages fluently, give him access to an unprecedented number of informational sources.

De Ruiter writes all of his books in Spanish. His publications are especially exceptional because they demonstrate a clear and unprejudiced vision. Books that show such extraordinary factual knowledge, insight, and coherence, have become almost inconceivable in many countries.

De Ruiter was born in Enschede (Netherlands) on March 6, 1951, where he spent most of his adolescence. As a young boy he relocated with his parents to Spain, where he studied (among other things) theology, history and Spanish, graduating in 1974 and 1975. Presently he leads a secluded life in Ecuador.

De Ruiter started his career as a freelance writer for Spanish magazines in the field of politics and religion. As a result of these publications, he made a name for himself both in Latin America and Europe. His book The Hidden Power behind the Terrorist Attacks of September 11, 2001 gained him even greater success and exposure to a worldwide audience. In the Netherlands the book was awarded the 2005 annual Frontier Award.

Confessions of a Fashion Model
This book tells the story of Nathalie, a fashion model who has been celebrated for her striking physical beauty. She did shootings for many prestigious magazines and photographers, and she has been booked for important fashion and jewelry shows to the huge fashion catalogs worldwide.

Nathalie did shows for Dior, Cartier, Issey Miyake, Chanel, Kenzo, Comme des Garçons and many other famous designers. She was also booked by “Diners Club” for luxury fashion catalogs which are exclusively made and only available for the high class society.

Many think that fashion models lead a glamorous life. In this book you will learn that not everything is about “glamour” and “fame”. In the Fashion industry there are countless dangers.

After Nathalie became the darling of high ranking politicians, moguls, powerful business executives, famous actors like Keanu Reeves and singers like Julio Iglesias, Royalties and members of some of the richest families of this world like the Rockefellers and Rothschilds, she was drugged for elite sex parties and raped by many of them.
Most modeling agencies are nothing less than whorehouses, and bookers are their pimps. Models are beaten, get their faces cut up or will be killed if they dare to tell the truth. Many of them died falling from a balcony or in other mysterious ways. Other models did disappear before they got the chance to reveal what is going on behind the scenes. They have never been found.

It is very dangerous for young girls and boys to become part of the fashion world. There is no one who protects them. After reading this book, you will understand that the models agencies cannot be trusted. They are the last to protect the young models.

Nathalie was not just a fashion model. Special mind control programs play an important role in the world of fashion. Like many models, Nathalie has undergone “Monarch mind control” programming. This program is able to divide the human psyche into multiple personalities (MPD), all within the same individual. Each personality is able to take over one’s consciousness at any given moment.

Nathalie has been programmed multifunctional. She has unique features to her system of personalities. She not only has standard Monarch programming, one of the multiple personalities (programmed alters) created within Nathalie was a programmed high class Beta sex slave, exclusively for the super rich. The primary function of Beta models is to provide perverted sex and “Sadism and Masochism”.
Her story shows that she has undergone the Delta military programming as well. She has a special knowledge about warfare, all sorts of military weapons, different guns and ammunition. One of her other personalities knows “Secret Codes for Access” to “internal computers” of intelligence agencies.

During her career as a fashion model, Nathalie not only has been used by the sex industry, but she has been used also by several organizations in fields such as the military and intelligence agencies.

Nathalie has gone through a lot. She did not know that the source of many of the incomprehensible events had to do with her programming. She had no idea that she was a programmed Monarch slave. Nathalie woke up at the age of 36, after having flashbacks. Occurrences that she is aware of nowadays were unknown to her in the past. This is reflected in her story.

In this book you will not only gain insights into the world of the Fashion industry, it is also an outstanding piece of information about “Monarch Total Mind Control” programming.

The financial house of Barings was founded in 1762 as “The John and Francis Baring Company“ by Francis Baring, with his older brother John Baring as a mostly silent partner. Their father was had made a fortune in the wool manufacturing trade. Barings grew to importance during the Napoleonic Wars by financing Britain's military campaigns. After Napoleon's downfall, Barings helped arrange France's financial recovery. Known as the sixth great European power during the 19th century, the company was also involved in the American purchase of Louisiana from France in 1803. The Louisiana Purchase was the acquisition by the United States of 2,140,000 km$^2$ of France's claim to the territory of Louisiana. Barings not only refinanced the Bank of England in 1839, they were also involved in the reconstitution of the Rothschild Bank of France in 1849.

Scottish-born Andrew Carnegie (1835-1919) amassed a fortune in the steel industry. He received the financial support he needed to do so from the Rothschilds. In 1901, he sold his Carnegie Steel Company to J. P. Morgan for $480 million. Morgan changed the name Carnegie Steel into U.S. Steel, the world’s first billion-dollar corporation.

Construction of the Suez Canal officially began on April 25, 1859. It opened ten years later on November 17, 1869 at a cost of $100 million paid by the Rothschilds. In 1875, the Rothschilds forced Egypt to sell its shares in ownership of the Suez Canal to the United Kingdom.

The Dulles brothers were not only influential Freemasons, but they also maintained close relations with international banks, especially those representing German interests. With the aid of the influential Edward Mandell House and their uncle, the Secretary of State Robert Lansing, the Dulles brothers were given their positions in the State Department of the United States before the start of WW1. Afterwards, they were also introduced to the Round Table, where they both became leaders of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR). The influence of Allen Dulles became larger in 1920 when he was appointed First Secretary of the American Embassy in Berlin. At the same time his brother, John Foster Dulles, rose to the position of chairman of Sullivan & Cromwell, a collaboration of the Bank of England and J.P. The Rothschilds never forgave the Czars of Russia for both continually opposing their request to set up a central bank in Russia, as well as their support of President Lincoln during the Civil War. Many years later the Rothschilds financed the October revolution 1917. They ordered the execution by the Bolsheviks of Czar Nicholas II and his entire family. Among others, the killing was designed to show the world what happens if you ever attempt to cross the Rothschilds.

This the most often cited official date of the end of the civil war. There were battles and skirmishes after this date, but this is generally considered the official end of the civil war.

The Bank of England was founded in 1694 and there were 1300 shareholders. In 1946 the Bank of England was nationalized, which might seem at first sight to be a far reaching measure, but actually made little difference in practice. Although the Bank is officially state-owned, the fact is that the British money supply is entirely in private hands. The bank is largely controlled by the Rothschilds.

The assassination of Kennedy was a warning to future presidents who would think to eliminate the U.S. debt by eliminating the Federal Reserve’s control over the creation of money. Executive Order 11110 was never repealed by any U.S. president through an executive order and is still valid.
According to those who already knew Oswald before the horrible weekend in November 1963, he often talked about “an international group of people” who had allowed the “devil” to take possession of them, so that he could serve the King of the demons. The children of Satan about which he talked were actually “high senior civil servants” from many countries who supported a secret world power.

They remained good friends and off-the-record confidants until President Kennedy’s death.

The former President George Bush senior was director of the CIA before he became president. When one has a good look at the CIA during his term of office, one discovers the true character of this man. During his term in office there was talk of direct ties between the CIA and drug cartels, of international arms trade and of networks of hired assassins who were financed throughout the world by the Illuminati.

Quote from Robert Hemphill, Credit Manager of the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta, from the preface of 100% Money by Irving Fischer.

For simplicity the term banks is used. In reality central banks create money, both printed and digital, and loan this money to commercial banks, which in turn loan this money to the companies and private individuals.

If you don’t have a mortgage, you have to pay rent. In the end, the only difference is that you have to pay rent until you are actually dead.

The Global Environment Facility (GEF) was established in October 1991 as a $1 billion pilot program in the World Bank system to assist in the protection of the global environment and to promote environmental sustainable development.

In Rio de Janeiro the GEF was restructured and moved out of the World Bank system to become a permanent, separate institution. The decision to make the GEF an independent organization enhanced the involvement of developing countries in the decision-making process and in implementation of the projects. Rothschild’s World Bank has served as the Trustee of the GEF Trust Fund and provided administrative services.

Other money for the GEF bank is printed by Rothschilds International Monetary Fund (IMF) "out of thin air", and with the guarantee of our governments.

Special Drawing Rights (SDR) is an international reserve asset, created by the IMF to supplement its member countries' official reserves. Least Developed Countries (LDC) is the name given to a country which, according to the United Nations, exhibits the lowest indicators of socioeconomic development, with the lowest Huamna Development Index ratings of all countries.

Our elite can also take state owned assets like utilities as payment against the debt until they eventually own the nation states.

Euthanasia has been legal in Holland since 2001 in cases where patients are suffering unbearable pain due to illness with no hope of recovery. It is available in most hospitals. Dutch euthanasia is usually carried out by administering a coma-inducing sedative, followed by a drug to stop breathing and cause death. Patients who wish to be euthanized, must convince two doctors they are making an informed choice in the face of unbearable suffering.

It is remarkable also that Anthrax, which surfaced in the United States after the attacks of September 11, 2001, originates from the United States Army’s “Chemical Biological Warfare Laboratory” in Fort Detrick near Frederick, Maryland.

Animal lymph is a nutritive fluid, in animal bodies; a transparent, colorless, alkaline fluid, consisting of plasma, resembling that of the blood, and of corpuscles, like the white blood corpuscles. It is well known that “animal lymph” used for vaccination has been a fruitful cause of the spread of disease in Europe.

The food industry is almost entirely controlled by our elite. Through mergers, takeovers and aggressive expansion methods they have enforced their grip to the international market and our food. Today they control how our foods are grown, produced and what we eventually get to eat.

Skinner’s ideas would be widely implemented by educators in the Nineteen Sixties, Seventies and Eighties as Values, Clarification and Outcome-Based Education.

Today schools have become immense, anonymous places to store kids.

By doing this, the Illuminati have created huge learning problems that inevitably lead to what is commonly known as “Attention Deficit Disorder” and the drugging of millions of children with the powerful drug “Ritalin”.

The General Education Board (GEB) was incorporated by an act of the United States Congress. Approved January 12, 1902, the GEB was endowed by John D. Rockefeller, Sr., for the purpose of establishing an educational laboratory to experiment with early innovations in education.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching was founded in 1905.

Presently UNESCO occupies the responsibility for the upbringing of youth along the lines of the New World Order. The global elite’s control over the entire learning process from cradle to grave gives them great ability to shape children’s frames of reference.

Edward Lee Thorndike was trained by the Illuminati in new psychology and pioneered what later became known as “Animal Psychology”. Thorndike’s primary assumption was that man is an animal, that his actions are actually always reactions, and that he can be studied in the laboratory in much the same way as an animal might be studied. Thorndike equated children with the rats, monkeys, fish, cats and chickens upon which he experimented in his laboratory and was prepared to apply what he found there to learning in the classroom. He extrapolated “laws” from his research into animal behavior which he then applied to the training of teachers, who took what they had learned to every corner of the United States and ran their classrooms, curricula and schools on the basis of this new “educational” psychology.

The Greek word translated as boy prostitutes may refer to catamites, i.e. boys or young men who were kept for purposes of prostitution, a practice not uncommon in the Greco-Roman world. In Greek mythology this was the function of Ganymede, the “cupbearer of the gods,” whose Latin name was Catamitus. The term translated Sodomites refers to adult males who indulged in homosexual practices with such boys.
Paedophilia is fundamentally connected to Satanism.

Savile was one of the first in the entertainment field known as “disc jockeys” who emerged with the 1960s music and cultural explosion known as the “Swinging Sixties“. His biggest claim to fame was the BBC show Jim’ll Fix It. This was a programme in which children wrote in to describe what they would most like to do or who they would most like to meet. The programme then “fixed it" for the children chosen to take part.

The publiciations of Lucifer’s Trust (1922) formed the starting point of all modern New Age Movements.

Fritz Springmeier mentioned in his “Monarch” book a few examples of Monarch slaves: Roseanne Barr, John Travolta, Tom Cruise, Bette Middler, Marilyn Monroe and many others. The Illuminati also had quite a number of so-called slave traders, for instance Frank Sinatra, Peter Lawford and Bob Hope. And the programmers were and are, among others, Anton Lavey (Satanic Church), Jerry Lee Lewis, Kris Kristofferson and Willie Nelson.

The global drug trade is an important instrument that the Illuminati use to get as many people as possible hooked on drugs and then deprive them of their rights by making the possession and use of these drugs illegal. Their goal is to create a weak and unprotected society, and to achieve this goal they deliberately create confusion and fear.

As mentioned earlier, the leading Illuminati families are also behind the global drug trade.

Although the messages are recorded in very high, inaudible frequencies, they do penetrate the subconscious.

Zodiac Productions created the Californian Maranatha Concern, the aim of which was to capture youngsters with positive-sounding rock band names and lyrics. While, in fact, Satanic words were secretly hidden in the lyrics.

For the sake of completeness we point out that both Muslims and Christians believe that the “false messiah” will appear in the name of Jesus Christ.
